$10,000 LOOT IN HOLDUP IN UNIVERSITY CITY HOME

Two Men Seize Maid and Force Way Into Residence of Mr. and Mrs. John Basset Jr.

TAKE ONLY DIAMONDS, REJECT OTHER STONES

Householder and Wife Ordered Upstairs and Compelled to Open Safe Containing Valuables.

Two men held up Mr. and Mrs. John Basset Jr. and a maid, in their home at 6834 Waterman avenue, University City, last night, and fled with jewelry valued at $5180 after locking the Bassets in a bedroom. The men took only jewelry containing diamonds, rejecting a number of valuable pieces, and threatened to kill Mrs. Basset if she ever identified them.

The men came to the house at :30 o'clock as the Bassets were finishing dinner. A maid, Edna Stueve, answered the doorbell. One of the men said, "Is Mr. Basset here? We want to see him," and the maid opened the door. One of the men seized her and placed a hand over her mouth to prevent any outcry.

Mrs. Basset(hearing a subdued murmur in the front of the house, came into the living room and said to the maid, "What is it Edna?"

"Just then one of the men jumped out and pushed a revolver against me," she told a reporter. 'He said they wanted the money and jewelry from our wall safe. The other man pointed a revolver at Mr. Basset.

Pair Marched Upstairs.

"Then they marched us upstairs to my bedroom and made us open the safe. They took out all the jewelry and took only that containing diamonds.

List of Stolen Articles.

"The articles they took and their values were: a long platinum bar pin set with three two-carat diamonds and 30 smaller ones, $1000; a platinum ring with a 2¼ carat diamond, a canary yellow diamond on each end and 16 smaller diamonds, $1300; a lavalliere with platinum chain and top set with a 1½ carat diamond in the center and 24 smaller diamonds, $1000; two yellow gold earrings each set with a 2½ carat diamond, $1000; a princess ring set with six sapphires and 15 diamonds, $300; another princess ring set with seven rubies and 15 diamonds, $300; a platinum and gold watch chain, $125; a gold locket, $50; two tie pins, $25 each, and $55 in currency."

"They wanted money at first and insisted we had a lot of it in the safe. However there was only about $35 there. They took that and $5 from my purse and about $15 from a suit of Mr. Basset which was lying on a chair.

"They seemed to know exactly what they wanted, and where it was, because they didn't search any place but my bedroom where the safe is.

"I told them I could identify them if I ever saw them again and they said: 'If you don't shut up and turn around, we'll plug you so full of holes that you won't remember anything.'

"I begged them not to take the jewelry and they said they'd rather have money but they took it anyway.

"Then they locked us in the room and took the maid downstairs to let them out."

The jewelry was not insured, the Bassetts told police, but the house is covered by a burglary policy. They were not sure whether it covered such losses.

The robbers were described as follows:

One was about 80 years old, 6 feet, nine inches tall, weight 170 pounds, light complexion, blond hair, light overcoat, dark blue suit, green hat; the other was said to be about 25, five feet, seven inches tall, weight 150 pounds, light complexion, blond hair, grey suit, grey overcoat, light grey cap. Basset is a retired contractor and builder.

Motorist Asks Directions, Then Robs Five Drivers of $42.

A young man who leaned out the window of an automobile and asked for directions stopped five delivery truck chauffeurs in a 50-minute cruise around the West End

U. S. Flying Clinic To Visit Latin America

Dr. Fred H. Albee to Head Group of Medical Men in Good-Will Project Lasting 17 Days.

By the Associated Press.

SARASOTA, Fla., Dec. 28.—Dr. Fred H. Albee of the Pan-American Hospital, New York, announced here today that plans have been completed by which a group of medical men will conduct a flying clinic in South America and Central America next month.

The clinic will leave New York Jan. 24 and proceed to Miami. From there the airship will be taken over virtually the same route as that flown by Col. Charles A. Lindbergh in his good-will flight.

The itinerary will cover 17 days. According to Dr. Albee, the first air clinic is part of a movement to unite Central and South America professionally with the United States, just as President Hoover has outlined a commercial unity betwen the countries.

At each port visited, the physicians and surgeons will conduct a clinic, either by means of a motion picture film of operations or by actual operations, Albee said. Included in the party will be Albee; Dr. William Sharp, president of the Pan-American Hospital, New York; Dr. Murray Gratz, New York; Dr. George W. Hawley, Bridgeport, Conn., and Alexander H. Ford, director-general of the Pan-Pacific Union, Honolulu.

The itinerary will include a stop for a three-day Pan-American medical congress at Panama City, beginning Jan. 30.

GERMAN RETURNS BIBLE AMERICAN LOST IN ARGONNE

Gives Up Testament Father Took From Body of Fallen A. E. F. Doughboy.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 28.—A New Testament carried into battle by an American soldier who fell in the Argonne is back in this country after years among the effects of a German officer.

The War Department wants to give it to the next of kin of Private Edward C. Nordin. Records show his widow is Mrs. Anna Elizabeth Burnes, 5008 Vincent avenue South, Minneapolis, Minn. Nordin enlisted from Williston, N. D.

In returning the Bible, Baron Hans-George von Studnitz of Berlin, whose father had taken it on the battlefield, recalled the recent return to its owner of a copy of a German Bible which had been taken similarly by an American, and expressed the desire to return the courtesy.

The elder Von Studnitz, he said, was killed by American troops in the Argonne in October. The son requested that the Bible be returned to its owner or his family.

Nordin died on Sept. 28, 1918.

JAPANESE GENERAL MOTORS PLANT BESIEGED BY WORKERS

Labor Troubles Grow Out of Dismissal of 280 Employes During Slump.

By the Associated Press.

OSAKA, Japan, Dec. 28.—Labor troubles growing out of the closing of the assembly plant of the General Motors Corporation of Japan, a subsidiary of the American organization, have developed here.

When the plant was closed recently owing to a depressed market 280 workers were dismissed. They claimed larger dismissal allowances and enlisted the support of many fellow workers.

Joined by members of the Metal Workers' Union they besieged the plant for three days, necessitating police intervention. Nine leaders were arrested but were releasd later.

The plant is to reopen in January.

NEW TROLLEY FARE SCHEDULE TOMORROW

12-Ride Tickets to Be Sold for $1 as Experiment—Children Must Pay 5 Cents.

The new experimental street car fare providing increases in the price of weekly commutation tickets and children's fare will become effective at 3 a. m. tomorrow.

Weekly tickets will cost $1 for 12 rides instead of 90 cents, the rate effective since Aug. 26, and children's fare will be five cents cash, or six tickets for 25 cents. The rate for children has been three cents since 1921.

Ticket holders who have used up their 12 rides still will be entitled to additional rides in the week for five cents, but hereafter they must present their tickets to be punched when paying the fare. The new tickets have 60 spaces on the back for punching five-cent fares, but there is no limit to the number of rides the ticket holder may use at that rate within the time for which the ticket is issued.

The new rate was authorized by the State Public Service Commission to be effective until further order. The Public Service Co. had complained that the rate in effect since Aug. 26 was not producing sufficient revenue. In a statement given out yesterday the company said the rate was failing "by nearly one million dollars a year to produce the return to the company established by the State Public Service Commission."

HOOVERS REMEMBER WILSON'S ANNIVERSARY WITH WREATH

Placed on Tomb With Personal Card of President and Wife.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 28.—President Hoover remembered that today was the seventy-third anniversary of the birth of Woodrow Wilson.

In tribute to the memory of the late President there reposes on the Wilson tomb in the Washington Cathedral a wreath of white carnations bearing the personal card of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Hoover. It was placed there early in the day by Col. Campbell B. Hodges, military aid to the President.

Many other persons also remembered the anniversary of the war President's birth and an unusually large number of pilgrims visited the tomb on Mount St. Albans.

One wreath of evergreen was from the Woodrow Wilson Foundation of the League of Nations and another of white lilies was sent by the Democratic Women's Luncheon Club of Philadelphia.

SAYS DEPRESSION FORCED CYTRON CO. INTO RECEIVERSHIP

IN BUSINESS FOR 25 YEARS

Gustave Cytron, Its President, Pledges His Personal Assets to Protect Investors.

Real estate depression, lower prices in the bond market, reduced rents, tight money and the stock market crash formed a combination of circumstances which ended the prosperity of the Cytron Mortgage Co. and resulted in the appointment of a Federal receiver, according to former Judge A. B. Frey, attorney for the company.

Although counsel for a dissatisfied minority stockholder has estimated that purchasers of Cytron second mortgage bonds will lose $2,000,000 or more, Frey insists that under the Federal receivership sufficient assets should be salvaged to insure a "minimum of loss" to bond holders. "Officers of the company tell me that only $1,500,000 worth of Cytron bonds are outstanding, most of them amply secured by self-supporting properties," Frey said.

Gustave Cytron of 4501 Maryland avenue, president and founder of the company, who built up one of the largest businesses in second mortgage bonds in St. Louis with the slogan, "We have paid in full since 1905," had pledged his entire fortune, borrowing $25,000 on his life insurance and several thousand dollars on family jewelry in an effort to save the compan, and protect investors, Frey said.

M. H. Rodemyer in Charge.

Cytron and the members of his family who are officers and directors of the company, owning two-thirds of its stock, were ousted automatically from direction of the company's affairs yesterday when M. H. Rodemyer, real estate dealer and a director of the St. Louis Real Estate Exchange, took charge of the offices at 110 North Ninth street, as receiver.

Rodemyer's appointment by Federal Judge Davis Friday served to stem the flood of suits against the company and silence numerous threats of litigation and foreclosure proceedings against Cytron properties. Rodemyer will set to work to determine the equity of bond holders in the Cytron properties which include about 20 apartments among them the Kenrick Square, Lindworth, Greystone and Convent Garden apartments.

Meanwhile, it is expected, no action will be taken on three receivership suits which were filed in the State Circuit Court inasmuch as it has been the custom to permit Federal proceedings to take precedence. An involuntary petition in bankruptcy, also filed Friday in Federal Court, may result in the appointment of a trustee who would supplant the receiver.

How Company Operated.

The Cytron company, like other companies engaged in the second mortgage business, operated by lending money on buildings, mostly large apartment buildings, previously encumbered by substantial first mortgages, and also by purchasing mortgaged properties against which it issued second mortgages.

Such mortgages were re-sold on specific properties in the form of second mortgage bonds of small denomination, usually $500 or $1000, to investors seeking higher interest than offered by first mortgage bonds and willing to assume a correspondingly greater risk.

The second mortgage dealer usually makes a profit by requiring the borrower of money to accept a substantial discount under the face value of the mortgage and by charging the borrower a higher rate of interest than he allows the bondholder, to whom he sells in smaller denominations.

When the dealer buys incumbered property, he can make a profit by issuing a second mortgage for more than the price he paid or for more than the value of his equity after allowing for the first mortgage.

If the property fails to produce sufficient income to meet interest charges, the bonds become due by default and subject to foreclosure. Under foreclosure, the second mortgage may become worthless because of depreciation in property value.

Through most of its 25 years in business, the Cytron company was a family corporation, but last July

FRENCH NOTE DIMS HOPE OF 5-POWER PACT AT LONDON

OFFICIAL U. S. VIEW OF IT IS OPTIMISTIC

In Background Lies Possibility of Triple Agreement by America, Britain and Japan.

By CHARLES G. ROSS,
Chief Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 28.—France's note on the coming naval arms conference at London, which was delivered to the State Department tonight, has dimmed the bright prospect created by the Hoover-MacDonald conversations of last October. The hope that out of the conference will come a five-Power accord has by no means been abandoned, but the official expression of the hope is now tempered with a palpable uneasiness.

Two interpretations of the French memorandum are possible. One is that it represents a position from which there will be no retreat. The other is that it was issued for maneuvering purposes.

If the first view is correct, the note places an irremovable stumbling block in the way of a five-Power agreement. If the second is correct, a formula may be found that will satisfy France and at the same time permit some tangible accomplishment in the direction of the Hoover-MacDonald aims.

Official View Optimistic.

Officially, it is the opinion of the Hoover administration that there is no reason for discouragement. The memorandum, according to this optimistic view, is but the restatement of an attitude which already was well known. With a show of confidence, the statement was made today in some official quarters that the French note was largely for "home consumption" and that France, in the end, would subscribe to a general pact.

Not all of the comment was of this hopeful character. One prominent Senator expressed the view that the French note had destroyed all possibility of a five-Power understanding along the lines desired by President Hoover and Prime Minister MacDonald. The most that could be expected, he thought, was an agreement to suspend capital ship building for five or 10 years—an agreement which, while permitting the conference to make a show of accomplishment, would yet fall far short of the announced objectives of the conference.

French Demands.

The French memorandum appears on its face to be more than a gesture. It is difficult to see how there can be any substantial measure of retreat from the thesis there announced.

The note has the characteristic French lucidity; it is blunt and it contains a vein of delicate irony. It is in keeping with the French refusal to participate in the Geneva conference of 1927. The points which it stresses—an unwillingness to be bound by mathematical naval ratios, the relation of land and naval armaments, the idea that the proper forum for the settlement of the armament reduction problem is the League of Nations—all these are salient features of established French policy.

The irony in the note is the unmistakable. An American President was the foremost influence in establishing the League of Nations. France now takes its stand on the covenant of the League and in effect invites the United States to do likewise. But the United States is committed against the League. The United States prefers the Kellogg pact.

A Touch of Irony.

France gently suggests that the United States would have made out a better case for the Kellogg pact, as against the League, if the United States had been willing to prove its faith by foregoing the prompt execution of its latest cruiser program. It is evident, says France in effect, that even the United States does not believe the Kellogg pact is a sufficient guaranty of national security.

The French note has shown some of the difficulties in the path of our negotiators at the conference to begin in London on Jan. 21. Consummate skill and patience will be needed to bring for that an achievement comparable to the high expectations aroused in this country and Great Britain.

The picture is not without its

Donation by Commonwealth Fund of New York Makes Possible Inquiry on a Scale Never Before Attempted.

A $250,000 gift from the Commonwealth Fund of New York was announced yesterday by Chancellor Throop of Washington University to undertake a program of trachoma research on a scale never before undertaken.

Trachoma, an infectious disease of the conjunctiva or inside of the eyelid and the cornea which shuts off the cornea or transparent "window" of the eye with opaque scar tissue, is described as the worst world scourge among the eye diseases. It is estimated that 20,000 persons in Missouri have the disease, and known that the State pays $200,000 a year in pensions to persons blinded by trachoma.

In this light, Chancellor Throop considered the gift to the medical school of immense importance to Missouri. The university expects to co-operate with the State and Federal public health services, which operate a trachoma hospital at Rolla and have made distinct advances in study of the disease and toward controlling its spread.

Institute to Open in Fall.

The research in trachoma and allied diseases will be conducted at Oscar Johnson Institute, which will be completed next September at Kingshighway and Euclid avenue. The university was notified of the Commonwealth Fund's award precisely a year after the $500,000 memorial Christmas gift of Mrs. Oscar Johnson, her sons and her daughter for the building of the institute.

Research will be directed by Dr. Harvey J. Howard, director of the Institute and of McMillan Hospital, and professor of ophthalmology in the School of Medicine.

"Dr. Howard spent 12 years in establishing the science of ophthalmology in China, where he estimates there are 100,000,000 cases of trachoma," said Chancellor Throop. "He probably knows more about it than any other man living.

"His program, as submitted to the Commonwealth Fund, was made the basis of the grant without material change. There will be nothing else in the world that begins to compare with it."

Authority for the grant was obtained by Miss Barbara S. Quin, director of research grants, and Barry C. Smith, general director, at $50,000 a year for five years. The board indicated that it would be inclined to consider a further grant at the end of the period on a basis of demonstrated results and continued need.

Harkness Foundation.

The Commonwealth Fund was established some years ago by Edward S. Harkness Sr. and is sometimes known as the Harkness Foundation. It is devoted to international promotion of health, but primarily in the United States. It has worked for child welfare in Austria and lately has contributed, 50-50 with local authorities toward the establishment of rural hospitals under the direction of Dr. Lester J. Evans, who graduated from Washington University School of Medicine in 1921.

"Isolated scientists in different parts of the world," said Dr. Howard, "have been working sporadically and alone on the trachoma problem, many times repeating what someone else had done and discarded as on the wrong track. The isolated worker also faced the difficulty of sooner or later being confronted with a situation which required technical skill or experience which he did not possess, so he was compelled to discontinue his work.

For Concentrated Study.

"I firmly believe that the time has come when we should stop these desultory, isolated-worker methods and attack the trachoma problem as a great engineer would attack a problem of flood control; that is, bring together a group of scientific workers who, by their training, experience and enthusiasm, are able to tackle it from all side at once, not repeating what already is known, but starting where the last individual worker has left off and going on from there. By intimate co-operation, by intelligent co-ordination and by adequate financial backing such a group of scientists ought to accomplish something important."

Dr. Howard plans to bring together 10 outstanding scientific workers, each specially prepared to attack a specific phase of the problem. The bacteriological phase was begun more than a year ago by Dr. Charles Weiss, who is checking on the identification by the late Hideyo Noguchi of "bacterium granulosis" as the cause of trachoma.

Noguchi, isolating these bacteria

NEW AMBASSADOR

SENATOR FREDERIC M. SACKETT.

SENATOR SACKETT ENVOY TO GERMANY

Kentuckian Selected by Hoover to Succeed Ambassador Schurman.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 28.—Senator Frederic M. Sackett (Rep.) Kentucky, has been selected by President Hoover to be United States Ambassador to Germany.

Sackett's name was forwarded to Germany early today by the President for the usual procedure of acceptance. While Mr. Hoover made no announcement of his choice it was learned tonight at the State Department that Sackett was slated to go to Germany succeeding Ambassador Schurman.

He is the second Senator chosen by the President to fill a high diplomatic office. Walter E. Edge, Republican Senator from New Jersey, recently resigned to become Ambassador to France.

Sackett is an intimate friend of the President. He served in the Food Administration organization of Mr. Hoover during the war.

Sackett is just completing his first term in the Senate and recently announced his candidacy for renomination.

His selection by Mr. Hoover to the important Berlin post solves a menacing Republican situation in Kentucky, while it fills an important vacancy in the diplomatic corps.

The Kentucky Senator in his one term had attained membership on the powerful Finance Committee, and was also chairman of the Republican Steering Committee. Representative Robsion of Kentucky has been regarded as a potential candidate against Sackett for the Republican nomination in the primaries to be held next spring. As a result of the appointment, it is thought Robsion will enter the senatorial race in Kentucky.

U. S. SELECTS 24 WOMEN AS CENSUS SUPERVISORS

Only Five Members of the Sex Helped to Take Count in 1920.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 28.—W. M. Steuart, Director of the Census, said today that so satisfactory was the work of the five women who aided in counting the population of the United States in 1920 that 24 already have been appointed as supervisors for the 1930 census, and others probably will be included in the supervisors yet to be selected.

Miss Julie R. Jenney, Syracuse, N. Y., was the first woman to be selected in 1919 and Steuart said that prior to then it was apparently taken for granted that it was a man's job.

"But," Steuart said, "the nineteenth amendment and the World War have changed all that."

SENATE DRYS CLASH OVER STATE OF LAW ENFORCEMENT

"Stand by Hoover," Plea of Jones and Capper Has Nothing to Do With the Case, Borah Says.

REPEATS DEMAND FOR NEW PERSONNEL

Kansan Wants to Wipe Out State Lines and Have U. S. Play Policeman and Prosecutor.

By PAUL Y. ANDERSON,
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 28.—Dissension among dry leaders in Congress over the state of prohibition enforcement raged with fury today, marked by a bitter clash among three of the leading Republican drys in the Senate—Jones of Washington, author of the drastive "five-and-ten" law; Borah of Idaho, outstanding dry campaigner for President Hoover in the last election, and Capper of Kansas.

Jones and Capper made biting reference to Borah's recent attack on the enforcement personnel, Jones declaring that such criticism embarrassed the President and hampered enforcement, and Capper adding that it was uttered for "the edification of the gallery."

Borah responded with a sizzling statement in which he said it was necessary for someone to tell the truth about conditions, and that he purposed to tell it without asking leave of anyone.

He added that "Open saloons are running throughout the country," and that the permit system as administered by the Treasury Department "is a scandal."

Wickersham's Statement.

Criticism of President Hoover's Commission on Law Enforcement for failing to make a report, uttered earlier this week by Borah and Senator Harris (Dem.), Georgia, drew from George M. Wickersham, chairman, the statement that the commission had been ready for some time to make a preliminary report to the congressional joint committee recommended several months ago by the President, but had been waiting for Congress to create the committee. The report, he said, would consist of "certain material, the commission's conclusions respecting administration, reorganization and relief to the courts in regard to certain of the most urgent questions of law enforcement."

Capper, in joining the dry free-for-all, urged the creation of a whole swarm of commissions modeled after the President's. He thinks there should be one for each state and one for each of the larger cities confronted with problems in law enforcement.

Senator Caraway of Arkansas, a Democratic dry, rounded out the controversial chorus by declaring that prohibition enforcement would improve, not because the administration wanted to improve it, but because criticism would compel it to.

Objects to Criticism of Hoover.

Borah's statement earlier this week that prohibition would never be enforced by the present enforcement personnel resulted in an invitation to discuss the situation with the President. Apparently he left the White House satisfied, but the statements of Jones and Capper, criticising the critics of enforcement, stirred him to new wrath today.

Jones declared that "honest differences of opinion" might exist concerning the way in which prohibition should be enforced, and as to whether enforcement is effective, but added that "the airing of these differences, the manifestation of a lack of confidence in our leader, and criticism of his methods, can only divide and weaken our ranks, and hearten the opponents of prohibition." He said the President is "doing his best," and that "we who believe in what he is seeking should not hinder him by criticism of fault-finding."

Other references in Jones' statement to "nagging criticism," and "hampering interference," coupled with the assertion that enforcement is the responsibility of the President, not Congress, was sufficient to arouse Borah's ire. Hardly had he finished reading a copy of the statement than he proceeded to dictate one in reply.

"The cry of 'stand by the Presi-

U. S. AND GERMANY REACH AGREEMENT ON DEBT PAYMENT

Ogden Mills of Treasury Department Explains Terms of Young Plan Will Be Carried Out.

CONGRESS MUST GIVE APPROVAL

Two Types of Claims Satisfied, for Cost of Rhine Army and Those Awarded by Commission.

WASHINGTON, Dec., 28 — An agreement has been reached between the United States and Germany for settlement of all American reparations claims arising out of the war, and will be submitted to Congress for approval.

A statement tonight by Ogden Mills, Acting Secretary of the Treasury, made after announcement at Berlin that negotiations had been concluded, explained that the arrangement would carry out the terms of the Young plan for settlement of all reparation claims against Germany and that it contemplated an abatement of the American Government's portion of the total.

During the Young plan discussions last May, the Mills statement pointed out, the arrangements for dealing with the subject and for the remission of a small portion of the American claims were submitted to a White House conference of members of Congress and officials.

"The State Department and the Treasury Department have for some weeks past conducted conversations with the German Government with a view to drafting a proposed agreement covering payments by Germany to the United States on account of army costs and mixed claims in the annual amounts recommended by the Young committee of experts," it said. "The two Governments are in accord as to the form and terms of such an agreement, but it cannot be definitely concluded until the executive branch of the Government has been so authorized by the Congress.

Will Offer Exact Agreement.

"The purpose of the negotiations was to enable the executive branch of the Government to submit to Congress in definite form an agreement acceptable to the German Government so that the Congress before granting the necessary authority would have before it the form of the agreement.

"The schedule of payments conforms to the annuities proposed by the Young Committee for the United States. From each of the annuities to be received, 40,800,000 Reich marks are to be allocated to the satisfaction of mixed claims and the balance to the satisfaction of our government's claims on account of army costs. This is substantially in accord with the program outlined at the White House conference of May 19, 1929, which was attended by a number of the leaders of both houses of Congress.

"The form of the agreement and the provisions in respect of postponement, generally speaking, follow the agreements heretofore negotiated for the settlement of the debts owed the United States by foreign governments. The execution of this agreement is contingent, of course, upon the coming into effect of the Young plan. In the meanwhile the United States retains all of its existing rights."

Amount of Claims.

Treasury records show that on Sept. 1 the American reparations claims against Germany were considered to amount to $193,936,765 on account of expenditures of the American Army of occupation maintained in Germany after the armistice, and $256,656,213 on account of mixed claims of American citizens and the Government against Germany for war damage of various sorts.

The committee of experts headed by Owen D. Young, who have proposed the now pending plan for dealing with all of Germany's reparation liabilities, proposed to reduce the annuities which the United States would receive. The Treasury Department has stated that this program "represented a postponement rather than a diminution of payment," as the payments were first planned by the original Dawes commission which dealt with the reparations obligations.

The American Government figures now indicate that the total of the reparations represented by army of occupation costs will be reduced 10 per cent by the application of the Young plan but that the mixed claims will be paid in full, and that interest at the rate of 3½ per cent will be paid during the time that is consumed in cancelling the entire obligation.

A Period of 52 Years.

The Young plan contemplates the payment of annuities by Germany to the United States over a period of 52 years beginning Sept. 1, 1929.

While European nations concerned have not taken final steps for the inauguration of the Young plan or for the creation of an international settlement bank, which is a portion of its proposal, it is generally thought that it will be finally effective. Today's statement indicated that the American Government would continue to keep its foreign obligations in independent agreement form, though accepting the amounts assigned for the extinguishment of American claims as provided in the international agreement. The United States was not officially represented in negotiation of that agreement.

it increased its capital and invited in outside stockholders. It offered $1,000,000 of 7 per cent preferred stock, the purchaser of each five shares to receive one share of common stock as a bonus. It advertised that $5,818,180 had been invested in its securities from 1925 to 1928, inclusive, and that $911,875 had been invested during the first five months of 1929. The Cytron family, however, remained in control, with Gustave Cytron as president of the company; Minnie Cytron and Samuel J. Cytron, vice presidents; Stanley L. Cytron, secretary, and Leon J. Leonson, treasurer.

Suits Disclose Difficulties.

First public knowledge of difficulties in the Cytron organization came eight days ago when Edward A. Byrne, holder of a $500 second mortgage bond on the Convent Garden property, sued for a receiver in State court, alleging default and that preferred payment had been made to other bond holders. Attorney Frey declared Byrne's action was unwarranted, but on Monday the company was named co-defendant in a suit for a receivership for the Lindworth property, filed by Mrs. Florence Reinfeld, who alleged that the Cytron company had so managed the property that her investment of $7000 in bonds was endangered.

Three Additional Suits.

Three additional suits were rushed into court Friday. In Federal Court, a minority stockholder filed the suit which resulted in the receivership and three creditors—a plumbing company, an exterminator company and an electrician—joined in an involuntary petition in bankruptcy. A few minutes after the receiver was appointed, another receivership suit was filed in Circuit Court.

The receiver was appointed on the petition of Samuel Klein, minority stockholder, who had invested $26,000 in a block of preferred and common stock. He alleged waste and mismanagement, charging that the company's large sales force was causing a daily financial loss; that assets were incumbered for their actual value; that officers had threatened to sacrifice equities in order to raise cash, and that foreclosures would result in serious loss to stockholders.

Charges Denied.

The belated suit in the State court was filed by S. F. Burman, another minority stockholder, who alleged that the officers were guilty of "gross misconduct;" that they caused the records of the company to be falsified; that they wrote mortgages exceeding the actual value of equities; that they transferred money and property to their own names and to other corporations organized by them, and that "hundreds of bondholders are now penniless and destitute and have lost their life's savings." These charges were denied by Attorney Frey for the company.

The estimate of the probable loss to bondholders was made by Carl Dubinsky of the law firm of Dubinsky & Duggan, which represents Burman and Byrne in their receivership suits. Frey declared there was no basis for this estimate, declaring the company welcomed the appointment of Receiver Rodemyer. "It should put an end to the trivial suits that have been brought in the State courts in an effort to harass the company," he said. "It should stop the threats of other suits in the State courts and the Justice of Peace courts, which would only interfere with working out a settlement."

The Cytron company owns and occupies one of the most imposing buildings in the real estate section. The structure is of the design of a modern neighborhood bank with a two-story pillared stone front.

F. W. Diestelhorst, agent in charge of the Argonne apartments, described as one of the Cytron properties in yesterday's Post-Dispatch, stated last night that the Argonne property was owned by William L. Gladstone and was in no way connected with the Cytron company.

SENATE DRYS CLASH OVER THE STATE OF LAW ENFORCEMENT

dent' has nothing to do with this quesion," he declared. "I presume, of course, that the President wants clean and efficient service, and I say to these Senators that we haven't got that at the present time, and washing your hands with sightless soap in the presence of the President will not bring efficient service. It is necessary to state the facts, and they are going to be stated.

"I assert that the permit system as carried on now is a scandal—that it is being used in such a way as to demoralize the whole enforcement system. And I assert that the enforcement department (Treasury) is responsible for this.

"I further assert that practically open saloons are running in the jurisdiction of District Attorney after District Attorney in this country. I do not mean simply in New York and Chicago; the condition prevails throughout the country.

"I do not assume that you can catch every bootlegger. But the open, flaunting, defiant, persistent disregard of the law, day after day and month after month, with no effort to stop it, calls for discussion. That, in my judgment is the best way to help the President and especially to help the enforcement of the law."

From this and Borah's previous utterances, it appears that he will insist, not only on wholesale changes in the personnel of the enforcement bureau, but also in the personnel of United States District Attorneys throughout the country.

Check on the Nolle Pros.

Apropos of the latter, Attorney-General Mitchell today reminded District Attorneys by a circular letter that there is an 8-year-old rule that no prohibition cases shall be nolle prossed without the consent of the Department of Justice and directed them to observe it. It has been widely disregarded, the prosecutors taking the attitude that they were in a better position to know whether they had good cases than their remote superiors in Washington.

Capper, after expressing the opinion that prohibition has been successful in the small towns and rural districts but unsuccessful in the larger cities, stated that the states and cities should follow the lead of the Federal Government in setting up commissions on law enforcement.

"All the commissions could coordinate their efforts," he said. "In each State and city there would be a clearing house for law enforcement. Information could be gathered, classified, digested and made available for State and local legislative bodies, and for State and local enforcement officers. And their work could be harmonized with that of the Federal Government."

Uncle Sam as Policeman.

From this sweeping proposal, the Kansan went on to the more drastic one that the Federal Government should take over generally the police work and prosecution of criminal offenders now conducted by the states. In this respect he virtually advocated the abolition of state lines. He said:

"Development of modern transportation methods have made it inevitable that Uncle Sam should become more of a policeman. The automobile has largely erased state lines in crime as well as in commerce and travel. Neither our laws, our law enforcement officers nor our court machinery have kept pace with transportation and communication developments.

"As a nation we have been slow to realize and loath to admit that criminal law enforcement is within the scope of the Federal Government. We have hung on like grim death to the cry that as a confederation of states the states and their subdivisions were sufficient to deal with crimes against persons and property; that the Federal Government's connection with law enforcement was largely confined to crimes against the Government itself, such as smuggling, counterfeiting and violation of postal regulations."

Caraway Comments.

While Capper was outlining his revolutionary program, Caraway was indulging in a few ironical observations at the spectacle of his Republican colleagues quarreling over the question of whether a Republican administration was sincerely attempting to enforce the law.

"The prohibition law is going to be more effectively enforced," he said, "not because the enforcement agencies are more sympathetic to the law, but because Senator Borah has exposed the loss of public confidence in the administration, and in its desire to enforce the law. There never has been any doubt in any intelligent man's mind that the laws against the sale of intoxicating liquor, as well as the laws against other crimes, must be enforced.

"There will be a change of front now, I think because Senator Borah has put the situation up to the Republican administration in such emphatic terms that something must be done or further loss of confidence will follow."

From the White House, which seemed to be catching most of the blows from all sides, came nothing. Nor from the various wet agencies in Washington was anything heard—except satisfied chuckles.

GANDHI HEADS NEW MOVEMENT TO FREE INDIA

Resolution by Nationalist Congress Urges Campaign of Civil Disobedience and Boycott.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Dec. 28.—London newspapers today give the utmost prominence to news from the Indian Nationalist Congress working committee regard its adoption of a resolution favoring complete Indian independence, sponsored by Mahatma Gandhi, and including declarations for the boycott of the legislatures and campaigns of civil disobedience.

The papers generally express belief that the congress, if it adopts a too extreme attitude at the plenary sessions opening tomorrow, will lose a lot of its own supporters.

The Daily News today says the congress is not now fighting British rule but is fighting "the facts of history, geography and race—things for which no human being is responsible; which may be unfortunate, but which cannot be ignored or changed by a resolution as though it were a magic spell."

The Daily Mirror says: "The news from India implies our mastery is over. For the sake of ourselves and perhaps more for the sake of millions of natives, we hope it is not true."

The Conservative Morning Post says Gandhi's resolution is open and insolent treason, and a breach of the Indian penal code and adds "if the Indian Government has any sense of pride and prestige it will put the ringleaders on trial."

Indian Leaders Divided as to Stand on London Conference.

By the Associated Press.

LAHORE, India, Dec. 28.—During a six-hour discussion in the Executive Committee of the All-India Congress today Pandit Mohan Malaviya pleaded for participation by the Congress party in the London conference on the India situation, where he said that a constitution on dominion status should be the minimum demand.

Subash Bose, on the other hand, proposed complete severance of British governmental connection and the establishment of a parallel government, the organization of general strikes and a boycott of councils, local bodies and the law courts. Decision was postponed until tomorrow.

Chandra Bose, an extremist leader, today walked out of a meeting of the committee with 24 members of the Bengal Congress party. They returned when the matter in dispute concerning the recent Bengal elections was settled.

Royal Society Head Resigns.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Dec. 28.—Richard Sickert, 69 years old, who was the favorite pupil of James McNeil Whistler, American artist, has resigned the presidency of the Royal Society of British Artists. The membership recently voted down his project of hanging pictures in the society's exhibitions by lot to give young artists a greater chance at recognition. Close friends of Sickert said he had been greatly hurt over the failure of his scheme and the criticism to which it has been subjected during the last year.

MOVE TOWARD UNITY IN CHURCH DISCIPLINE

Episcopalians, Presbyterians and Methodists Confer on Eliminating Differences.

NEW YORK, Dec. 28.—Officers of the Episcopal church announced today that commissions representing their church and the Methodist and Presbyterian churches had held a preliminary conference in New York with a view to aiding the cause of Christian unity through elimination of differences not involving faith or order. A second conference is scheduled to be held in Atlantic City, N. J., on June 2 and 3.

The plan was conceived by the late Episcopal Bishop, Charles Henry Brent of Western New York. As explained by Bishop Edward L. Parsons of California, who headed the Episcopal commission at the recent conference, it is planned to consider the relation of church and State; the authority of the church in moral matters and the discipline for its enforcement; international relations, industry, marriage and divorce, racial relations, and law observance.

$250,000 GIFT FOR TRACHOMA RESEARCH WORK

in trachoma cases in New Mexico, used them to produce an eye irritation in monkeys at the Rockefeller Institute in New York. The hiatus in his demonstration, as Dr. Howard explained, was that not all the ophthalmologists who examined the monkeys believed that the irritation corresponded to trachoma in human beings. The disease itself is not found in animals.

Cultures from Noguchi's strain and from patients of the trachoma clinic are being tested on monkeys and chimpanzees housed on the roof of the medical school dispensary. Dr. Howard paused in his exposition for a footnote on the lamentable idiosyncracies of his chimpanzees, which require not only attention but affection from their nurses and are likely to pine away and die of pure homesickness.

Tracing the Source.

From the point of checking on the Noguchi strain the bacteriological phase of the work will attempt to determine if the disease is caused by any bacteria, or by a filterable virus, unseen through any miscroscope, as in smallpox and yellow fever.

New methods of growing living human tissues in test tubes will be utilized in the cytological phase. From this angle the inclusion bodies found in the human cells in trachoma, will be scrutinized to throw further light on the cause of the disease.

Inclusion bodies are found in the known virus diseases rather than in bacterial diseases, but they differ from the inclusion bodies of trachoma. The question here, explained Dr. Howard, is whether the inclusions are products of a virus, or if they are a protozoic cause of the disease.

Search For a Remedy.

Artificial propagation of body tissue also will be used in chemotherapy experiments, to find a chemical germicide which will destroy the infection but not injure the eye, such as the silver nitrate solution which has minimized the once dreaded "babies' sore eyes" as a cause of blindness.

An immunologist will study the transmission of the disease, in which the common towel is a principal agent. He will investigate the immunity of various individuals and races, and attempt to determine, for example, why trachoma is comparatively rare among Negroes.

In the biochemical phase, one ophthalmologist's theory that a dietary deficiency is a factor in trachoma will be put to the test. Relation of vitamins, minerals and other essentials of diet to the eye's resistance to the infection will be scrutinized.

CHINA TELLS WHY EXTRATERRITORIAL RIGHTS MUST END

Issues Mandate Declaring That After Jan. 1, Foreigners Must Be Tried in Native Courts.

By the Associated Press.

SHANGHAI, China, Dec. 28.—The Nationalist Government took measures tonight to rescind extraterritorial rights of foreign nations in China, effective Jan. 1. This was in spite of the only partial acquiescence of several governments to China's insistence that foreigners be tried in Chinese administered courts, yielding the right to trial by courts in China maintained by their own governments.

The Nationalist Government's Central Political Council ordered the State Council to prepare "practical measures for abolition of extra-territoriality in China." The latter body tonight issued the following mandate:

"In every sovereign state, foreigners as well as its nationals, are equally amenable to its laws and the jurisdiction of its tribunals. This is an essential attribute of sovereignty.

System in Force 80 Years.

"For more than 80 years China has been bound by an extra-territorial system which prevents the Chinese Government from exercising judicial power over foreigners in China. So long as extra-territoriality is not abolished, so long is China unable to exercise full sovereignty.

"For the purpose of restoring her jurisdictional sovereignty, it is hereby declared that on and after Jan. 1, 1930, all foreign nationals in China now enjoying extra-territoriality shall be subject to Chinese jurisdiction. Executive and judicial yuans (departments) are hereby ordered to instruct the ministers concerned to prepare as soon as possible the means to execute this mandate and submit them for the examination of the legislative yuan for promulgation and enforcement."

Not Expected to Enforce Decree.

Foreigners well acquainted with Chinese affairs express the opinion that the Nationalist Government will not attempt to end extra-territoriality Jan. 1 in foregn concessions and settlements of treaty ports, but for the present will restrict enforcement of its mandate to other areas. Later, probably at least one year hence, proclamations may direct the inclusion of foreign concessions and settlements.

The Kuomin News Agency says in a dispatch:

"The Nationalist Government will assume full responsibility for the protection of life and property and other legitimate interests of all foreigners in China in accordance with Nationalist Government laws."

Program of Reform.

Chiang Kai-shek, head of the Nationalist Government, announced today through Kuomin, the official Nationalist news agency, that he had completed a comprehensive program providing for sweeping political reforms in the administration of the Nationalist Government.

The announcement said the program would be made public on New Year's day. At the same time, Chiang issued a statement to the press of China in which he encouraged free and constructive criticism and discussion by newspapers throughout the country of things relating to party and Government affairs.

U. S. Objects to Any but Gradual Relinquishment of Rights.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 28.—The United States Government will take stringent measures to protect the rights of its nationals in China if there is any infringement of their privileges under the present extra-territorial provisions of the Chinese-American treaty.

No official word of the mandate of the Nanking Government decreeing abolition of the privileges had been received at the State Department tonight.

In the absence of Secretary of State Stimson, department officials declined to discuss the nature of the measures which would be taken. It was indicated, however, that the attitude of the American Government was that the consular and mixed courts now operating in China would continue to function despite any decrees of the Nanking Government.

Stimson already has stated that the United States would stand firmly on its attitude toward relinquishment of extra territorial privileges as set forth in a note forwarded to the Chinese Government Aug. 10. That note held that gradual relinquishment of the privileges should be accompanied by the enactment and effective enforcement of a Chinese code of jurisprudence in accordance with modern concepts.

The United States in the same note indicated its willingness to participate with the Chinese in negotiations to devise a method for gradual relinquishment of the extra-territorial privileges, which were accorded in 1844.

NEW YORK UNION LEAGUE CLUB LIFTS BAR AGAINST WOMEN

Tradition of Half Century to Be Shattered With Dining Room and Lounge for Them.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Dec. 28.—The new Union League Clubhouse, Park avenue and Thirty-seventh street, whose completion is expected by the spring of 1931, will make special provision for women guests, who for the first time in the club's history will be given dining privileges.

In the last half century of the club's evistence a woman inside its portal has been at least a rarity. Women were admitted during art exhibitions. But in no case were wives of members allowed the privilege of sharing a meal with their husbands.

Now, however, the old order is changed, even in the case of one of New York's oldest and most conservative institutions. It was announced today the new clubhouse will contain a large and attractive women's dining room on the fourth floor, where there also will be a women's lounge.

127-MILE HIGHWAY PROGRAM PLANNED IN COUNTY IN 1930

Engineer Makes Public System Outlined to the County Court and Supervisory Committee.

COST ESTIMATED AT $2,000,000

One of Most Important Projects Is Paving of Page Avenue Between City Limits and Belt Highway.

A $2,000,000 program for improving 127¾ miles of St. Louis County roads in 1930 with bond funds was made public yesterday by County Highway Engineer Jablonsky, following its submission to an executive meeting of the County Court, of administrative body, and the Road Bond Supervisory Committee, a citizens' advisory group, on Friday. The average allowance per mile is $15,-455.

The program is before the Supervisory Committee for approval, but the county officials are not legally bound by its action. The county recently employed Harland Bartholomew and Earl O. Mills, well-known planners, to draft a comprehensive scheme of highway improvement under the $10,000,000 bond issue voted last year. They will be paid $7500. Jablonsky announced that he had submitted next year's program to Bartholomew and that the latter had said it would, in general, fit in acceptably with the forthcoming comprehensive plan.

Virtually all of the roads to be improved next year are to be paved with concrete, asphalt or bituminous macadam, mostly of a width of 20 feet. In some instances, suburban towns likely will furnish additional widths of pavement. In a few cases it will be necessary to acquire new rights of way for extensions, cutoffs or straightenings. Some of the highways included in the 1930 program will become important main arteries for traffic, while others will offer improved facilities for community traffic.

Township Division.

The mileage of the program, divided by townships, is as follows: Central Township, 43⅛ miles; Bonhomme, 31⅝ miles; St. Ferdinand, 17¾ miles; Carondelet, 15⅝ miles, and Meramec, 20¼ miles. Jablonsky has not announced specific plans as to the nature of the improvement of each road.

The 1929 road program amounted to $2,010,000 for highways which have either been completed or are under contract. Those portions of it which were not finished this year will be done next year in addition to the 1930 program.

One of the most important projects in the 1930 schedule is the paving of Page avenue for six miles, between the city limits and the belt highway being constructed by the State as a northward extension of Denny road. It is contemplated that the State can take over the Page pavement should that route be selected for the projected superhighway between St. Louis and Wentzville by way of a new bridge over the Missouri River northwest of Chesterfield. The State then would provide an equivalent mileage of new road elsewhere for the county.

Another major project will be the pavement of Big Bend boulevard for seven and three-quarters miles, between Newport avenue, Webster Groves and Denny road, and for two and a quarter miles between Barrett's Station road and Valley Park. This will provide a paved artery from Delmar boulevard, University City, to the Meramec River at Valley Park, since there is pavement now between Delmar and Newport and a contract was awarded this year for paving between Denny and Barrett's Station.

Outstanding Sections.

Other outstanding projects are:

North and South road, between the northern and southern limits of University City, 1⅝ miles.

Lockwood avenue, in Webster Groves, from Big Bend boulevard to Berry road (part of a route to extend over Adams avenue, Kirkwood); 2 miles.

Ballas road, Big Bend boulevard to Olive Street road, 7⅝ miles, plus a ⅝-mile extension northward to Craig road. This involves establishment of a new main road between Big Bend and Manchester road, to serve the growing Osage Hills section of Kirkwood; this will be routed over Highland avenue, now a picturesque lane, and a new right of way.

Forsythe boulevard, Clayton, a ⅝-mile cutoff extending the street from North and South road (Meramec avenue) west to Ladue road.

Ladue road, North and South road (Meramec avenue, Clayton) to Ballas road; 5⅝ miles.

Laclede Station road, between Manchester and Clayton roads; 1½ miles. This road also is being extended through Webster Groves and Maplewood, between Gravois and Manchester roads, and the whole project will establish a badly needed direct route from this suburban section to Clayton and environs.

Airport road, a new name and route, to serve Lambert-St. Louis Field, from Natural Bridge road at Bridgeton to the eastern limits of Ferguson, via Kinloch Park; 4¼ miles.

Marshall road, between Big Bend boulevard, Kirkwood, and Seventh street and St. Louis avenue, Valley Park, largely over a new location; 2¾ miles.

Woods Mill road, between Manchester road at Manchester and Olive Street road; 6¼ miles.

Meramec Station road, between Manchester road at Manchester and the northern limits of Valley Park; 2⅞ miles. This road is paved through Valley Park and other roads to the south are to be improved for a link to Fenton.

Geyer road, Kirkwood, between Missouri Pacific Railroad and the projected new State Highway at about Watson road; 1¾ miles.

A scenic Eureka-to-Monarch route, in the western part of the county, as follows: Alt avenue ("Old State road"), Eureka to Glencoe, 3⅝ miles; Woods avenue, Glencoe to Manchester road, 2⅝ miles; Eatherton road, Manchester road to Monarch, 5⅞ miles. The north end of this presumably will be connected with the State's projected superhighway near Chesterfield and the south end will connect with the State's projected Watson-Antire route.

Wild Horse road, a well known scenic route, between Olive Street and Eatherton roads; 6 miles.

Short Sections Contemplated.

Other roads on the program and their mileages are:

Graeser, Olive Street to Ladue, 1¼ miles; Brown, Natural Bridge to St. Charles, 1¼; Hanley, Page to St. Charles, 1⅛; Gratiot, Big Bend to Ozark Trail, Shrewsbury, ⅝; Midland, Spring to Ashby, in Vinita Park and Overland, 3¼; Wilshusen, Big Bend to Murdock, Shrewsbury, ⅜; Lay, Clayton to Manchester, 2¼; St. Louis, Kienlen to city limits, ⅝; Woodson, Olive Street to Page, 1; and Midland to St. Charles, ¾; Lucas & Hunt, Natural Bridge to Melrose, 1; Litzsinger, Lay to North and South, 1½; Jennings Station, Natural Bridge to Melrose, 1, and Melrose to Florissant, 1⅛; Dorsett, State's belt highway to Fee Fee, 1⅛; Fee Fee, Dorsett to Midland, ⅞. McKibbon, St. Charles to Natural Bridge, 1⅜; Hall's Ferry, Parker to Patterson, 3⅜; Florissant, Lucas and Hunt to Chambers, 1⅜; Charbonnier, Shackleford to Aubuchon, 3⅛; Douglas, Accommodation to Hall's Ferry, 1⅞; Accommodation, Sinks to Jamestown, 1½; Baumgartner, Heintz to Lemay Ferry, 2¼; Telegraph, from south end of improved stretch to Christopher, 3½; McKenzie, Gravois to Reavis Barracks, ⅝; Tesson Ferry, Gravois to Butler Hill, 5⅛; Denny, Geyer (at Sunset Country Club) to Gravois (at Sappington), ½; Hibler, Woods Mill to Ballas, 3⅛; Vandover, Antire to Smizer Mill, 1⅛; Smizer Mill, Vandover to town of Fenton, 2⅝; Kehr's Mill, Clayton to Manchester, 1¼; Ballwin, Manchester to Kiefer Creek, 2⅜; Kiefer Creek, Ballwin to Drake Station, 1⅛; Centaur, Centaur Station to Eatherton, 1⅛; Long, Wild Horse to Olive Street, ⅜.

Winding up the 1929 program, the County Court awarded the following improvement contracts last Thursday: Laclede Station road, Big Bend boulevard to River des Peres at the northern limits of Webster Groves, including a 100-foot bridge, 40 feet wide, over the river, 20 feet of concrete for .3 of a mile, Shockley Construction Co., St. Louis, $30,380; Birdie avenue and Brown road, between Natural Bridge road and St. Charles road at St. John's Station, 1.2 miles of 20-foot bituminous macadam, Bangert Bros. Construction Co., Ferguson, $28,903; Bellefontaine, Church and Coal Bank roads, between the Burlington Railroad and Larimore, 6175 feet of 14-foot water-bound macadam, James T. McMahon Construction Co., St. Louis, $24,270.

Regret of Mary Jane, and of "J. C." Is That Mother Who First Taught Them to Draw Didn't Live to See Triumph.

Mary Jane Manning, a 9-year-old girl whose stockings won't stay up and who lives in a ramshackle dwelling on the river bank at 3900 North Wharf street, knows that her mother would be proud of her today. Mary Jane's mother died of pneumonia in City Hospital about seven weeks ago, before Mary Jane won the prize.

Almost all her life Mary Jane has lived on a houseboat. A riverman's daughter, she more or less grew up on eddies and side-currents and catching fish and frying them in the pan. Of course every riverman's daughter knows about things like that But not many rivermen's daughters can pick up a pencil and draw you a lady with an easter hat, or a little girl picking flowers or a fine cluster of houses that have downright swell smokestacks.

Mary Jane can do that. Almost from the time she could walk, she's been trying to draw. Her mother liked to draw. Her mother always helped her to draw the smokestacks just as she helped J. C., Mary Jane's brother, 11 years old, make pictures of long, long trains.

It was Mary's mother who, three years ago, first packed off Mary Jane and J. C., in freshly ironed clothing, and with 10 cents for carfare, to the Saturday morning free drawing class for children at the Art Museum. Gee, that was wonderful. On the houseboat there weren't enough windows to let in the light, except maybe right near the stove in the kitchen. You got sort of dirty lying on the floor to make pitcures of houses. But at the Museum—

Smiling Ladies, Clean Paper.

There were ladies there who nodded to you and smiled and gave you some clean paper, not the kind they wrap those thin pork chops in. She gave you a pencil, too, and a crayon and maybe a piece of charcoal and an eraser. And they stood up one of those great big oil paintings, worth about a million dollars, and you had a board to draw on and they told you to go ahead and copy the big oil painting.

On many a day Mary Jane and J. C. had not eaten very much before they went to the Museum. The truth is there wasn't very much in the houseboat to eat. But the drawing class seemed fine just the same. Sometimes they had to walk part of the way in the rain and they didn't have raincoats and it was uncomfortable drawing in your wet clothes but it was great to be there. And then Mary Jane's mother would ask her all about it when she got home and Mary Jane would tell all about it and J. C. would tell all about it and Mary Jane's mother would say: "That's fine. That's fine."

J. C. told his mother that when one of the 100 or more children made a really beautiful drawing the teachers put a little mark on it, which meant it was especially good and they gave the boy or the girl who made it a prize. Sometimes you got a box of crayons and sometimes you got a colored picture—just like one of those big oil paintings that cost about a million dollars. And Mary Jane's mother said: "Some day you'll win a prize. You just wait."

For a year Mary Jane and J. C. went every Saturday of the school year to the drawing class and they made some pictures that the ladies at the museum thought were very nice. In between times Mary Jane drew girls picking flowers and houses with smokestacks and J. C. drew horses and cowboys and long, long trains.

It was cold on the houseboat in the winter and Mary Jane's father got a job at a steel plant in Granite City and after that they moved out of the houseboat and into a shack on the river bank which was warmer. That winter the children went to the Museum every Saturday and copied the big pictures. Sometimes there wasn't very much money but Mary Jane's mother always found 10 cents for carfare. Mary Jane knew that her pictures were getting better.

Last September, the children started their third year at the drawing class and J. C. just felt in his bones he was going to win a prize. He tried Saturday after Saturday and once he almost got honorable mention. Then Mary Jane's mother got sick and they couldn't go to the Museum on Saturday. They just stayed around the house and Mary Jane's mother didn't get any better. Finally they took her to the hospital. And she died.

After that, Mary Jane's father got a woman to keep house for them. The woman brought her four children and the four-room shack on the river bank was crowded. You couldn't do much drawing. And you couldn't go to the Museum. It was lonesome for Mary Jane and J. C. without their mother. For four weeks the children didn't go to class. Then Mary Jane and J. C. talked it over with their father who said all right, they could go next Saturday.

The Prize at Last.

Well, the next Saturday J. C. drew a picture of a great oil painting by some Spaniard and the picture was called "The Hermit." And J. C. felt proud. But he was sorry his mother was not there to know about the prize. He knew it would have pleased her. And then the next week Mary Jane went to the Museum with J. C. and they had to draw a big painting called "Castilian Peasant" by Eduardo Chicharro. Mary Jane put her pencil to the paper and drew in a hurry. She made a prize picture. There never has been a better picture, indeed, drawn at the Museum by a 9-year-old. Now Mary Jane will get her pick of some colored prints of those big oil paintings, a prize that she used to want to take home to her mother. If only she had won the prize before her mother went to the hospital. But then you can't have everything.

Whether it is 20 above zero or zero, or whether it snows or sleets, Mary Jane and J. C. will be at the Saturday classes regularly hereafter. Their father has promised them that. They had hoped to find some crayons and maybe some paints on their Christmas tree, but unfortunately they didn't have a tree, and something happened to the paints and the crayons.

Both Mary Jane and J. C. think they will never stop drawing. They've never thought about going to art school. You don't hear much about art school when you live on the river bank, at 3900 North Wharf street.

'TOOTS' CLARK LAYS ATTACK TO CLEANERS' FEUD

Former Business Agent for Union Was Shot Three Times by Gunmen in Two Autos.

"Toots" Clark, former officer of Cleaners', Dyers' and Pressers' Union No. 17,920, who was shot three times when the occupants of two automobiles fired into his car at Spring avenue and North Market street Friday night, said yesterday he thought the attack to be a result of his activities as a labor organizer.

"I've made a lot of enemies in the cleaning business and I believe the shooting was the work of the same bunch that tried to blow me and some of the other union fellows up last month," Clark said. "I don't know who they are, or what they are sore at, though," he added.

Clark's reference to the attempt to "blow him up" was to an explosion, which damaged the building at 4064 Olive street containing the union offices.

Clark was shot in the left arm and twice in the hip, when his machine was crowded to the curb by the two other cars, the occupants of which opened fire with shotguns and revolvers. He escaped by running through a car lot of the Public Service Co. An automatic shotgun, which had been fired recently, was turned over to the police by a resident of the neighborhood, who found it in his ashpit. Clark's car bore seven bullet holes. Clark declared it was too dark for him to be able to identify his assailants.

Clark has been picked up frequently by police for questioning in labor disorders, shootings, extortion and murder. He was arrested on charges of shooting two drivers for non-union cleaning establishments, but the wounded men failed to identify him, although one had named Clark, according to police. A third degree robbery charge against him in the alleged extortion of $1000 from Robert Birenbaum, president of the non-union Washington Cleaning & Dyeing Co., was dismissed in Circuit Court at Clayton, Oct. 22, when Birenbaum failed to repeat on the witness stand statements previously made in an affidavit.

Clark resigned as business agent for the Cleaners' Union in October, but has continued with the organization in an advisory capacity.

Million-Year-Old Skull Of Pekin Man Nearly Intact

Brain Case Most Complete Find of Kind Ever Made—Clew to Prehistoric Times Publicly Exhibited.

By the Associated Press.

PEIPING, China, Dec. 28.—The skull of the prehistoric Pekin man recently discovered by a Chinese geologist working in quarries near Peiping, was shown publicly today for the first time at a special meeting of the Geological Survey of China.

Scientists here say it is the most complete find of its kind in history, the entire brain case being intact. The brain cases of the Piltdown man and others of prehistoric times are not complete.

Prof. Amadeus William Grabau, chief paleontologist of the Chinese Geological Survey, has expressed a theory that the skull is the nearest approach to the so-called missing link that has yet been unearthed, while Roy Chapman Andrews, noted explorer, has expressed the opinion that the discovery is the most important in the whole of human evolution.

Scientists here estimate that the skull is more than 1,000,000 years old. This conclusion is drawn from the geological surroundings in which the skull was found. The skull is in a splendid state of preservation and, as shown today, was still imbedded in part of a block of travertine in which it was found.

The skull was carried into the assembly room in the arms of Dr. Davidson Black, formerly of Toronto, who is honorary director of the Cenozoic Research Laboratory of the Geological Survey here. Dr. Black, who is also a professor of Anatomy at the Rockefeller Foundation Hospital, handled the skull as if it were a most delicate piece of chinaware. He placed it on a table while the spectators eagerly craned their necks. Among those present were Dr. Sven Hedin, the noted Swedish scientist and explorer; Prof. Charles Wilson Brown, head of the geology department of Brown University, and Prof. Grabau.

Dr. Black gave full credit for the discovery to W. C. Pei, Chinese member of the geological survey who unearthed the skull on Dec. 2.

Dr. Black called particular attention to the vault of the skull form, its massive brow ridges to the occiput and the whole right side of the skull, supported, when found, in a relatively soft matrix, which has since been removed.

He told of the excavations which had continued since 1921 when the first tooth was found of Sinanthropus Pekinensis by Dr. J. G. Anderson, Swedish scientist. He explained that the newly-found skull would seem to be of approximately similar length to that of the famous Pithecanthropus of Java and like the latter form is provided with massive ridges "a feature to be correlated with a powerful jaw mechanism."

"However, Sinanthropus characteristically differs from the Java type in the following important features; relatively well-developed frontal eminences, well localized parietal eminences and the greater height of the skull vault," said Dr. Black.

"All these characters point to a relatively greater brain capacity in Sinanthropus. The mastoid processes of Sinanthropus are small and massive. The sockets in which the lower jaw articulated are well preserved on both sides, a circumstance which will be of great value in the restoration of lower jaw fragments discovered in 1928. In general it may be said that while the new skull specimen bears out what little was already known fection of its preservation will enfrom other fragments, the perable much to be learned that is now obscure concerning the evolution of the head region in early man."

Andrews, who had a private view of the skull last week in the Rockefeller Hospital where it is being kept in a safe said: "The skull will settle once and for all many points about the early human type which heretofore have been in dispute as it is so nearly complete giving scientists much to work on. It is more complete than anything of the kind yet discovered."

The skull was found deep in a great cave. Nearby were many other bones, chiefly of animals, but no tools and no signs of fire were discovered, indicating that it was the skull of a man living prior to the discovery of tools and fire. Many of the bones found were those of hyenas and from this it was deduced by some of the scientists that men and animals might all have lived in the same cave.

$2,500,000,000 A YEAR U. S. DRINK BILL, EXPERT SAYS

LATTER CALLS DRY ACT PARTIAL FAILURE

Alcohol Problem "Insoluble in Present Generation," Yale Economist Thinks.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 28.—Prohibition was viewed today as a matter of cold figures by the American Statistical Association in its annual session, with John C. Gebhart, research director of the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment, and Prof. Irving Fisher, Yale University economist, arriving at opposite conclusions through analyses of dry law enforcement statistics.

Gebhart said studies of arrests for drunkenness and deaths from drinking, as well as increases in saving deposits, industrial production and similar economic trends showed that more progress in temperance reform could be made by regulated sale of alcoholic beverages than by prohibition.

Fisher said his researches had proved prohibition was a "partial failure," and that the alcohol question "was an insoluble problem during the present generation." He predicted a diminished consumption would result if "we keep everlastingly at it and deaths from alcoholism rid the country of some of those who do not obey the law."

Gebhart estimated the nation's drink bill at $2,500,000,000 annually, and said this figure represented approximately the amount that would be spent were there no prohibition law, on the basis of population increases since the dry act went into effect.

Prof. Herman Feldman of Dartmouth College submitted another paper on the subject, which was read at a meeting by Prof. Stuart A. Rice of the University of Pennsylvania. Feldman slaid Gebhart's figure of $2,500,000,000 was much too high an estimate of the amount now spent for liquor, and also that much more than that would be spent if there were no dry law, as the prosperity of the country had increased in a faster ratio than the population.

Prof. Fisher said "prohibtion was probably the best method of dealing with the alcoholic question, especially for the United States."

'It woud be foolish for us to give it up now. Results that have been obtained register a partial success, and with improved enenforcement better results will be attained."

FRENCH NOTE DIMS HOPE OF SUCCESS OF NAVAL PARLEY

bright spots. Japan's apparent willingness to go along with the United States is one of these. Another is the fact that Mr. Hoover and Mr. MacDonald are faced with the alternative of producing a beneficial result or suffering a tremendous loss of prestige.

As MacDonald said at Washington, if the matter were one between the United States and Great Britain only, it could be settled in five minutes. It is, however a matter among five nations and, again to quote MacDonald it can be only settled by taking some risks in the cause of peace. Mr. Hoover has shown that he is prepared to take them.

Three-Power Pact Possible.

In the background of Washington official thought on the subject is the possibility of a three-Power agreement among Great Britain, the United States and Japan, or a four-Power pact with Italy included. Our Government does not officially admit this possibility. Our negotiators will go to London with the single avowed intention of working for a five-Power agreement. They could publicly, at this stage, take no other position.

The fact remains, however, that if the whole loaf is not to be had, something less will be sought. This is the inescapable logic of the situation. Consideration both of domestic politics and of world peace demand of Mr. Hoover and Mr. MacDonald that the fiasco at Geneva in 1927 be not repeated.

Britten Recommends Three-Power Agreement if France Withdraws.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 28.—A three-Power naval armament agreement between England, Japan and the United States was recommended today by Chairman Britten of the House Naval Affairs Committee, in commenting on the French memorandum on the forthcoming five-power naval conference in London.

Britten added that the French attitude, as shown in the memorandum, should not result in a breakdown of the conference.

The same opinion was advanced by Congressman McClintic (Dem.) Oklahoma, member of the Naval Affairs Committee, who said he saw no reason why, if France or Italy should withdraw from the conference, the remaining nations could not negotiate an agreement which would avoid offending the countries not participating.

Referring to that portion of the French document which said France had no objection to other Powers making an agreement before a general scaling down of armaments by the League of Nations, Britten asserted the "United States will not make an agreement subservient to subsequent action by the League of Nations."

Hoovers to Hold Open House New Year's Day

Reception to Officials in the Morning to Be Followed by Greetings to Public in Afternoon.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 28.—The President and Mrs. Hoover plan to observe the tradition which has made the annual New Year's reception at the White House an affair of official importance and social brilliance.

The announcement of the order of the reception, made public today, was the same as that in years past, except that it was signed by George Akerson, Secretary to the President. Short directions at the bottom of the page informed the public that during the morning reception, persons to be received, whether in carriages or on foot will enter and leave the White House by the east entrance.

That direction, it was said at the White House, evidently had been written during the early administration of Theodore Roosevelt.

The President will receive the members of the Cabinet and the Diplomatic Corps at 11 a. m. Ten minutes later the Chief Justice of the United States and Associate Justices of the Supreme Court and other members of the judiciary will be received.

At 11:15 Senators and Congressmen will pass the reception line, to be followed at 11:25 by the Army, Navy, Marine Corps, the Public Health Service and the Coast and Geodetic Survey. Officers down to and including the grade of Lieutenant-Colonel and Commander are expected to attend the reception.

A few minutes later the Chief Executive's assistants, those of members of the Cabinet and the heads of bureaus in the various departments will be received. The last group before lunch will be members of various patriotic so-will be received.

At 1 o'clock in the afternoon the general citizenship of the country cieties.

THOMAS BOYD SEEKS DIVORCE

Author Says Wife Nagged Him Over Trivial Affairs.

By the Associated Press.

RENO, Nev., Dec. 28.—Thomas Boyd, 30 years old, author, has started suit for divorce here, alleging his wife has refused to live with him since last July. Trial is set for next Monday.

Boyd figured in a disturbance at a party in the divorce colony recently and was fined $150. He was alleged to have been intoxicated. In his complaint he alleges that his wife nagged him over trivial affairs. A settlement made out of court provides that Mrs. Boyd shall have custody of a daughter and shall receive one-third of his income. Boyd married Margaret Woodward Smith of Chicago in 1920 at St. Paul, Minn. During the World War he served with the Marine Corps. He is the author of "Through the Wheat," "The Dark Cloud," "Samuel Drummond" and other books and short stories.

NEW ORLEANS POOL RAIDED

"American-Canadian Sweepstakes" Promised Winner $35,000.

By the Associated Press.

NEW ORLEANS, Dec. 28.—Police squads today raided the "American-Canadian Sweepstakes" on the local fair grounds race track. One man, Henry Mills, was arrested and ordered held by District Attorney Eugene Stanley. A formal charge will be made against him Monday, it was announced. Police tonight sought several others believed to have been implicated.

Police, divided into six squads, later raided simultaneously as many hand book resorts. The ticket which started the raids bears the printed statement that the winning horse will draw $35,000. There were lesser sums for other positions and expense funds were listed at $30,000.

LABORER'S BODY FOUND IN FIELD NEAR MILLSTADT, ILL.

John Schneeberger Had Been Missing Since Dec. 17; Prosecuting Attorney to Investigate.

The body of John Schneeberger, 38-year-old concrete worker of Millstadt, Ill., who has been missing since Dec. 17, was found in a cornfield one mile southeast of Millstadt yesterday by George Rose, a passing motorist.

After a post-mortem by Deputy Coroner Madden of East St. Louis, Assistant State's Attorney Curt Lindauer declined to comment except to indicate that he thought Schneeberger had met with foul play and to state that he would investigate fully. A mark, as from a blow with a heavy instrument, was visible over Schneeberger's right temple.

Schneeberger, who has been living with his stepfather, Jacob Hertel, was last seen in the kitchen of a neighbor with whom he had been drinking. The neighbor will be questioned. Schneeberger was married, and his widow is a patient in a sanitarium. He is a veteran of the World War.

GUARD AND ROBBER KILLED

Fatal Shooting Foils Attack on Alcohol Train at Peoria, Ill.

By the Associated Press.

PEORIA, Ill., Dec. 28.—Two men were killed in an exchange of shots today between a Chicago & North Western Railway special agent and a gang attempting to loot an alcohol train on a siding near here.

The dead: Special Agent Emmett Keen, 40 years old; John Horn, alias "Jack Lynch" 30.

Keen, guarding the alcohol shipment, saw three men creeping through the weeds toward the section of the train containing the alcohol, and opened fire on them. They returned his fire, two of the shots hitting him, but he continued to fire. Keen died soon afterwards. Horn's body was found against a fence in an alley on the south side of town, as if it had been thrown from a moving automobile. Four suspects were arrested.

BLIND PALLBEARERS FOR MISS NEWNAMM

Six Schoolmates Chosen for Funeral of Sightless Worker Killed by Auto.

Six blind men, schoolmates of Miss Mary Newnamm many years ago at the Missouri School for the Blind, will serve as pallbearers tomorrow when she is buried in Valhalla Cemetery.

Miss Newnamm, 65 years old, blind and hunchbacked, was killed shortly before midnight Friday, when a skidding automobile struck her and a companion at Forest Park and Spring avenues, as they were returning from a Shakspearean performance at the American Theater. The companion, Miss Elizabeth Mullaly, 65 years old, resident manager of the Queen's Daughters' Home, 3730 Lindell boulevard, died of a fractured skull in city hospital a few hours later.

Many persons in St. Louis, who had never seen her, knew Miss Newnamm. They were the blind with whom she came into contact for 16 years as a stenographer for the Missouri Association for the Blind, and for the last four years as telephone operator for the Missouri Commisison for the Blind, 1908 Locust street. They read letters written by her in Braille. Many read her translation of the King James version of the Bible into the language of those who must see through their fingers.

Purchasing Her Own Home.

To the residents of the 2500 block of Arlington avenue she was a familiar figure. They saw her every week day, walking to the street car from the four-room cottage she had been buying out of her small income for the last 13 years.

Body bent as a result of the spinal deformity. Head thrown back, face inclined a little higher than is customary with normal people. Light cane tapping the sidewalk. Stout shoes. "Sensible" clothing.

Every Sunday they saw her going out to church. Deeply religious, she accepted no creed. Sometimes she went to Catholic services, sometimes to one of the Protestant churches, occasionally to a synagogue. Usually she went alone.

Miss Newnamm was independent. She prepared her own meals and did her own housework unaided, with the exception of sewing. Sewing, she considered, was a waste of time. Witty, well-read since so many standard works have been translated into Braille, and fond of conversation, she spent most of her time at home, when the weather permitted, in a swing on the cottage porch, chatting with neighbors or visitors.

At work, with certain adaptations, she functioned as efficiently as a normal person. Her switchboard, for example, had been changed so she could distinguish from which station calls came. She operated it flawlessly. As a stenographer, she took notes in Braille on a stencil machine and then, running her fingers across them from time to time, transcribed them on an ordinary typewriter.

It was only when she attended the theater at night that Miss Newnamm asked any help, because she recognized the danger of automobiles.

Acquaintance of Mantell.

It was for this reason that she asked Miss Mullaly to accompany her Friday night. It was a special occasion. They had complimentary tickets to Genevieve Hamper's "Macbeth", and Genevive Hamper, of course, is the widow of Robert B. Mantell. Miss Newnamm had known Mantell quite well during his life and on his visits to St. Louis usually had met him for several hours' discussion of Shakspearean drama.

After the theater the two women boarded a Market street car by mistake. Thus they found themselves at Spring avenue, two blocks farther south than they would have been, had they taken the Laclede car as they intended.

They started for the Queens' Daughters' Home, where Miss Newnamm planned to spend the night. At Forest Park avenue an automobile was approaching. The driver, Charles O'Keefe, 5737 Kennerly avenue, applied his brakes. The wheels locked on the pavement, still covered with ice from the storm of a week ago. The back of the car slued around and struck the two women. O'Keefe was arrested and released on bond for appearance at the Coroner's inquest.

Funeral services for Miss Mullaly will be held at 9 a. m. tomorrow from the home to St. Francis Xavier College Church. Burial will be in Calvary Cemetery.

Accommodations have been made at the Donnelly undertaking establishment, 3846 Lindell boulevard, where the services for Miss Newnamm will be held at 11 o'clock, for the many blind persons, who, it is expected, will be present.

REWARD STILL GROWING FOR TORTURER OF DOG

More Than $2000 Pledged—$20 Telegraphed From California.

More than $2000 had been pledged last night to the reward for the apprehension of the person who sewed up the mouth of a small dog and released the animal to starve.

The origin of several of the pledges received by the Humane Society of Missouri indicates that the unusual case of cruelty to an animal has attracted nation-wide interest since the dog was found Tuesday afternoon in a North Side alley near Montgomery and Coleman streets.

Police and investigators for the Humane Society were searching for a young man described by Mrs. Ida Wieland, owner of a dry goods store at 3200 St. Louis avenue. The young man entered the store Friday and warned her: "You'd better keep your mouth shut." Mrs. Wieland previously had told police that a man bought from her a strand of heavy cord, similar to that used in torturing the dog, and a needle to fit the cord. One suspect has been arrested and released on Mrs. Wieland's failure to identify him.

Handbills calling attention to the $2000 reward were distributed from door to door in the North Side neighborhood yesterday at the order of Robert F. Sellar, secretary of the Humane Society, who has described the case as the most brutal he has ever seen.

A California woman yesterday telegraphed a $20 offer and an Athens (Ga.) dog-food company pledged $100 worth of dog biscuits. J. Waddy Tate, Mayor of Dallas, wired Mayor Miller: "When you catch the scoundrel, ship him to Dallas; we have a way of taking care of those fellows."

As has been told, the dog, a small black and white fox terrier, about 2 years old, had been starving several days when found and its mouth and nose were torn from its efforts to tear away the eight stitches of strong white cord. Sellar killed the animal with a painless injection.

TESTS FOR POISON IN VISCERA OF GIRL ARE UNSUCCESSFUL

Inquest in Death of Miss Helen Hempel Continued Pending Further Examination.

Tests by Dr. R. B. H. Gradwohl for traces of a well known poison in the viscera of Miss Helen Hempel, 3415A Union boulevard, who was found dead Thursday in a room at the Congress Hotel, have proved unsuccessful. Analyses for other poisons will be made and the inquest continued pending the filing of the report.

Funeral services for Miss Hempel, who registered at the hotel under an assumed name, were held yesterday from the Drehmann-Harral undertaking chapel, 1965 Union boulevard, with burial in Bellefontaine Cemetery.

Miss Hempel, 20 years old, was a private secretary employed by the Mercantile-Commerce Bank and Trust Co. She resided with her parents.

GIFTS TO BELGIAN PRINCESS

By the Associated Press.

BRUSSELS, Belgium, Dec. 28.—A group of girls of the Belgian nobility today presented Princess Marie Jose, financee of Crown Prince Humbert of Italy, with an ostrich-feather fan as a wedding present. The handle of the fan was adorned with the Princess' initials in diamonds.

The Belgian colony in Italy will present the Princess with several empire bronze vases when she arrives in Rome. The Provincial Governors of Belgium, the Mayors of large cities, several cabinet ministers and court officials were present at a ceremony this afternoon when the Princess was given a wedding veil of Brussels lace and a diamond ring purchased by country-wide subscription.

PRINCETON CLUB SEEN IN "THE GOLDEN DOG"

Triangle Funmakers in Bright Student-Made Musical Comedy at Odeon.

The Triangle Club, Princeton's dramatic and musical organization, paying its annual visit to St. Louis, last night presented the musical comedy, "The Golden Dog" before a large audience made up of old grads and friends of the undergraduates. The musical play, a sparkling bit of student work, was enthusiastically received.

The plot, rather more involved than usual, is woven around some romantic happenings in Quebec during the historic siege of 1759. There is a handsome British spy, one Paul Moray, working within the French lines, who forgets his business errand long enough to fall in love with the pretty Anne Gardiner. Unfortunately, for him, he is also loved by Thais de Vaudreuil, daughter of the Governor and this complication forms the basis of the story.

An all-male cast of Princeton students presented the musical play. David S. McMillan was a sweet and pleasing Anne Gardiner and Alfred M. Wade, president of the Triangle Club, was the dashing and scheming Thais. John H. Kerr had the role of the romantic spy, Moray.

There were large singing and dancing choruses with a double quartette playing a prominent part, especially in the singing of the recurring theme song, "Living on Love." Many specialty numbers were introduced in the show. Prominent among them was the dancing by L. R. Barrett, Marshal Dana and H. H. Dunham, an accordion duet by J. M. Stewart and R. M. Perry and a sketch by W. R. Bryant and J. H. Wright.

The lyrics for "The Golden Dog" were composed by L. R. Barrett, Semore Morris, Robert Hedges, C. C. Austin, Denny Brereton and F. O. Cooke. Hedges wrote "Blue Hell" which was one of the featured numbers. Other songs are "She'll Come Along," "I'm Changing My Tactics" and "After All I've Done For You."

Co-authors of the play were Alfred M. Wade, Joshua L. Logan and Samuel H. Iams.

RIGHT TO BROADCAST AT ANY HOUR ASSERTED

General Electric Denies Commission Can Force WGY Off Air at Night.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 28. — The crucial point in Federal regulation of radio broadcasting, the power of the Radio Commission to compel broadcasting stations to go off the air during certain hours, will be argued in the Supreme Court early next month.

The General Electric Co., which refused to obey an order of the Commission to close its broadcasting station, WGY, at Schenectady, N. Y., during certain hours at night to clear the air channels for the company's station in California, today filed with the court a brief to be used when the case is reached for oral argument.

Holding that Congress conferred authority exclusively on the President to close broadcasting stations under extraordinary conditions and insisting that the Commission had no such authority, the brief asserted that when a station was closed by order of the President even for a portion of a day, just compensation must be paid by the Federal Government.

When the Radio Commission refused to renew the license for WGY except on condition that it would cease broadcasting during certain hours, the General Electric Co. took the controversy to the District of Columbia Court of Appeals, which removed all restrictions. The Supreme Court recently consented, at the request of the Government, to pass on the case. The General Electric challenged today the jurisdiction of the highest court to act, insisting that the decision of the District Court of Appeals was final and not subject to review.

Conceding that Congress, in its constitutional authority to regulate interstate commerce, may have jurisdiction over radio broadcasting, the company maintained that this power to regulate did not convey the right to destroy. Pointing out its pioneering history in broadcasting, the General Electric insisted that the Federal Government must fully compensate it for any losses suffered should it be required to relinquish its constitutional right to go on the air when it pleased.

The Radio Commission was aiming by regulation of the time of broadcasting stations on the air, it said, to clear the channels and improve radio reception. The company suggested this could be accomplished constitutionally by requiring the interfering stations to change their wave lengths.

SIX "DRASTIC MEASURES" TO ABATE SMOKE URGED

Citizens' League Suggests Laws on Firing as Means of Eliminating Nuisance.

The Citizens' Smoke Abatement League, in a report made public yesterday, urged that a law be enacted to require use of smokeless fuel in equipment which is not capable of burning soft coal without producing heavy smoke. Adoption of six "drastic measures" suggested, will result in complete elimination of the smoke nuisance, the report states

The six measures are: That only such furnaces as are smokeless when soft coal is burned by inexperienced persons be permitted to remain in use; that the up-draft principle of firing is permissible only when fuel is fed continuously in small quantities by automatic devices; that the down-draft system of combustion is correct in principle and should be employed; that industrial boilers in which soft coal is burned should be equipped with chain grates or underfed stokers; that boilers located in schools, churches and apartment houses where elaborate stoking equipment is not justified should be equipped with underfeed stokers; that small domestic furnaces should be equipped with stokers or down-draft baffles, unless smokeless fuel is used.

TARDIEU IS UPHELD AGAIN

Third Vote of Confidence in Two Days Is 316 to 271.

PARIS, Dec. 28.—The Chamber of Deputies tonight voted confidence in the Government of Premier Tardieu on its attitude toward the proposed Bank for International Settlements. The vote was 316 to 271.

It was the third victory of the ministry within two days. Deputy Marjaine and former Under-Secretary for Finances Bonnet took the offensive against the proposed bank and interpellated the Government. They declared that unless the scope of operations of the bank were limited it would become simply an instrument of American hegemony in the world. They asked the Finance Minister to demand control of the bank by the Governments.

AUTOMATIC PHONE FOR BLIND

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

PARIS, Dec. 28.—Automatic telephones for the blind have been devised by a welfare organization, it was announced today. The new instrument is the same as the ordinary automatic telephone, except that the exchanges and numbers are in braille characters above specially constructed openings for dialing.

The first instrument was tried and approved by Deputy Scapini, blind war hero. The apparatus will be installed in homes for the blind and elsewhere. The new invention offers a solution to a difficult problem, since the dialing system had threatened to make telephoning impossible for the blind.

REQUISITION FOR E. S. HUCKINS ISSUED BY IOWA GOVERNOR

Wisconsin Executive Asked to Order Return of "26 Per Cent" Operator for Trial.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CEDAR RAPIDS, Ia., Dec. 28.—County Attorney Carl Hendrickson today requested Gov. John Hammill to issue requisition papers on Gov. Kohler of Wisconsin for the return here of Elmer S. Huckins, who operated a 26 per cent interest-paying scheme, to stand trial on charges of obtaining money by false pretenses.

As soon as the papers are returned, a detective will be sent to Madison for Gov. Kohler's signature and Huckins will be brought here unless he fights extradition.

Hendrickson has declined to agree to a reduction of the $17,000 bond set by the District Court.

Information from Excelsior Springs, Mo., today was to the effect that George E. Huckins, a son, had about recovered from his illness and would be able to be brought here the latter part of next week. He is under arrest on the same charges as his father.

SOVIET PROMISES BRITAIN IT WON'T USE PROPAGANDA

New Ambassador Confirms Protocol of October Pledging Not to Spread Communistic Doctrines.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Dec. 28.—Soviet Russia, in resuming its diplomatic and trade relationship with Great Britain, has agreed to abstain from propaganda, both in Britain proper and in the Dominions.

Publication by the Foreign Office of the notes exchanged between Foreign Minister Henderson and the new Soviet Ambassador, K. Sokolnikov, confirming the protocol on propaganda reached during the Anglo-Russian conversations at Lewes in October, discloses the Soviet attitude with reference to the Dominions.

The Russian Ambassador's note, after confirming the propaganda article in the treaty of 1924, says the Russian Government "has considered that undertaking as extending to the British dominions (Canada, Australia, New Zealand, South Africa, the Irish Free State and Newfoundland).

"Consequently as soon as the Government of any dominion shall have regulated its relations with the Union of the Socialist Soviet Republics in such manner as the circumstances of the particular case require, the Government of the U. S. S. R. will be ready to repeat on the basis of reciprocity the undertaking referred to, in a separate exchange of notes with such a dominion."

Express mention of South Africa in the Soviet note was regarded as especially important since police informers recently have accused Communists propagandists of stirring trouble among the natives.

India is included in the mutual propaganda pledge, being classed along with Great Britain proper.

In view of the course of events in India which some sections of the British press say has been influenced by Bolshevik teachings, attention was attracted by specific mention of India in the anti-propaganda agreement.

The Russian Ambassador's note speaks of the undertaking as in effect between the U. S. S. R. and 'His Majesty's Government in the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland and the Government of India."

ADVISORY BODY ON INLAND WATERWAYS TO BE CHOSEN

Closer Co-operation Between War and Commerce Departments Proposed to Speed Work.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 28.—An Advisory Committee representing all sections of the country will be appointed soon to confer with the Department of Commerce on economic phases of inland waterways development.

The plan, announced today by the department in connection with the policy of the administration for expanding inland waterways, also contemplates closer co-operation between the Commerce Department and the War Department in inland waterways work.

Through the Advisory Committee, the department hopes to keep in close contact with the situation over the country and to obtain authoritative data to aid in the determination of policies.

By segregating the overlapping activities of the two departments in the economic and engineering fields, commerce officials point out that the work should be facilitated.

THREE IN DRY PATROL FACE CHARGE OF MANSLAUGHTER

Judge at Buffalo, N. Y., to Issue Warrants in Christmas Night Killing.

By the Associated Press.

BUFFALO, N. Y., Dec. 28.—The three Coast Guardsmen involved in the fatal shooting of Eugene F. Downey Jr. Christmas night, will be charged with manslaughter, second degree, in warrants to be issued Monday morning on decision of Judge Frank W. Standart, in an inquest in City Court today. They will be arraigned Monday morning.

The Judge, after hearing a stenographic record of statements of the three men read in court by District Attorney Guy B. Moore, said he would issue the information on which the manslaughter charges are based at once, but said he would not sign the warrants until Tuesday.

The guardsmen, Randolph H. Thompson, Orville Lagrant and Asa Ennes, accompanied by Commander Martin W. Rasmussen of this district, and Capt. Paul Forner, who ordered them to duty on the night of the shooting, were in court and heard the statments read.

Two Mexicans Plan Ocean Flights.

By the Associated Press.

MEXICO CITY, Dec. 28.—Two months' leave from duty has been granted to Cols. Roberto Fierro and Gustav G. Leon of the Army Air Service, so they may work out arrangements for attempted transoceanic flights. Fierro plans a flight early next year to Europe by way of South America and the South Atlantic. Leon will attempt to fly either from the United States to Japan or from the United States to Europe by way of the North Atlantic.

KILLS ASSOCIATE, THEN SELF IN QUARREL OVER BUSINESS

Slayer, a Baltimore Lawyer, in 1928 Tried to Shoot Another Man in Similar Dispute.

By the Associated Press.

BALTIMORE, Dec. 28.—O. Parker Baker, former attorney for the First Mortgage Bond Homestead Association, shot and fatally wounded John F. Steinmetz, secretary of the Association, then killed himself in the Association's building tonight. Steinmetz died in a hospital.

Police investigation indicated that after quarreling in the office Baker chased Steinmetz into the cellar and shot him there. After Steinmetz staggered out to the street, Baker shot himself. The wounded man told the soldiers "Baker shot me," and with this information police went to the building, where they found Baker's body.

Baker was arrested in April, 1928, charged with attempting to shoot Frederick M. Supplee, an insurance broker, in a quarrel over efforts to gain control of the Association. After a jury disagreement the case was dropped with the explanation that the cause of the trouble had been settled.

Correspondence between Baker and Steinmetz, found by the police, indicated they also had trouble over the control of the Association.

FRANCE TO EXPEND $116,000,000 FOR NATIONAL DEFENSE

Chamber Votes Money for Complete Program Along Frontiers From 1930 to 1934.

TO USE $40,000,000 IN ALSACE-LORRAINE

Heavy Emphasis on Planes —Navy Able to Move 400,000 Men Across Mediterranean.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, Dec. 28.—The Chamber of Deputies today appropriated 2,900,000,000 francs (about $116,000,000) to fortify the frontiers and to increase the Navy. More than one-third of this amount will be available for use during 1930.

The Senate tonight ratified the defense appropriations by a vote of 274 to 26.

In the debate in the Chamber today it was stressed that evacuation of the Rhineland made it imperative to complete the defenses along the northern border. The naval program calls for construction of seven submarines, more than in any other categories despite the recent talk in international circles of limiting or doing away with that type of war vessel.

The program of defense for which funds were voted today is a continuation of the plans laid some years ago. The land defenses were made necessary in part by the new frontiers given France by the Treaty of Versailles. The plans have been studied for the past nine years and while naturally surrounded by the greatest secrecy are supposed by military critics outside the French army and Government to comprise a series of works based on the experiences of the last war.

Therefore it is supposed that there will be a good deal of underground work with less masonry visible as a target for hostile artillery. Anti-aircraft defense also bulks large in the plans.

Minister of War Andre Maginot in asking for the appropriation explained to the chamber that the organization of strong defense of the frontiers had been agreed on by all parties, and that even the Socialists, when the length of compulsory military service was reduced to one year, had argued that it was better to organize the frontiers for effective defense than to waste the time of young Frenchmen in service under the flag. Several orators agreed that evacuation of the Rhineland makes execution of the defense programs urgent.

A total of 45,000 tons of new construction for the Navy in 1930 was authorized. This tonnage will be divided among one 10,000-ton cruiser, six destroyers, six first-class submarines and a submarine mine layer. During discussion of this part of the program it was brought out that the French fleet in the Mediterranean is expected to be able to transport immediately in case of war 400,000 men from Northern Africa.

NEW YORK AND CHICAGO POLICE CAMPAIGN ON EXTORTIONISTS

Heads of Two Departments Agree on Program for Interchange of Officers and Efforts.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Dec. 28.—Grover Whalen, New York Police Commissioner, said tonight that he and William F. Russell, Chicago Police Commissioner, had determined on a program of joint efforts to combat gangster extortionists. The plan provides for establishment of special squads in each city and a continual interchange of men and efforts.

Whalen said the first step would be taken next week, when several men would be assigned to come to Chicago with available New York evidence in the Marlow and Yale gang murder cases. Bullets, shells, confiscated guns and other material held in both cities are to be compared.

Following the killing by police yesterday of three hoodlums, who attempted to extort $10,000 from Michael Powers, president of the Tire & Rubber Workers' Union, a Christmas benefit extortion game was disclosed today by actors at downtown theaters who said they had contributed from $25 to $100 for charity funds and dinners that never existed.

A Coroner's jury today decided the shooting of the three gangsters yesterday was justifiable homicide on part of police.

House Committee Will Ascertain Legislative Needs.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 28.—A study of the banking situation in the United States will be begun Jan. 7 by the House Committee on banking and currency to ascertain whether additional legislation is needed as the result of new developments.

The meeting was called today by Chairman McFadden, who said the new development of chain, group or holding company control of both national and state banks would be studied.

Effect of "Love" Words on Girl Students Measured by Science

Michigan Professor Tells Association of Electrical Current Record on Galvanometer When Word "Kiss" Is Heard.

By WATSON DAVIS,
Managing Editor, Science Service.

DES MOINES, Ia., Dec. 28.—Just because the white Americans are today leaders of the world on the crest of civilization, they must not regard themselves as a chosen people with inborn ability to stay in the forefront, Dr. Fay-Cooper Cole, anthropologist of the University of Chicago and the National Research Council, told members of the American Association for the Advancement of Science here this afternoon.

"The barbarians of the year 1 A. D. are now the world leaders," he said. "Just as the torch of culture passed successively from Egypt to Crete, to Greece, to Rome, to Northern Europe, so it may pass from America to the yellow peoples of the East."

The constant intermingling of peoples and the trading of ideas which keep civilization moving down the ages have caused great mixtures of the races which are distinguished from each other by physical rather than mental characteristics, in Dr. Cole's opinion.

Sterilization of defectives as a first step in race betterment was advocated by Prof. G. H. Parker of Harvard in an address before Sigma Xi, honorary scientific fraternity.

"We have had long experience in adjusting social relations for the betterment of men," he said, "but we are complete novices in attempting to control the germinal inheritance. These defective individuals who are state wards and must be cared for by State funds, and whose defects are hereditary, should in some way or other be restrained from reproduction. Such a step may be carried out by segregation, which has been advocated by many public custodians, but a much more radical means of controlling defectives is sterilization."

"Kiss," "Love," "Marriage" and "Divorce," when heard by college girl students, cause an electrical reaction that can be measured on a current recording galvanometer, Prof. William Clark Trow of the University of Michigan found in psychological tests. The exciting words were called "hot," while ordinary words such as "give" or "pencil" did not thrill and were therefore called "cold."

Unexpectedly "name," was found to thrill the co-eds, one of whom confessed that she associated it with the name of her boy friend.

Another psychologist, Prof. F. O. Smith, of the University of Montana told how he measured the reactions of students when a snake was allowed to crawl in their laps or their fingers were squeezed in a vice.

Prof. Paul H. Furfey of Catholic University, Washington, made mental tests on babies just 15 minutes old and found that their small brains and nerves had not yet had time to get into working order.

ARIZONA JUDGE BARS U. S. LIQUOR LAW CASES

Ruling Follows Effort to Transfer Federal Hearings to State Jurisdiction.

By the Associated Press.

PHOENIX, Ariz., Dec. 28.—The Federal Government was barred from prosecuting liquor law cases in the courts of Maricopa County by a decision of Superior Judge M. T. Phelps yesterday. The order resulted from a controversy between Government and county officials over the price of meals for Federal prohibition prisoners in the county jail.

Monday the county Board of Supervisors refused any longer to house and feed Federal prisoners at the existing rate of 75 cents daily a man. The board demanded $1 a day.

John H. Udall, Federal prohibition Administrator for Arizona, then announced he would file all Federal liquor law violations cases in the county, instead of in the Federal Court. By this transfer, it was explained, the county would be forced to care for Federal prisoners if convicted in county courts.

This prompted Superior Judge Phelps to order the county attorney to refuse to prosecute such Federal cases.

United States Marshal George Mauk declared that the Federal Government would go to "the extra expense of transferring prisoners to other county jails of the State, rather than be sandbagged into accepting conditions which it feels are unjust. In Tucson and Prescott jails, where the food is considered satisfactory, the Government has been paying $1 a day for some time."

Marshal Mauk said he notified Maricopa County officials last June that they could obtain the increased rate "provided they put in their own kitchens and served suitable food to the prisoners."

19 PERSONS INJURED IN BUS-TRUCK CRASH

St. Louis-to-Memphis Carrier Collides With Machine in Fog Near Sikeston.

SIKESTON, Mo., Dec. 28.—Nineteen persons were injured, two seriously, when a St. Louis-to-Memphis bus of the Pickwick-Greyhound Co. collided with a truck in a heavy fog, four miles south of here today.

Earl Hostetler of Memphis, driver of the bus, and Mrs. Bula Hickenson of Wardell, Ark., a passenger, were the most seriously injured. Hostetler suffered chest injuries and bruises and Mrs. Hickenson was injured internally.

Among others hurt were Mrs. Hickenson's 3-year-old son, Frederick; Louis Remus and Stanley Moore of St. Louis, and Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Peterman and their two children, of Hayti, Mo.

All were brought here for treatment at an emergency hospital and at offices of physicians.

The bus, carrying 17 passengers, was southbound from St. Louis to Memphis and the truck, driven by Walter B. Chaney and heavily loaded with groceries, also was being driven south. The bus crashed into the rear of the truck and both vehicles went into the ditch, but neither overturned.

NO TRACE OF AIRPLANE MECHANIC MISSING 7 MONTHS

Samuel S. Jeffries in April Wrote Wife That He Was Going to Mexico City.

The family of Samuel S. Jeffries, 36 years old, 6046 Westminster place, who left home last January to take a position as an airplane mechanic in Mexico City, and who has not been heard from since April, has been notified that American and Mexican officials have been unable to find any trace of Jeffries.

Jeffries wrote his wife from Nogales, Ariz., last April, saying he intended to go to Mexico to assemble planes for the Mexican Government, and that he would soon send for her and their 9-year-old daughter. No word has come from him since.

Jeffries, who served in the Air Corps during the World War, is 5 feet 6 inches tall, weighs 140 pounds and has dark hair. An Indian head is tattooed on his upper right arm.

ALDA BIDS ADIEU TO OPERA

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Dec. 28.—While a huge audience thundered prolonged applause Frances Alda on the stage today bade farewell to her associates of the Metropolitan Opera Co. She has retired to accept a radio contract after 22 years as one of the Metropolitan's leading sopranos. This afternoon she gave her last performance, in the "Manon Lescaut" of Puccini.

After the final curtain, while the audience still lingered out front Alda came to the footlights, and there Antonio Scotti presented her with a scroll and a wreath on behalf of the management and her colleagues. Later there was a party in her Park avenue apartment. "In all my years here," she said, "I have always tried to give you the best that God gave me. In my new field I will do the same."

SAYS STOCK CRASH WON'T HURT BUSINESS

Secretary of Commerce Reports, Outside of Building, Outlook Is Good.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 28.—An apparent lack of unfavorable reaction by general business to the stock market collapse was viewed today with satisfaction by Secretary of Commerce Lamont.

After a call on President Hoover, Lamont said that, in his opinion, the country had passed the point where a sharp break in New York stock prices would wreck general business.

One of the important factors in the maintenance of the high level of general business, he said, was that consumption apparently had been keeping up with production since 1922, except in the case of the automobile and tire industries.

He asserted rapid transportation had brought about a state where orders were delivered promptly, a fact which had resulted in no branch of industry having such tremendous stock on hand as it had in the depression of 1921.

As an indication of the present business conditions Lamont pointed out that car loadings for last week were only 4 per cent below those for the same week in 1928. This condition he regarded as being significant of sound general business outlook.

Construction work, he said, still remained the bad spot of the business map. Inability to get what is known as second money for building, he added, had kept construction from keeping pace with other business. The easier credit which followed the stock market break, in his opinion, has not reached all sections of the country yet, and until it does construction work will not come up to the general level.

Some relief in building was expected from a stimulation of public works by the Federal and State Governments, but a large part of the effect of this movement would not be felt for some time, he said. The speeding up of public works which have passed the planning stage will have some effect, he predicted, but added that many of the reports received from the states said their programs were in the planning stage and it would require some time to get started.

PLANS FLIGHT TO NORTH POLE IN GRAF ZEPPELIN FOR 1931

Aero-Arctic Society in Berlin Issues Statement About Expedition.

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, Dec. 28.—The Aero-Arctic Society has issued a statement that the projected North Pole expedition in the dirigible Graf Zeppelin has been called off for 1930, but that it is fully expected the flight will be made in 1931.

On Dec. 23 the Berlin offices of the Zeppelin company announced that the flight had been cancelled. Previously there had been a difference of opinion between Dr. Hugo Eckener, commander of the craft, and Capt. Walter Bruns, secretary of the Aero-Arctic Society, as to the feasibility of the proposed flight.

Eckener said that neither the Zeppelin company nor the Aero-Arctic Society had been able to obtain insurance and that the Zeppelin works were turning to other projects for further demonstration of the serviceability of the Zeppelin as a means of conveyance over long distances. Among other things a flight to Latin-America was being considered.

Bruns, however, said that the Aero-Arctic Society hoped to obtain insurance.

DEVISES NEW ATMOSPHERE

DES MOINES, Ia., Dec. 28.—Man-made air, different from Nature's brand, was described to the chemical section of the American Association for the Advancement of Science today by Dr. J. Willard Hershey of McPherson College, McPherson, Kan. He asserted he had made the new air by changing the normal mixtures of oxygen, nitrogen, argon, helium, neon, krypton and carbon dioxide. Oxygen and nitrogen compose all except about 1 per cent of the atmosphere, but Dr. Hershey said his laboratory animals would live only 17 days if their air was completely deprived of the gases forming the 1 per cent.

He declared he had found some combinations which seemed to support life of mice better than ordinary air and suggested study for the relief of disease by specially prepared atmospheres.

Chicago Cleaner's Dispute Settled.

CHICAGO, Dec. 28.—Announcement was made today of the settlement of a long dispute between the Master Cleaners and Dyers' Association and the union of cleaners, dyers and pressers. The $1,000,000 cleaning and dyeing plant projected by the union will be disposed of in such manner that it will not be a competitor of the employers. A University of Chicago professor will become chairman of an impartial body to administer the agreement. The arbitration plan was regarded as a model and a permanent guarantee that the cleaning industry will be free of activities by extortionists.

OFFICIAL WASHINGTON AT ORTIZ RUBIO PARTY

Mexico's New President Receives Degree—Leaves Today in Hoover's Auto.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 28.—High officials of the United States Government were received tonight at the Mexican Embassy in honor of Pascual Ortiz Rubio, president-elect of Mexico, and Senora de Ortiz Rubio.

President Hoover did not attend. He will be received there at 12:20 p. m. tomorrow, when he will call, with Mrs. Hoover, to bid good-by to the visitors.

The Mexican presidential party will leave at 3 p. m. by rail for Buffalo, N. Y., to visit Niagara Falls and industrial plants before continuing their tour of the United States, probably through Detroit, Chicago, and San Francisco.

Members of the cabinet, of the Supreme Court, and of Congress mingled tonight with Ambassadors and ministers representing the whole civilized world in the home of Ambassador Manuel C. Tellez.

The Ambassador presented to his future chief many distinguished men and women who spoke various tongues. Included in the guest list were Vice President Charles Curtis, who called at the embassy yesterday, and Dr. Cloyd H. Marvin, president of George Washington University. That school today conferred on the future Chief Magistrate of Mexico the honorary degree of Doctor of Laws.

At the ceremony, in Memorial Constitution Hall, Ortiz Rubio described the task of education on the part of the Mexican Government as "always urgent and imperative."

Afterward the President-elect and his party motored to Annapolis, where, as guests of Rear Admiral S. S. Robison, they lunched and inspected the Naval Academy. Dinner at the embassy and a few hours of rest intervened before the reception.

When the President-elect goes to Union Station tomorrow, he will ride in President Hoover's automobile and will be accompanied by the President's military and naval aids. Secretary Stimson will bid him goodby at the train.

PERMIT TO DIG UP STREET ISSUED JUST AS IT WAS PAVED

Notice of the Surfacing Had Been Sent to Utilities and Others by City Sept. 3.

A permit to excavate for a steam conduit on Thirteenth street between St. Charles and Washington boulevard was issued the Union Electric Co. by the Board of Public Service on the same day that the City had completed the repaving of that block.

Last week men were at work on a 42-inch trench as property owners along the block received a special tax bill for their share of the expense of the repaving.

Issuance of the excavation permit, Nov. 15, came after a notification sent to public utility companes and others interested on Sept. 3 that the city had let a contract for repaving the street and that all work necessitating tearing up the street should be done before it was paved.

The steam conduit, part of a $40,000 project for a double system serving the western section of the downtown district, was incorporated in the 1929 budget of the electric company which included many projects completed earlier in the year, J. E. Hillmeyer, manager of the steam heating department of the electric company said. He suggested the establishment of conferences between interested coparties at least a month prior to any excavation work and city officials have proposed also measures to minimize repeated excavation work in the same areas.

SENATOR SAYS TESTIMONY SHOWS MOONEY IS INNOCENT

Schall of Minnesota Claims Affidavits Prove Lewis Smith Threw Bomb.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 28.—Senator Thomas Schall (Rep.), Minnesota, today said that an examination of the testimony of Lewis Smith in the Von Bopp case convinces him that the Governor of California cannot do anything but pardon Tom Mooney, serving a life sentence for murder as a result of the San Francisco preparedness parade bombing in 1916.

"Since it was disclosed that Lewis Smith made a deathbed confession that he, not Mooney, threw the bomb on July 22, 1916. I have read Smith's testimony in the trial of Count Frantz Von Bopp, German Consul. The testimony shows that Smith was a professional bomber and amply sustains the affidavits of Smith's sister, three grown sons and a daughter, that it was he who threw the bomb.

"I cannot see how the Governor can much longer refuse to pardon an innocent man."

The secretary to Gov. Young of California, it was learned, was in Washington recently seeking information at the Department of Justice regarding Smith. He was seeking particularly to learn whether evidence in the files of the department show that Smith was in San Francisco at the time of the bombing.

4 FREE BALLOONS SENT UP IN WEATHER TESTS

Information That Will Aid in Forecasting Storms for Aviators Is Expected.

The last of a series of four free balloons, carrying meteorological instruments, was released last night at the Lambert-St. Louis flying field observation station of the Weather Bureau, terminating the local phase of experiments conducted simultaneously at 11 other points to obtain data calculated to aid in charting and forecasting storms and to assist aviators, particularly those contemplating trans-Atlantic flights.

The balloons, each of which carried an instrument which automatically records the temperatures, air pressure and humidity, were released at 6-hour intervals, beginning at 1 o'clock yesterday morning. Reinhard C. Schmidt, in charge of the station at the flying field, said that most of the instruments would fall probably somewhere in Eastern Illinois. Each instrument is attached to a parachute, which opens when its balloon bursts from hydrogen pressure at high altitudes. Finders of the instruments are paid $5 for mailing them to the Weather Bureau office.

The average sounding balloon, Schmidt said, remains in the air eight or nine hours, depending on how long it takes to climb to the thin atmosphere of very high altitudes, much higher than can be reached by man. Such ballons have attained a height of 22 miles, although the majority of them burst when about eight miles from earth.

Tests were conducted also at Sioux City, Ia.; Topeka, Kans.; Amarillo, Tex.; Cincinnati, O.; Davenport, Ia., and Little Rock, Ark. Experiments with kites, planned to obtain additional data at lower altitudes to compare with the information recorded on the graphs taken from the instruments attached to the sounding balloons, were held at aerological stations at Ellendale, N. D.; Broken Arrow, Ok.; Royal Center, Ind.; Due West, S. C.; and Groesbeck, Tex.

PORTS FREEDOM OF SPEECH REPRESSED AT PITTSBURG U.

the Associated Press.

DURHAM, N. C., Dec. 28.—A re- of the Committee on Academic edom and Tenure, charging the ression of freedom of speech ong faculty members at the iversity of Pittsburg, featured opening session today of the erican Association of University fessors, here.

The report said that freedom of ech by Pittsburg instructors is recarious and is held not by right but by the grace of the administration."

The investigation at Pittsburg followed abolition of the Liberal Club and the dismissal of F. E. Woltman, graduate assistant in philosophy, by the university authorities.

The action of the university against the Liberal Club and Woltman constitute, the report said, "grave violations of academic freedom. This condition, which "amounts in effect to a humiliating supervision and regulation of faculty conduct," is deplored by the committee as inconsistent with the right of university teachers.

The findings of the investigation at the University of Missouri concerning a sex questionnaire, have not been reported in final form, Prof. Wheeler said.

THREE DIE OF NEW "PARROT'S DISEASE" IN BERLIN; 9 ILL

Illness Traced to Birds Brought to Germany Recently From Brazil.

By the Associated Press

BERLIN, Dec. 28.—The first cases recorded in Germany of the so-called "parrots' disease," which recently caused deaths in South America, have ended in the death of three persons. Nine others are ill.

City toxicologists and veterinarians say they have traced the illness in the 12 cases to parrots brought to Germany recently from Brazil.

The dead were members of two families owning the parrots. Physicians at first diagnosed the illness as pneumonia, with symptoms of typhoid fever, but further examination convinced them that it was parrots' disease." Three birds also died.

CHILD RIDERS WIN APPLAUSE IN CONTESTS

Handle Mounts Like Veterans in Junior Horse Show That Closes Today.

Little girls on big horses and shock haired boys on little ponies cantered about The Arena last night, competing for ribbons and cheers at the Junior Horse Show and Circus, which closes this afternoon.

Undismayed by the excitement of the show ring and the noise of the crowd, the young riders, few of whom have reached their 'teens, handled their mounts like veterans and then forgot all about horses and blue ribbons and such things in the excitement of watching clowns, tight rope walkers, elephants, lions and other circus features.

Betty Vanda Linda, who is "going on eight," won some of the ribbons and most of the applause from the time she took fourth place in the first event, the three-gaited combination in which the horses are first driven in harness then saddled and ridden, until she won the final event, the three-gaited pair. In this class, she rode "Bob" and shared honors with her partner Ruth Gander, riding "Will Rogers." She rode "Bob" to third place in the three-gaited mare or gelding class for children under 12.

Rides Unruly Horse.

Betty rode "Al Greis," once regarded as an unruly horse for even expert horsemen, in the first event and then Mary Vanda Linda took second place with him in the second number.

The crowd gave a collective gasp for a second and attendants ran across the tanbark during the three-gaited combination event when the rigs driven by Sarah Davis and Betty Berkley collided, throwing Sarah over the dashboard. She wasn't hurt, however, and returned with a new rig, finally winning the event. Betty Berkley's horse began unruly and she withdrew, later riding about the ring. Otis Brown, driving and riding "Rowdy," took second place and Ruth Gander, with "Will Rogers" took third.

Other Winners.

Lilly Claire Faust, on "Al Gries Jr." owned by Dr. John R. Caulk, won the three-gaited mare or gelding class for riders under 12, and John K. Raethel on "Rowdy" was fourth, with the Vanda Linda girls taking the two other places.

Second place in the three-gaited fair event was won by Mary Vanda Linda on "Al Greis" with Lilly Claire Faust on "Al Jr." Sarah Davis on "Morning Sun" with Marcella Borkley on "Morning Maid" took third, and fourth prize went to Otis Brown on "Rowdy" and Betty Berkley on "Bow Boy."

After the Mother Goose pageant, which opens each performance, virtually all of the children appeared in a fancy costume number. Some were dressed as knigths of old, others as cowboys, some as princes, others as peasants.

Curly headed Jean McCollum, brave in glittering armor as Joan of Arc, won first award. Henri Chouteau Jr., as a shiek, was second. John Henry Pohlman, as a prince, was third and Leta K. Webb, who dressed as a cavalier, was fourth.

8.5 PCT. INCREASE IN AUTOS

26,562,713 Now in Use in the United States.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Dec. 28.—During 1929 more than 2,000,000 motor vehicles were added to the number in use in the United States, a compilation of registration figures by the magazine Motor, made public today, disclosed. Passenger cars and trucks now in use total 26,562,713, as compared with 24,479,648 a year ago. The increase in registration was 8.5 per cent over 1928, as compared with an increase of 5.9 per cent in 1928 over 1927.

Passenger cars registered number 23,262,843, an increase of 8.8 per cent over 1928, and trucks 3,299,870, an increase of 6.1 per cent. New York retained the lead in registrations, with 2,292,000 motor vehicles, about 250,000 more than California, Ohio, Pennsylvania, Illinois and Michigan ranking next in order. Florida was the only State to show a loss in registrations, but the decline was smaller than in the two previous years.

TRI-STATE ORE PRICES STEADY

Sale of Zinc for Three Weeks Exceeds Production.

By the Associated Press.

JOPLIN, Dec. 28.—Ore prices remained unchanged at $35 for prime Western grades, down to $32 for float concentrates and $75 a ton for lead in the Tri-state district in the closing week of the year.

Demand for concentrates was brisk, the zinc smelters contracting for 9410 tons and the lead buyers taking all concentrates available. Sale of zinc for the last three weeks has exceeded the production by almost 15,000 tons. Zinc shipment for the year came to 612,863 tons, with a value of $25,737,733, as compared with a shipment of 597,382 tons with a value of $23,279,156 in 1928.

STRONG, WITH 14 POINTS, IS LEADING SCORER IN BILLIKENS' FOURTH VICTORY OF YEAR

By James M. Gould

Big Six competition proved no bar to the basketball progress of the St. Louis University Billikens and the Blue and White team last night recorded its fourth straight 1929 victory by defeating Nebraska Universiy, 37-27. The score doesn't indicate the superiority of the Billikens, but in justice to the visiting team it is to be recorded that it was the Huskers' first contest of the season.

The bright shining star of the Billiken offense was Ham Strong, who scored seven field goals for 14 points. Maclay and Witte were the Nebraska high-score men with six points each. Nebraska scored only one field goal in the first period but kept in the running by converting 10 free throws to make the first half count, St. Louis 14, Nebraska 12. All the Billiken scoring in this half was by the field goal method.

The attendance was estimated at 3500.

A Five-Man Defense.

Opening slowly, the first scoring came when Drury fouled Maclay, who was awarded three free throws, making good on two of them. Hunt missed a good shot but a neat pass, Hunt to Joyce to Drury let the latter sink a field basket to tie the count. The Billikens opened up after this but the Huskers went into a shell with a five-man defense which permitted the Billikens to stall considerably in an endeavor to draw the Nebraskans out. Strong scored another basket to make it 4-2 but the Huskers added a point when Grace made good on a free throw after a foul by Joyce. The Huskers took a lead when Hunt fouled Fisher and the latter made good on his two tries. Oldfield then scored a field goal but Drury, fouled by Witte, missed two free throws.

The Billikens then tried again to draw Nebraska out and failing to do so rushed, Joyce scoring. Lewandowski made a free throw good but the Bills led, 10-6, when Strong took a pass from Joyce and counted from the floor.

Drury and Oldfield brought the Billikens on the right end of a 14-10 count, but two good free throws by Witte made the count 14-12 as the period closed without either team having made a substitution.

Nebraska Takes Lead.

Drury opened the second half with a field goal and Grave, for Nebraska, retaliated with one a few seconds later. With the score 16-14, Grace tied it at 16-16 and a fine shot by Maclay put the Huskers in the lead by two points. Nebraska then came out of its defensive shell and ran the score to 20-16 when Maclay sunk a long throw. Strong and Fisher then exchanged field goal compliments and a free throw by Oldfield made it 22-19, Nebraska up. Eight minutes after the period started, Strong scored again and the Billikens, with 21 points, were still one behind. But the clever Strong was good

WRAY'S COLUMN

Good Fight, Nobody Hurt.

TUFFY GRIFFITHS is now in the running for a heavyweight fight at Miami. Johny Risko's decisive defeat by Tuffy opens the door to negotiations. Because he is a willing mixer, throws lot of gloves and is very fast, Griffiths would make a much better foe for Sharkey, scientifically speaking, than the ponderous Campolo, the slow Von Porat or the wild-swinging Paulino.

Tuffy is a fancier man with his fists than any opponent Sharkey has met of late years and it would be quite interesting to see just what Sharkey as a boxer would do to a man who is at least as clever as himself.

From a standpoint of damage done the event would probably prove a dud and the boys who like to see them carry the victims to their corners might be a bit peeved.

Punches Lack Horsepower.

THE fact is that, despite seven knockouts in his record this year, Tuffy is not a stiff puncher while Sharkey is a pawderpuff variety of hitter. A wrangle between them at Miami would have to be purely along lines of speed and cleverness. It should be worth while, if arranged, but not sensational.

Because Griffiths is young and his possibilities of improvement not yet exhausted, as is the case with Paulino, Risko, Sharkey and other "hopes" attention will center about this lively youngster.

To become a "wow" he will have to show more ability to punish than he displayed against Paulino, who brushed him aside or rushed in undisturbed by Tuffy's glove massaging.

A Losing Fight.

WILLIE HOPPE once more is tangling with the "billiard trust," as the big manufacturing concern which controls professional championship play and players has been termed. Because he could not agree to a "contract" offer made by the company Hoppe withdrew from the three-cushion tournament, forcing the promoters to substitute Allen Hall of St. Louis. Henceforth Willie automatically drops out of all competition, balkline too, until his difficulties can be straightened out.

Fighting against the octopus is not a joy ride. Controlling all competition, the trust can starve out its enemies. In every case in the past the octopus came through with the honors of war—with one exception. That was when Hoppe, steered by the crafty Benny Benjamin, told the "trust" where to head in on numerous occasions, and went about his business as he pleased. The trust needed Willie and so did not excommunicate him.

Today Hoppe is still a great star. But he is not the LONE star he was in the old days when there was none in the United States who could even approach him. On the other hand, at that time Willie was a balkline artist purely, whereas today he is right up with the champions both at three cushion and balkline. He is still 18.1 title holder, if memory serves, although that style of play is somewhat obsolete.

Willie is still too good a man

Smalling was Stanford's star ball-carrier in the California school's 34-13 victory over Army, at Palo Alto, yesterday. In the play pictured, in the first quarter, Smalling is shown after a tackle by Miller of West Point. Smalling later scored three touchdowns.

ALUMNI SIGNING PETITION TO KEEP COACH ANDERSON

St. Louis University alumni are signing and circulating petitions asking the president of the institution to retain Heartly Anderson as head football coach, the Post-Dispatch has learned. Former students and athletes, members of the faculty and of the "S. L." Club have been asked to sign the petitions, which have made their appearance in all sections of St. Louis and also on the East Side.

The petition follows:

"We, the undersigned alumni, faculty members, team members and S. L. men of St. Louis University, convinced that the athletic future of our alma mater depends largely on retaining Heartly Anderson as head coach at the school, petition the president to make possible his continuance in that position.

"We believe he has been as successful as any one could have been with the material furnished him. We believe his influence over the student body is such that he will greatly aid in building a spirit of loyalty at the school. We believe he is the best coach the university can possibly obtain at the present time, and that he should be given every opportunity over a sufficient period of time to develop an athletic policy at the school which will place her where she properly belongs among the larger universities of the country."

Alumni Back Movement.

Prominent alumni of St. Louis University are backing the movement. When the signatures are obtained they will present the signed petitions to the alumni representative of the athletic board and request that he officially present them to the university president.

"The purpose of the petition is to determine the strength of the sentiment in favor of retaining Anderson," a prominent alumnus told the Post-Dispatch last night. "Some of us feel that Anderson did a great deal to build up football at our alma mater and that failure to retain him would result in several years of chaotic football. A coach must become a fixture before he can command the respect of the

Open Hand Pays $110 for $2 At Agua Caliente Opening; Scot's Grey Wins Feature

By the Associated Press.

AGUA CALIENTE, Lower California, Mexico, Dec. 2.—Staging a stubborn fight to maintain a lead gained at the start, Scot's Grey, a 5-year-old gelding owned by W. R. Coe of New York, with Nick Richardson up, today won the $2000 Inaugural Handicap, feature of the opening of the 81-day meeting of the Agua Caliente $2,000,000 racing plant.

The roan entry ran a strong race, battling with Fire Brigade, second place horse, and Battle Ax third, to finish over the mile and one-sixteenth. Ten thousand racing enthusiasts, who turned out to see the opening program of eight races, gave the New Yorker's entry a rousing reception as it lengthened the early advantage of a few inches to a half length in the spurt down the stretch.

Scimitar, of the Agua Caliente stable, which went to the post as a favorite, came up from a bad sixth, pressing the fast tiring Battle Ax hard at the finish, six lengths behind the leader. Wirt G. Bowman, also named as a possible winner, finished on the heels of his stable mate, Scimitar. Port O'Play, Negopoli and Riprap were among the also rans.

The winner paid the small price of $8.70 on the $2 mutuel tickets, with P. L. Ciceri, Chicago horseman's second place entry paying 13 to 1.

The biggest money winner of the day came in the second race on the program, when J. Eckert, Canadian owner, put over Open Hand, a seven-year-old, to win the mile and sixteenth event in 1:51, and paying 54 to 1.

Tonto Rock and Proctor Hug won the other two outstanding features of the afternoon over the five and one-half furlong distances. Proctor Hug's was the best time, winning over Infinity in one minute 6 4-5 seconds. Tonto Rock negotiated the distance in 1:07 4-5, to beat out Good and Hot.

Size of Crowd Disappointing.

The crowd which crossed the border last night and today in anticipation of the opening of the racing season, was far below that expected by the management.

Santa Clara U. Asks Billikens About 1930 Game

By the Associated Press.

SANTA CLARA, Cal., Dec. 28.—George Lynn, graduate manager of Santa Clara University, announced today he had sent out letters to several Eastern and Mid-Western colleges asking if they would be interested in home and home football games beginning next season. Negotiations have not exceeded that stage, however. Lynn said St. Louis University was included in the list but that actual plans for games had not been taken up.

E. R. BRADLEY, RACE TRACK OWNER, IS ILL

By the Associated Press.

NEW ORLEANS, Dec. 28.—Edward Riley Bradley, owner of the Fairgrounds Race Track, is ill at a local hotel here and has been confined to his room for a week. While his condition is not considered serious, he will not be allowed to leave his room for some time, and there is grave doubt of his being able to travel to Palm Beach.

Mr. Bradley arrived in New Orleans a few days before Christmas. No official bulletin has been given out on the nature of his sickness.

KARTHEISER TAKES LEAD IN DETROIT BOWLING EVENT; SMITH LAST

By the Associated Press.

DETROIT, Mich., Dec. 28. — Frank Kartheiser of Chicago, took the lead in the invitational Round Robin Bowling Tournament tonight by defeating Fred Gardella of Detroit, 2064 to 1986 in a rather dull block.

The two bowlers had been tied for first place and each seemed to be straining too hard for brilliant play. Kartheiser now has won three blocks and lost none. Gardella has won two and lost one; Charlie Daw of Milwaukee, has won one and lost two, and Jimmy Smith of Chicago, has lost three.

Kartheiser made 56 strikes, 43 spares, 7 splits and 5 errors. Gardella made 54 strikes, 43 spares, 12 splits and 2 errors. In the first two blocks played today, Gardella defeated Daw, 2200 to 2100, and Kartheiser downed Smith, 2193 to 2029.

SMALLING MAKES THREE TOUCHDOWNS, TURNS GAME TO ROUT IN SECOND HALF

By the Associated Press.

PALO ALTO, Cal., Dec. 28.—As afternoon shadows began to trace their message of impending darkness in the huge Stanford Bowl today, more than 70,000 spectators huddled around its embankments saw a great Stanford team beat down the stubborn defensive of Army's eleven and crush the soldiers under a 34-13 score, their most decisive beating of the year.

Outrushed, outpassed and with their all-America halfback marvel, "Red" Cagle, guarded as closely as 11 charging opposing warriors can guard one man, the Cadets were overwhelmed by a Stanford offensive that rose to new and brilliant heights for 1929.

Surging, crushing power, generated from the dazzling reverses and fake reverses that Coach Glenn "Pop" Warner had fashioned for his current gridiron machine, spelled the doom of an Army squad that barely lost to Notre Dame, 7—0, a few weeks ago. Two final periods saw the soldiers wilt under the smashing attack of the Cardinal and White jerseyed team that finished its regular season in a four-way tie for the Pacific Coast Conference championship.

Second Half a Rout.

In the last two quarters, Stanford pounded over for three touchdowns. The first half ended 14—13, with Army on the short end, but in the closing sessions, its line was pierced and its defense battered down before the tremendous reserve strength that went on the field.

A fumble by Cagle in the third period started the drive for points that saw Stanford pull away from its Eastern rival in the score board total. On his own 17-yard line the "Red Knight" dropped the ball and Driscoll, Cardinal guard, recovered. Four powerful lunges at the Cadets forward wall by Smalling, fullback, brought a touchdown. The try for point from placement was wide but Stanford held a 20-13 lead.

With their opponents on the run, the Cards crashed over for two more touchdowns in the last quarter, knifing through for yardage almost as they pleased. Each drive was from near midfield. Once Smalling went over and the last time Fleischhacker carried the ball over for its final ride.

Army Battles Foes Even in First Half; Smalling Outshines Cagle and Is Big Star

The big post-season crowd filled the stands to watch the performances of Cagle but it stayed to set an amazing individual feat of football by one of the sons of Stanford—"Chuck' Smalling. Here, there, everywhere, the Card fullback closed his college career in a blaze of glory such as few other gridiron heroes have done here in many years.

In 28 plunges at the line Smalling battered his way for a total of 149 yards. His defensive work was dazzling. His three touchdowns already have been noted. Cagle, in the 11 times he lugged the ball, chalked up a total of 50 yards.

Thus, intersectional honors were claimed for a second successive year by those who wear the Cardinal and White. One year ago this month, Stanford's delegates took their gridiron wares to New York City. They headed West with 26 points. Army remained at home, scoreless.

Opening Half a Thriller.

The crowd got its money's worth out of a first half jammed with thrills from opening kickoff to midtime gun. The Army scored first after a 50-yard thrust had culminated in a touchdown. Before the initial period was over the Cardinals had evened the count at 6-6, neither side completing the tries for point.

Soon after the second quarter got under way Stanford went into the lead through the medium of an automatic safety. Spurred on by the sudden advantage, the Cards rushed their way from the Soldier 39-yard line to a second touchdown. The try for point failed but Warner's ball toters held a 14-6 margin.

The substantial lead was heartening for the moment but decidedly brief. Cagle returned a punt 18 yards to Stanford's 44-yard line. Two plays later the tricky Cadet captain whipped one of his bullet-like passes while racing to the left. Hutchinson picked the ball out of the air and ran 25 yards to score. Hutchinson place-kicked the try for point that brought the Soldiers to within a lone point of their rivals.

Smalling Runs 46 Yards.

Two minutes before the second period ended Smalling broke away and galloped 46 yards from his own 14-yard line. Malloy, substituting at right end for Messinger, overtook and hauled down the big white-jreseyed charger and the half-time gun ended further activities.

Murrel Gets Touchdown.

Army's first touchdown followed a quick change in the two teams' fortunes. Carver, soldier quarterback, fumbled and Taylor, center, recovered for Stanford on the opposition's 46-yard line. The Cardinals tried the air and failed. Miller, center, intercepted Smalling's pass on his own 40-yard line and pounded 10 yards to midfield.

Cagle, packing the ball for the first time, squirmed seven yards. Murrel made four yards and a first down. The Army fullback added five yards more and Cagle passed a short one to Carl Mark, the latter speeding 15 yards before he was stopped 29 yards from goal. Murrel and Cagle alternated in packing the ball to the two-yard mark, from whence Murrel went over.

The Cards evened the count af-

PALO ALTO, Cal., Dec. 28.

STATISTICS show Stanford's supremacy over Army in their game here today. Carrying the ball 65 times the Cardinals piled up a total of 244 yards. Army's 38 attempts at yard gaining resulted in a total of 94 yards from scrimmage.

Stanford made 14 first downs from scrimmage and passes. Army chalked up six first downs by ground and air.

The Cards passed 14 times, completed four and had two intercepted. The Cadets tried the aerial lanes nine times, completed three and had three caught by the opposition.

Stanford was penalized a total of 45 yards and Army 25 yards.

Rothert and Moffatt, Stanford halfbacks, punted nine times for a composite average of 42.8 yards. Murrel and Golden for Army averaged 36.6 yards in nine times.

MADISONS MEET HELLRUNGS IN FIRST ROUND NATIONAL CUP GAME

LOCAL ELEVENS RATED EVEN AS RACE FOR U. S. CROWN STARTS

By Herman Wecke

When the Madisons, tailenders in the St. Louis Soccer League, take the field against the Hellrungs in a first round National Challenge cup game at Sportsman's Park this afternoon, Phil Kavanaugh's men will be defending the Western championship, won last season, for the first time. The match will serve to introduce local elevens to the title competition of the United States Football Association. The game will start at 2:30 o'clock with Ribby Murphy as referee.

In another first round battle, the league-leading Ben Millers will tackle the Tablers, New Year's day. The winners will go on in the competition, but whether they will be paired against each other in the second round, depends on the draw.

Two fine combinations will introduce the title series in St. Louis. Both the Madisons and Hellrungs are capable of some fine soccer. However, the Madisons, after a fine start, have not played up to the standard which made the team Western champion a year ago. The eleven, after winning its first two matches without being scored upon, has had its trouble in putting over a victory. In fact, only one of the last nine tilts has resulted in a conquest for the men of Kavanaugh.

The Hellrungs, on the other hand, in fighting to a second-place tie with the Tablers, have come with a rush. Tate Brady's men started slowly, but since Jack O'Reilly has been shifted to center forward, the eleven has been a tough customer for the other clubs in the circuit.

In the last meeting between the two elevens, the Madisons put over a 2 to 1 victory, Eddie Flavin putting through a goal in the last few minutes to stop the winning march of the Hellrungs.

The forward lines of the opposing teams have plenty of speed and have at times employed some sound passing. Joe McCarthy and Eddie Flavin are the scoring aces for the Madisons. McCarthy is second in league scoring this season with eight. The leader is "Dinty" Moore, the Tabler forward, with nine. McCarthy and Moore figured in the trade between the two elevens during the off-season. Flavin has tallied five times.

Brady's forward line does not boast of two men with a punch of this sort. But O'Reilly, Hart, Ahrens, Pastor and O'Shaughnessy are all dangerous. Pastor and O'Shaughnessy, the wingmen, have developed into two of the best outside men in the league. The Madisons also own a real star in Eddie Hanson, at outside left.

Two of the league's star center halfbacks, the veteran Eddie Burke and Bill Lehman, will be opponents. Jimmy Nolan and Joe Hand, rival fullbacks, rank with the best in the city. The "goalies," Bertel and LaBarge, are capable of brilliant soccer.

The admission price will be 75 cents for men and women and 25 cents for children under 16 years of age.

There is a possibility that Johnny Worden, star inside forward of the Madisons, who suffered a fracture of the cheek bone in a collision some weeks ago, will be used in the front line. Manager Kavanaugh will make no definite decision until he consults a physician on Worden's true condition. If Worden plays, O'Neil will likely go to the sidelines.

Benton Rangers Win.

BENTON, Ill., Dec. 28.—The Galatia High School cage squad of the "Little Ten" Conference lost to the Benton Rangers here last night by the score of 32-21. The game was very close up to the final quarter when the locals gradually drew away from the visitors.

In a preliminary game the Benton second team defeated the Galatia second 15-12.

Football Officials Like Their Work So Well, They'd Serve Without Pay

It's Fine Exercise, Keeps You Out in the Open and You Get a Wonderful View of the Gridiron Struggles.

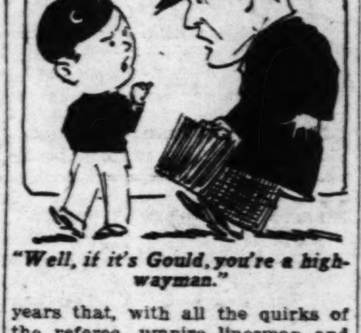
By James M. Gould

JUST as "All Gaul is divided into three parts" so is the enjoyment of a football game partitioned three ways between the players, the spectators and the officials. It may seem to the spectators that the officials are just "yorking"—that it is the fee which interests them more than anything else. It sometimes seems to the players, perhaps, that whatever the officials are being paid, it is far too much. This thought probably comes after their team has been penalized and a promising advance broken up by the penalty.

But don't get the idea that an official isn't enjoying himself out there on the gridiron. The fees do not explain why men officiate year after year and try for full schedules of games. The money, of course, is welcome but it is entirely probable that there is a large group of well known officials of football who, should the work be placed on a non-paying basis, would want to officiate anyway. In almost every case, an official has been a player himself. A love for the game has been bred in him and he does not want to lose touch with what was his favorite sport.

Good Outdoor Job.

Then, the work is good exercise and keeps one "out in the open air." This writer started to officiate in football games—well, a good many years ago. Perhaps, if directors of athletics knew exactly how many, assignments might be fewer. Therefore, it shall be a secret or—oh, well, it might as well come out. It was 21 years ago. And, the thought persists of late years that, with all the quirks of the referee, umpire linesman and field judge jobs, this referee of 21 years ago must have been rather sad. Anyway, he was told so sufficiently often.



"Well, if it's Gould, you're a highwayman."

Some years back, this observer was assigned to referee the championship game between Central High and Lafayette High of Buffalo, N. Y. Bemis Pierce, the famous Indian player, was the umpire. During the course of the game, Central seemed to have scored a touchdown but this referee called the ball back and Lafayette later won the game and the title, 7-0. After a shower, I left the park and was walking toward the gate.

Up came a youth, about 5 feet tall and weighing not more than 90 pounds. On his head was a cap with a "C" for Central on it.

This was the conversation:

Youth: Would you mind telling me your name?

Referee: Not at all. Why?

Youth: Well, if it's Gould, you're a highwayman.

One From West Point.

While in the army, the writer captained and coached a regimental team. On it was one of the best tackles he ever saw. Another officer, who fancied himself rather highly as a player and who, to tell the truth, interfered with the work of the team more than he aided its progress, was constantly changing the coaching ideas. By the way, he "ranked" the coach. This officer had played on the line at the University of Colorado before entering the army and there seemed only one thing to do. He was requested to scrimmage one afternoon and was opposed by the enlisted man who was a great tackle.

Before the scrimmage, I took the enlisted man aside. "You'll be playing opposite Lieut. So-and-So," I said.

"Oh, yeah?" was his drawling reply. They had that expression even then.

"Yes," I continued; "give him all you got. I don't care if he don't come out any more. Get me?"

He grinned in a way which made me certain he did "get me."

The scrimmage started, and in less than a minute, Lieut. So-and-So was carried off the parade ground with a broken leg. To make the story good, the enlisted man came from St. Louis and still lives here. For obvious reasons, the name of the officer is withheld, although I remember him very well.

One on Don Henry.

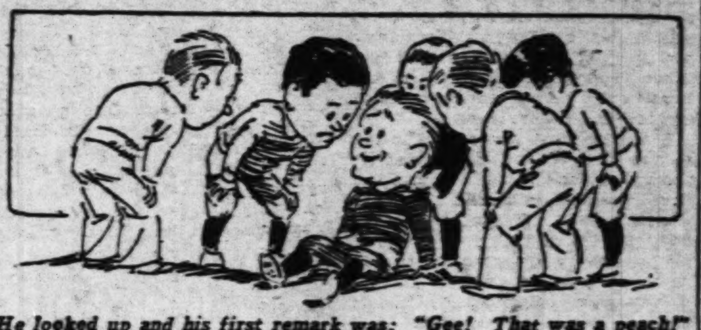
But that's a bit off the path of the humor and fun of officiating. Hardly a game is played that doesn't contain plenty to laugh at. For instance: A few years ago here I was umpire in a game between St. Louis University and an Illinois college—I think it was Lombard. The Billikens were right that day and were compiling a top-heavy score.

The referee that day was one of the best officials in the business—Don Henry of St. Louis. In the third quarter, a Billiken back got away and was headed toward a touchdown with a clear field. About 20 yards away from the other team's line he was when the referee's whistle shrilled. There had had been no foul that I could see so I went back to where Henry was standing and said: 'Why the whistle?'

"Darned if I know," was Henry's intriguing reply. "I just blew it." But the ball was "dead" by the whistle and for no reason at all.

I'm sure Sir Don won't mind my telling that one.

Sometimes the interpreting of the rules is a bit intricate. There was a play in the Davis-Elkins-St. Louis game last October which called for some quick thinking on the part of the referee—Milt Ghee, formerly All-America quarterback from Dartmouth.



He looked up and his first remark was: "Gee! That was a peach!"

The situation was this: the score was Davis-Elkins, 16; St. Louis, 13. There was less than a minute to play and the ball was in the Billikens' possession and in their own territory. They sensed their only chance to win was by passing so Joyce dropped back to try one. Only seconds were left as he "incompleted" one. Then, another, and while the ball was in the air, the pistol shot by the Field Judge sounded. Now, here's the intricacy. The pass hit the ground after the whistle. Ordinarily, that wouldn't have hurt the Billikens any but, a foul having been called on the play, the referee rightfully and instantly ruled another play for the Billikens. Naturally, it was a pass and Joyce's heave landed in the arms of an Eastern player who ran for a touchdown and made the final score: Davis-Elkins, 22; St. Louis, 13. Actually, a touchdown had been scored after the time legally was up:

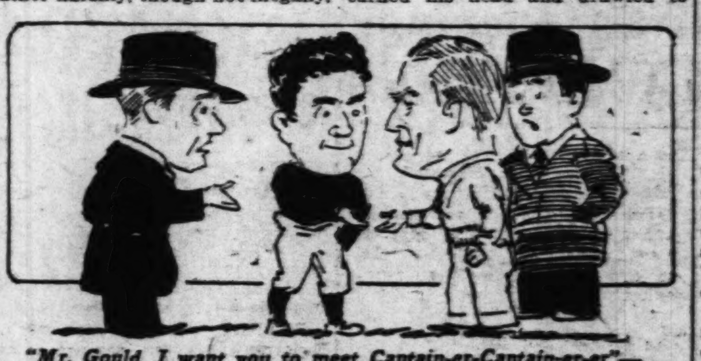
Also, this proves what often has been denied—that a football official does think.

An Appreciative Victim.

The attitude of some players sometimes affords a laugh. There was Follett, the New York University half-back who ran 63 yards for a touchdown to help in the downfall of Missouri in November. Follett isn't a big chap and, as safety man on kicks, was handled rather harshly, though not illegally, by the Missouri forwards. On one occasion, two Missouri ends sandwiched Follett just after he had caught a punt and the New Yorker went down and out.

He remained "out" for more than a minute. His reaction to the play and the hammering was illuminating.

As he came to, his eyelids fluttered, then opened. He looked up and his first remark was "Gee, that was a peach." Yes, he was rated a star as might be imagined with a disposition to give and take like that.



"Mr. Gould, I want you to meet Captain-er-Captain-er-er"—

Ever hear of a coach who didn't know his captain's name?

St. Louis was scheduled with Loyola of Chicago, here. Before the starting whistle, the captains are introduced to the officials and to each other. My turn came first and the Chicago coach said, "Mr. Gould, I want you to meet Captain er-er-captain er-er" and groped. An assistant coach prompted. "Captain Flynn."

"Oh, yes," said the head coach, "Captain Flynn." It may have been that a desire to beat the Billikens had overcome some eligibility scruples. That is offered simply as a possibility. The coach might have been more than ordinarily forgetful. Sure; he MIGHT have been.

A Witty Fellow.

It was this same coach, by the way, who won a verbal argument from the writer.

In the game, a Loyola player had been put out for slugging. It was a flagrant case and his disqualification had been naturally followed by the loss of half the distance to the goal line. As it was a close game all the way, the penalty hurt.

After the second quarter, I was walking off the field when the Loyola coach met me and said, "Mr. Gould, it wasn't necessary for you to call that slugging. You might have called it unnecessary roughness"—a foul which calls for a penalty of only 15 yards.

"Oh, no," said I patiently, "that was slugging and nothing else. You were a good player yourself, Coach, and you should know you couldn't come down here and get away with anything like that. I've been refereeing for too many years to let you."

He fixed me with slightly-smiling eyes. "That's the trouble," he said, "you've been refereeing for TOO many years."

He won that one.

Nesbitt a Real Star.

Dick Nesbitt, the Drake halfback, was one of the greatest players the Missouri Valley ever developed. He had the ideal football disposition. He never worried, no matter what the phase of the game or what the score. In the night game between Washington and Drake here last fall, the Bears staged a stubborn defense. Then Drake broke through for a single score.

This, instead of getting the Bears "down," had the opposite effect and they began a march down the field. They seemed, for about two minutes, to be able to gain at will. Drake played King and Nesbitt back as safety men. As field judge the writer was back with them.

The situation looked black and I looked for some show of excitement by the safety men. I took position near Nesbitt to learn his reaction. It was this:

As a Washington back tore through an eight-yard gain, Nesbitt turned his head and drawled to me: "Looks bad, doesn't it? Too bad if they should score now." I was surprised; thought he ought to have been more tensely ready. But he didn't seem to have a care in the world. The Bears, you would have thought, were simply staging a spectacle for his personal benefit. His apparent carelessness was so marked that I watched more closely. Suddenly, a Washington back got past the secondary and headed down the field. His lethargy immediately gone, Nesbitt braced himself for the tackle, and, meeting the flying Bear—it was "Red Ted" Sausele—brought him down neatly. So far as unnecessary worry was concerned, Nesbitt, as the English would say, "just wasn't having any."

These are just a few instances of the humor and philosophy of the game. They may serve to show why so many football veterans continue in touch with the sport by officiating.

KASTNER AND STEIN MEET IN SECOND BLOCK

Frank Kastner and Otto Stein Jr., star tenpinners, will meet in the second 10-game block of their 40-game special match contest on the Washington alleys this afternoon, with the first game scheduled for 1:30 p. m. Stein enjoys a 75-pin lead over his rival at the present time, having gained the margin in the first block, rolled Christmas night. Stein totaled 2147 for the first 10 games, an average of 214 7-10, while Kastner scored 2072 to average 207 2-10. The dates of the two remaining blocks will be announced later. Today's match will be rolled on Alleys 17 and 18 on the sixth floor of the Washington drives.

HERMAN LEADS VETERANS' BOWLING TOURNAMENT

E. Herman took the lead in the all-events of the War Veterans' tenpin tournament at Rogers Recreation alleys yesterday with a score of 1255. Richards led the singles division with 647 while Hamilton and Stuppy were high in the doubles with 1225. Three squads rolled and four are scheduled today.

SILVER SKATES CARD INCLUDES VETERANS' RACE

The skater of the last century, as well as of the present one, will show in the annual Silver Skates Carnival, scheduled for next Sunday on Grand Basin, in Forest Park.

A veterans' race, in which Joe Forshaw will compete, will open the program, which will include a variety of speed events and fancy skating exhibitions. Forshaw won the Southwestern skating championship in 1899, and still is a regular participant in the Forest Park carnivals.

Others in Veterans' Race.

Along with Forshaw in the veterans' event will be Harry Lang, Oscar Blankenmeister and others, some who might be called younger veterans. Harry Woods and Jack Mooney will be among them. Lang was city champion in 1922, and proudly recalls a victory in 1909, when he, Forshaw and Blankenmeister engaged in a marathon race of 26 miles 385 yards.

The committee in charge of the carnival is considering trying to get nationally-known skating figures to come here for the Silver Skates program. Names mentioned include Leila Brooks Potter of Canada; Loretta Neitzel of Detroit, and Wallace Mitchell and Melville Johnson.

Events for Local Skaters.

Events for local skaters should attract considerable attention as St. Louis skaters have been developing rapidly. The struggle between Otto Brands, city champion, and Harold Dubinsky, Wisconsin U. star, will be a feature of the outdoor meet. Brands has won the Silver Skates for the past two years.

Lillian Hayes and Beatrice Slater are the two chief contestants in the women's races, while Melvin Dubinsky is expected to win the intermediate boys' events. Truman Connell is a favorite in the junior class. Other events include a juvenile race, a couples races, and fancy skating competition.

In the event of warm weather next Sunday, the event will be automatically postponed for a week at a time until the races are possible.

Sidney Seligson's Defeat Features Indoor Net Play

NEW YORK, Dec. 28.—John Richardson, a lanky 18-year-old Dartmouth sophomore, played surprisingly good tennis today to bring about the downfall of Sidney Seligson of New York University, and reach the quarterfinal round of the national junior indoor championship in progress here.

Spiking Seligson's hard-driving game by deft and sharply angled volleying Richardson improved as the match progressed and finally eliminated the No. 2 seeded player by scores of 7—9, 6—2, 6—4.

Young Seligson, a brother of the former national intercollegiate outdoor champion, Julius Seligson of Lehigh, had been favored jointly with William Jacobs of Baltimore to capture the title. Richardson, though no stranger to tournament competition, was not among the 16 players selected for seeding in the draw. He plays Sheldon Morganstein of the City College of New York in the quarterfinals on Monday.

Jacobs trounced a fellow player from Baltimore, Herman Goldberg of Johns Hopkins, 7—5, 6—3, and Aaron Miller, another Baltimorean, gained a quarterfinal bracket by subduing Alfred Oshinsky, New York schoolboy, 6—4, 4—6, 8—6.

In his next match on Monday, Jacobs meets Ed Luchs of the University of Pennsylvania, who defeated Walter Rothschild, New Rochelle, N. Y., 6—2, 6—4.

The national boys' indoor singles also narrowed to the last eight survivors with Frankie Parker of Milwaukee, Bernard Friedman of Philadelphia and Mark Hecht of New York, leading the way. Parker and Friedman meet Monday in a promising quarterfinal duel.

Hecht smashed through Jack Lobell of Far Rockway High School, in love sets, while Parker downed Stanley Mindlin of New York, 6—0, 6—1, and Friedman beat James Spalding of New York, 6—1, 6—1.

Doubles in both divisions got under way and a feature of the boys' or "short pants championship" was the playing of 9-year-old Bobby Low of New York, and his brother, Stuart, 11, although they lost to Beban and Marks, New York, 6—3, 6—3.

In the junior doubles, Friedman and Hecht, one of the most formidable combinations, crushed Kaplan and Kalb, New York, 6—0, 6—0.

What Would Rog Hornsby Have Done for the Cubs With Two Sound "Props?"

Bone Growth on Heel Handicapped Rogers All Season but He Didn't Squawk.

By J. Roy Stockton

ROGERS HORNSBY.

ROGERS HORNSBY has gained many honors during his long baseball career, but perhaps one of his most remarkable achievements was winning the National League's "most valuable player" prize in 1929, when he played throughout the season with an injured heel that would have kept most players on the bench.

Hornsby not only battled for the batting championship and convinced a committee of baseball writers that he was the most valuable man to his team in the league, but also managed to keep secret the fact that he was playing under a handicap.

"There wasn't any use in telling the world about my foot," Hornsby explained. "McCarthy and the Cubs' trainer knew about it, but nobody else knew about it. The ball club needed me and it was up to me to get around the best I could.

"Each day before the game I'd have the foot taped. Gauze bandages first, and then adhesive tape, drawn tight. I soon found that I had to have both ankles taped, so I wouldn't be favoring the bad one and that was quite a job. It was bad enough on ordinary days, but when there were double-headers it was pretty tough. I'd go into the clubhouse right after the first game and take the bandages off. That would give the blood a chance to circulate freely again and rest the ankle muscles. But believe me, at night I didn't feel like doing any visiting. Probably a good thing I don't go in for dances and such silly stuff. All I wanted to do after a ball game was get to my room and lay the body down.

Trouble Began in 1928

"I DON'T remember when I first hurt the heel. Probably rounding a base, or perhaps stepping on a stone or clod when running. At any rate the foot began to bother me during spring training with the Braves at St. Petersburg. You don't get much chance to rest a foot when you play through a spring season and 154 league games and the heel continued to pain me through the 1928 season. Then I thought a winter of rest would fix it up, but it didn't and when I reported to the Cubs last spring, I soon learned that the heel was going to bother me again.

"It seems that the heel bone was bruised and as a result of constant irritation from jumping on it, as you have to do on a ball field, a growth was started. X-ray pictures showed that a little horn of bone was growing off the heel bone and it apparently was getting bigger all the time.

"No, I won't offer that as an alibi for striking out so many times in the world series. The foot didn't bother me when I was batting. You stand on your toes when you bat, and as the bruise was on my right foot it didn't bother me when I took my stride at the plate. But naturally the heel slowed me up in the field. A lot of experts told from time to time how I had slowed up pretty bad and was missing the grounders that I used to get. But what good would it have been to tell 'em about my heel. They'd have just said that Hornsby was offering his heel as an alibi for slowing up.

Not Such a Bad Player

"BUT the heel did hurt me in the field. It pained pretty bad when I started or stopped and it also hurt when I tried to run at full speed. But wouldn't I have been a great chump to take to the bench. I still was good enough to get a base hit occasionally and I couldn't have been so terrible in the field if the baseball writers decided that I was entitled to the valuable player prize and the thousand bucks."

Dr. Robert F. Hyland, club surgeon for the Cardinals and Browns, performed the operation for removal of the bone growth. Hornsby underwent the operation on a Saturday and was ordered to remain in St. John's Hospital until the following Saturday. But Monday morning he got out of bed, much to the discomfiture of the nurse on duty, who tried to persuade him to obey orders and remain in a horizontal position.

"Dr. Hyland left orders for you to remain in bed for several days and to remain in the hospital for a week," she explained.

"Tell Dr. Hyland I'm going to Chicago," Hornsby replied. "He has performed such a remarkable operation that I don't have to stay here any more. I've got one good leg and a crutch and why should I stay here? I'll be back when it's time to dress this foot again."

And Hornsby left the hospital, took a train to Chicago to let the club officials see that he had undergone the operation and then returned to St. Louis.

"I'm sure the foot is going to be all right now," Hornsby told the Post-Dispatch. "If it is, maybe some of the experts will change their mind about my having slowed up so much. If the foot still bothers me I'll just tape it up again and do the best I can. I'll be up there swinging and maybe I'll get a few base hits. Sure, we're going to win another pennant."

er gaining 20 yards on an exchange of punts. From the Army's 45-yard line, Frentrup skirted left end for 26 yards. Smalling passed to Muller, who was downed on the 10-yard line. Two bucks put the ball at the one-yard mark, and Fleishhacker went over.

Stanford Gets a Safety.

In the second quarter, a perfectly placed punt by Rothert netted Stanford an automatic safety. The 35-yard kick spiraled the ball out of bounds at Army's one-yard line. Murrel tried to punt out from behind his goal line but the pass from center was low. With tacklers closing in, Murrel threw the ball into open territory, but in doing so he stepped out of the end zone.

Army took a free kick after the safety and Frentrup raced back 27 yards on the first play of what later developed into Stanford's second touchdown.

On the Cadet's 39-yard mark, the Cards marched to scoring ground. Frentrup chopped off 12 yards and Smalling 16 yards. Eleven yards from their own goal line, the Soldiers were penalized for unnecessary roughness. On the next play Stanford was penalized five yards for backfield in motion but Fleishhacker brought the ball back four yards on a plunge and Smalling went over.

The big moment in Lanigan's score came in the third game in which he started with a spare, rolled eight consecutive strikes and then drew an 8-10 split in the tenth frame to wind up with 256. Lanigan received 21 pins a game handicap. Lee Bolin of the Flint Laundry team holds third position with 845 pins, two pins ahead of R. Bodycomb of the Hightower Cafes, who is fourth with 843. The fifth and final prize-winning position is held at present by Harry Fredericks of the Park Recreation with a total of 841.

Only six points separate th last-place club from the leader, which shows that the race in th American Association is a very close affair.

Play Duluth Tomorrow.

The Flyers play Duluth tomorrow and Wednesday, Minneapolis Jan. 4 and 6 and St. Paul Jan. and 10.

Curly Headly, captain, has been in charge of the squad during the workouts at the Winter Garden this week in the absence of Coach Moose Jamieson, who went to Cleveland, his home, for the holidays. Jamieson will join the squad at Chicago.

The club will be minus the services of Billy Hill, star forward, at least in the early games in the North, for he left Friday to attend the funeral of his sister in Portland, Ore. He is expected to rejoin the team at Minneapolis in time for the first game there.

Team in Good Condition.

All of the players are in good shape, having had ample time to recover from the minor injuries they suffered in the tough Tulsa series last week.

The invasion of the North will go a long way toward showing just what may be expected of the Flyers this year. So far, they lead the league in goal scoring, but they also have had more goals scored against them than any other team in the association.

for another field goal and the Billikens assumed a 23-22 lead and never thereafter were headed. A free throw by Drury and field goals by Hunt and Joyce helped considerably and when Conklin, a sub center, counted for Nebraska, it was 28-24. Oldfield counted after a fine Billiken rush but the Huskers kept in the running with a basket by Jensen, a Husker sub.

Two more field goals by Strong and a free throw score by Hokuf, a reserve man, brought the game to a close with the final count, St. Louis, 37; Nebraska, 27.

Only three of the St. Louis points came from free throws while the Cornhuskers counted 11 of their points on fouls.

Nebraska will continue the trip from Lincoln by playing Pittsburg and West Virginia while the Billikens meet Vanderbilt University here on New Year's Eve.

SHARKEY HEADS HEAVYWEIGHT RANKINGS, SCHMELING GOOD SECOND

JACK DEMPSEY MISSING FROM LIST FOR FIRST TIME; GODFREY PLACES THIRD IN CONSENSUS

THIS is the tenth and last in the series of articles ranking the boxers in the various weight divisions, as determined by a vote of 75 boxing writers in the leading pugilistic centers of the country. In the balloting, first place in the list of ten for each group counts for 10 points, second place for nine, etc., with the highest possible point total 750.

By Wilbur Wood,

Of the New York Sun Sport Staff.

NEW YORK, Dec. 28. — The richest prize in fistiana is the heavyweight championship. If the opinion of the 75 newspaper boxing critics who collaborated in the fourth annual national boxing consensus means anything, Jack Sharkey is entitled to wear the purple robes of the heavyweight king.

How Heavyweights Rank for 1929

Pos.—Boxer.	Pts.	Pct.
1. Jack Sharkey	722	.963
2. Max Schmeling	595	.793
3. George Godfrey	481	.641
4. Tommy Loughran	354	.472
5. Phil Scott	319	.425
6. Young Stribling	312	.416
7. Tuffy Griffiths	304	.405
8. Otto von Porat	276	.368
9. Paulino Uzcudun	131	.175
10. Vittorio Campolo	115	.153

HOW THEY RANKED FOR 1928.

(Highest possible point total, 600.)

Pos.—Boxer.	Pts.	Pct.
1. Jack Sharkey	517	.862
2 Jack Dempsey	451	.752
3. Young Stribling	406	.677
4. George Godfrey	314	.523
5. Paulino Uzcudun	301	.502
6. Tom Heeney	232	.387
7 Johnny Risko	226	.377
8. Knute Hansen	147	.245
9. Otto von Porat	95	.158
10. K. O. Christner	72	.120

Officially, the heavyweight throne in the hall of champions is vacant and probably will be until Sharkey and Max Schmeling, who is runner-up in the heavyweight race, fight it out, probably next summer. However, the balloting on the heavyweights leaves no room for doubt that Sharkey is the choice of expert opinion as the best heavyweight in the world.

The Bostonian draws 56 first place votes. Fifteen choose him for second place, three rank him third, and one selector tabs him as eighth. Only two other gladiators received No. 1 designation, 10 going to Schmeling and nine to George Godfrey, the current black menace.

Sharkey ranked at the head of the division a year ago, but the passing of 12 months has improved his point score. In 1928 the big sailor's percentage was .862, whereas this year his figure is .963.

Sharkey Boxed Only Twice.

Sharkey boxed only twice during the past year, and was victorious each time. His victory on points over Young Stribling at Miami Beach last February did not add any great amount of luster to his shield, but when he knocked out Tommy Loughran late last summer, Sharkey turned in a piece of work that sent his stock up many points to a new high.

Jack at present is under contract to box the best obtainable opponent at Miami late in the winter for the Madison Square Garden Corporation. Thus far the Garden people have been unable to dig up anyone who has any considerable box office appeal to sit in the opposite corner.

No master mind is required to perceive that a Sharkey-Schmeling contest would produce, in the person of a victor, a man who would be accepted universally as Gene Tunney's successor as champion of champions. Schmeling, however, is persona non grata with the Garden corporation, because of certain incidents last summer, which precludes the drafting of the Hamburg Hammerer as Sharkey's opponent in Florida.

Max is under contract to perform at the Atlantic City Auditorium on Feb. 22. If both he and Sharkey win their contests a mad scramble for a match between them will be on, with Jack Dempsey, the old Manassa Mauler himself, as one of the leading bidders.

Knockout of Risko and Victory Over Uzcudun Send Schmeling's Stock Up

Schmeling's rise from nowhere to second place in the consensus, with a total of 595 points for a percentage of .793, is the result of his brilliant work during the last year. The German's knockout victory over Johnny Risko was a tip-off that here was a fellow destined to get somewhere. When Max cut Paulino Uzcudun to ribbons in a big outdoor spectacle in New York, the German silenced those who still refused to accept him as a leading heavyweight factor after his defeat of the rubbery Risko.

George Godfrey occupies third place, despite some unsatisfactory performances. There is a rather general impression that the big black man generally wears invisible handcuffs when he steps into the ring to do battle with a leading white contender.

Tommy Loughran, who stepped into the heavyweight ranks after surrendering the 175-pound championship, is ranked fourth, though his point score is considerably lower than Godfrey's. Tommy achieves his high position despite the knockout he suffered at the hands of Sharkey.

Stribling in Second Group.

Phil Scott, the British champion, brings up the rear of the first division. Phil picked up some prestige by outpointing Victorio Campolo, huge Argentine, in a close fight last summer. The fact that Schmeling refused to box the Briton, even at the expense of being barred in the State of New York, also helped Scott's standing in the heavyweight world.

Young Stribling heads the second group. Tuffy Griffiths is only a few points behind the Georgian. Otto Von Porat of Norway, a former Olympic champion, is eighth. Pauline Uzcudun of Spain and Victorio Campolo of the Argentine, draw the last two places in the first 10.

More boxers received votes in this division than in any other, the number being 39. Risko, the old rubber man, just missed making the first 10, his points totaling 114. Others who came in for honorable mention are Ernie Schaaf, Armand Emanuel, Al Fay, K. O. Christner, Primo Carnera, George Hoffman, Les Marriner and Jimmy Maloney.

Five members of the charmed circles of last year retain places. Sharkey, as already set forth, remains at the head. Godfrey moves from fourth to third. Stribling goes from third to sixth, Con Porat from ninth to eighth and Paulino Uzcudun from fifth to ninth.

Five New Faces.

The new faces belong to Schmeling, Loughran, Scott, Griffiths and Campolo. Loughran and Griffiths come out of the light-heavyweight ranks. Chief among the missing is Jack Dempsey. The Manassa Mauler, though he apparently had retired when last year's vote was taken, was included in the balloting at that time because so many thought he would have another fling.

Tom Heeney, who recently announced his retirement, failed to make the grade. So did Johnny Risko, who just now seems on the upgrade again. Knute Hansen did nothing during the year. K. O. Christner failed to live up to expectations.

The personnel of the heavyweight bandwagon includes five foreign-born gladiators, a larger proportion than in any other division. Schmeling is a German, Scott an Englishman, Von Porat a Norwegian, Uzcudun a Spaniard and Campolo an Argentine.

Of the alien members Scott and Uzcudun have passed their peak and are not considered likely to take the championship out of this country. Schmeling, Von Porat and Campolo are on the upgrade, however, and a year from now one of them may be sitting on top of the world.

FAIRMOUNT JOCKEY CLUB TO BUILD GOLF COURSE

An 18-hole golf course in connection with the Fairmount race track is the plan of the Fairmount Jockey Club, it was announced yesterday. Construction will begin in March and it is hoped to have 12 holes ready for play by Memorial day. The other six holes are expected to be ready by September.

The golf course will be available for use during the entire year. Membership will cost $100 and will include, in addition to golf privileges, admission to Fairmount during the race meeting.

Twelve holes are to be laid out on the Illinois State Highway just west of the Fairmount clubhouse. The clubhouse and secretary's building will be equipped with showers and lockers for golfers' use. The last six holes will be laid out in the infield and along the back stretch of the race course.

THE hoot owl doesn't care a hoot
For cake and pie or juicy fruit;
But he considers bats and mice
A diet that is very nice.

And don't get in till broad daylight.
He leads his family to believe
That every night is New Year's eve.

Though modest and retiring, too,

KOSKY SIGNS TO MEET SHEA ON COLISEUM CARD

Fay Kosky, hard-hitting Milwaukee southpaw boxer, has been signed to oppose Eddie Shea, Chicago featherweight, in the feature ten-round match on the next boxing show at the Coliseum Arena, Tuesday night, Jan. 7, Tommy Sullivan, matchmaker for the Stockham American Legion Post, announced last night.

Kosky held Shea to a draw several months ago before a capacity crowd in a Chicago arena. Kosky, who had just defeated Ignacio Fernandez, substituted for Bud Taylor, who suffered an injury the eve of the battle, and, according to reports, he fought Shea on even terms throughout the match.

His record shows he has lost only two verdicts in 131 matches and one of those defeats came at the hands of Andy Martin of Boston, whom he later outpointed in a return engagement. Other fighters Kosky has defeated are Benny (Kid) Carter, Henry Lenard and Santiago Zorilla.

Won 109 in Row.

Before Kosky suffered a setback he owned a string of 109 successive triumphs in the ring. Most of his early victories were scored while he was in the Navy. As a sailor he won the championship of his fleet and later boxed on the Pacific Coast. Tom Churchill is his manager.

Kosky, along with being a clever boxer, packs a hard wallop. He is a weaver of the Davey Abad type, but is built similar to Shea.

In 17 fights this year Shea has scored 11 knockouts, including kayo victories over Carl Tremaine, Louis Bloom, Cuban Frankie Garcia, Bud Timidy, Stewart McLean and Phil O'Dowd. O'Dowd was knocked out in less than one round last summer at the Battery A Arena, while Johnny (Peewee) Kaiser and Young Montreal were outpointed in the other local bouts. Kaiser was dropped four times by Shea, while Young Montreal failed to make any kind of a showing.

Another 10-Rounder.

Matchmaker Sullivan states he plans to card another 10-round match and support the special attractions with three preliminary scraps.

Among the local punchers Sullivan is contemplating using are Lou Terry, junior lightweight; Joe Ghnouly, former district amateur bantamweight champion; Paul Steadman, Johnny Kaiser and Dave Knost.

Ferguson and Ritenour Win At Normandy

The first round games in the Normandy High School basketball tournament last night resulted in victories for Ferguson and Ritenour, and they will meet tomorrow night in the second game for the championship. Ferguson won from Normandy, 17 to 16, while Ritenour upset Wellston, 16 to 14.

Although Normandy led at the half, 8 to 7, Ferguson pulled ahead in the third period. In the final session, O'Neil, with a free throw, tied the score at 16-all in the last 20 seconds. Aleck Burgess of Ferguson got the ball on the tip-off and in shooting for the basket was fouled by Braun, Normandy center, just as the game ended. When Burgess made the first attempt good he waived his right to try for the other point.

Ritenour went into a lead in the second quarter and maintained it throughout the battle. It was the first game the Overland team has won this year. Wellston's numerous fouls, six of which were turned into points by Ritenour, proved to be the margin of victory.

Tomorrow night's schedule is Wellston against Normandy at 8 o'clock and Ferguson against Ritenour at 9 o'clock. Ferguson has already defeated Ritenour once this season.

to be kept out of the world championships. A compromise ought to benefit all concerned. It would be a hollow balkline victory for any player who beat a field from which Willie was absent.

Clear as Mud.

CONFIRMING a long-standing suspicion that collegiate rules with reference to amateurism were devised by the seventh son of a seventh son-of-a-gun, we refer our readers to the recent action of the Southern Intercollegiate Conference.

On Jan. 1 a team of Southern Conference collegians will play a professional team at Atlanta. But a Virginia college team, desiring to play Benny Friedman's "pro" eleven, was notified that its players would be ineligible thereafter, if they went through with the game.

Permission was granted one Southern team and refused another, the conditions being alike. It appears that contacts between lily-white collegians and pitch-black professionals can be held without contamination for the lilies, only when official sanction is obtained!

But It's O K in Baseball.

TO make the situation still more goofy, the head of the conference, in refusing the permission to the Virginia college, explained that it would be all right for the school's baseball team to play the New York Giants or any other professional nine; but it was next door to treason to apply the same idea to football.

Professor, please tell us why? Is it because the professionals play such dirty football that the lily-whites would be soiled?

Cannot Command Respect.

COLLEGE distinctions of this sort tend to break down respect for rules relating to amateurism. Because of their inconsistency and even absurdity, as in the case cited above, they naturally weaken the influence of ALL amateur legislation.

Football players naturally ask themselves what is so heinous about opposing a "pro" football eleven when it's perfectly OK to oppose a professional baseball nine.

The End of Big Bill.

"ABSOLUTELY not!" It is Large William Tilden, one-time king of the tennis courts, speaking. He is answering a query propounded in Paris and what he means is that he will "absolutely not" represent America in another Davis Cup series.

"There are a lot of younger players who could be developed and who would bring back the cup to the United States," is Bill's explanation and he names Allison, Van Ryn, Lott and Junior Coen.

But, sad to relate, Big Bill himself and the ageing Francis Hunter both proved too stout for the rising generation mentioned by Tilden. As a matter of fact, Tilden is still America's best "hope" in the Davis Cup. There probably will be few days in which even Henri Cochet will not find Bill a tough pill to "take." Other than Cochet (now that Lacoste is through) we doubt if there is any man to take Tilden's measure.

As Richards Sees It.

BY way of supporting this theory, we observe that Vincent Richards, now professional, in making up his annual ranking of the world's greatest players names the first four as follows:

1. Henri Cochet, France.
2. Rene Lacoste, France.
3. William T. Tilden, U. S.
4. Francis Hunter, U. S.

On the basis of last year, that seems to be correct.

How many years longer the old boys can stay near the top is problematical. It is likely, however, that Father Time, quite as much as the improvement in the young bloods, eventually will cause their downfall.

CRYSTAL CITY AND BACHELOR FIVES WIN AGAIN

Before the largest crowd of the season at the Armory last night, Crystal City retained its grip on first place in the Greater St. Louis Girls' Basketball Association by defeating the Schenberg quint, 16-11. In the preliminary, the Bachelor team remained in the runner-up position by downing a highly-improved Headlight aggregation, 18-10.

The feature game was a thriller throughout. The Schenbergs jumped away to a long lead, but the Crystal team came to life and peppered the basket to run the score to 12-6 in their favor at the half.

In the third period, three Schenberg free tosses and a field goal brought the score to 12-11, but Jeanette Magre came through with a free throw as the period closed.

Martha Politte's three free throws constituted all the entire scoring in the fourth period. The Schenbergs missed at least a half dozen setup shots under the basket that cost them the game.

In the preliminary, Margaret Glaser, with two field goals and a free goal for a total of five points, led the Bachelor scorers. Fern Politte was high scorer for Crystal City with two field baskets and three free tosses for a total of seven points. Miss Lange led the Schenbergs in the scoring column.

Crystal City, for the third straight week, held its opponent to two field baskets.

BETHLEHEM DEFEATS NEW YORK GIANTS BY SCORE OF 9-2

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

BETHLEHEM, Pa., Dec. 28. — Evening up matters for the defeat experienced at the hands of the New York Giants on Christmas day, the Bethlehem Steel Soccer team avenged an old score of a 9 to 3 setback of several seasons ago, by defeating the Giants here, today, by 9 to 2.

In the game, played on a sea of mud, the Steelmen proved far the best on the heavy and treacherous going and with the exception of a few moments, had the New Yorkers fighting almost continually on the defense.

student body and properly inspire his athletes and there is a large group of alumni who feel that Anderson was just the right man for the school. He certainly knows football and we feel that if given time he would build up St. Louis U. football to such extent that the school could compete with other institutions of its rank.

Action Depends on Sentiment.

"If we find that enough alumni, students and athletes share our views we want to present the evidence respectfully to the university with the hope that steps can be taken to induce Anderson to continue as head football coach. If we find that we are in the minority, we will be guided accordingly."

In investigating reports of the circulation of the petition by alumni it also was learned that students of the institution had been circulating a petition of their own, expressing dissatisfaction with the athletic policy and urging the institution to make every effort to retain Anderson as coach.

EXTRA INNINGS by J. Roy Stockton

A Master Optimist.

STUDY of the pitching records of the National League for 1929 makes Gabby Street stand out as one of the year's leading optimists. The Old Sergeant has expressed confidence in the Cardinals' ability to win the 1930 pennant and has declared that he is entirely satisfied with the pitching staff. Street especially mentioned Hallahan and said he was certain that Wild Bill would be a consistent winner for the 1930 Red Birds.

It certainly takes a large portion of confidence to be thoroughly satisfied with a pitching staff, when the outstanding performer of the staff won only 13 games. The Cardinals had two such aces in 1929, Sylvester Johnson setting the pace for the Red Bird hurlers with 13 victories and seven defeats and Haines tying the Big Swede in triumphs, but dropping 10 decisions.

Incidentally they were the only men on the staff to win as many as 10 games. Alexander, who has been traded to the Phillies, almost reached double figures with nine victories and eight defeats and Harold Haid also was "close" with nine won and as many lost.

May Be Sweet William.

HALLAHAN, on whose strong left arm Sergeant Street pins so much hope, finished the year with four victories and four defeats. The fact that Hallahan waited until September to score a triumph and then bagged four during the last month of the campaign, inspires much of Street's confidence, probably.

Here's what the Cardinal pitchers of record did in 1929:

Johnson	13	7
Mitchell	8	11
Haines	13	10
Sherdel	10	15
Alexander	9	8
Haid	9	9
Frankhouse	7	2
Hallahan	4	4
Total	73	66

The other victories and defeats of the year were scattered among Al Grabowski, Jim Lindsey, Herman Bell and Mull Holland.

It takes real confidence to expect Hallahan to make that a winning staff. But on the other hand Bill's failure to come through as expected by Street could be offset easily by the return to form of Jess Haines and Bill Sherdel. Haines just had an off year and he was due for one after being a great performer in 1926, 1927 and 1928. Sherdel's trouble probably was due to lack of condition and to the fact that he was worked out of turn and thrown off his stride.

Wee William realized his trouble before the campaign ended and by hard work managed to regain approximately his old winning form. He undoubtedly will work earnestly at training camp and probably will be an ace again.

Johnson, if started in regular turn all year, should boost his total of victories to 20. He should be that good and ought to take care of the victories chalked up by Alexander, without suffering as many extra defeats as were charged to Old Pete.

Then Fred Frankhouse is about due to go through spring and a full season without developing influenza, house maid's knee or lumbago and when he does have a year of comparatively good health, he should arrive as a pitching ace.

However, Street will need a heap of pitching to get enough extra victories out of his staff to increase that 73 victories to the total necessary to put a ball club in the world series. Gabby thinks Hallahan will do it.

FORMER RED BIRD WANTS TO MEET "THE GREAT" SHIRES

KANSAS CITY, Dec. 28.

ART SHIRES, fistic first sacker of the Chicago White Sox, and Clyde (Pea Ridge) Day, hurler of the Kansas City Blues in the American Association, and formerly of the St. Louis Cardinals, may box here about Feb. 1, providing suitable inducements are forthcoming from Gabe Kauffman, local promoter.

"Pea Ridge" whose vocal exhibitions about American Association diamonds have rivaled his performances in the box, posted his official challenge to the great one in a letter to Kauffman.

Maplewood and Kirkwood Take Webster Games

Kirkwood and Maplewood emerged victors in a basketball tournament at Webster last night. Maplewood won over Webster, 21 to 16, and in the second game Kirkwood easily downed Clayton, 22 to 3.

Webster and Maplewood got off to a slow start, the score being even at the end of the first quarter. Maplewood gained a one-point lead at the half. In the third quarter both teams showed more life and played a tight game until the middle of the period, when Rienecke started the Maplewood scoring with a field goal. The score at the period was Webster 11, Maplewood 15.

In the second game, Kirkwood ran over Clayton. In the second half Parks of Kirkwood opened the scoring with a free throw after two minutes of play. In the next quarter, Clayton got two of its three points, when Heitmann and Lawyer each sank a free throw.

At the half the score was Kirkwood 4, Clayton 2.

Kirkwood then went out and piled up points. Eight points were counted by three field goals and two free throws. Clayton scored its last point on a free throw by Litsinger. In the next quarter, Kirkwood made the final score 22 to 3 by four more field goals and two free throws.

Tomorrow Kirkwood will meet Maplewood to decide the championship, and Webster and Clayton will play a consolation game.

JIM M'MILLAN AND STEELE ON WRESTLING CARD

Roy Steele of Seattle, and Jim McMillan of Chicago, have been matched for a preliminary feature of the New Coliseum mat program for next Friday night, according to Promoter Tom Packs, who announced last night that he had signed them for the semi-windup to the reutrn bout between Matros Kerilenko of Russia, and Rudy Dusek of Memphis, who meet in a one fall finish tussle. The Steele-McMillan bout will also be a one fall affair with time restrictions of one hour.

Steele met and defeated Jack Sampson, a Swedish heavyweight, in his last appearance here. McMillan's last engagement on the local mat brought him to grips with Frank Brunowiecz of Boston, whom he wrestled one hour to a draw decision.

The Kerilenko-Dusek bout was scheduled by Packs after the principals wrestled 45 minutes to a draw in a prelim to the match between Jimmy Londos and George Hagen two weeks ago.

26th Victory in Row.

CHICAGO, Dec. 28.—Loyola University scored its twenty-sixth consecutive basketball victory by defeating the barnstorming Vanderbilt five, 33 to 26.

$250,000 IS GRANGE'S ESTIMATE OF EARNINGS, SPLIT WITH PYLE

$50,000 MELONS FROM SALE OF NAME AND SOME GAMES FADE IN FOG OF GRIDIRON

HEREWITH is presented the fourth and last installment of Red Grange's own story of the colorful football hero's career in school and the happenings in four years since he left Illinois University to play football professionally and to engage in business with C. C. Pyle, as told to Westbrook Pegler.

By Red Grange.
Installment IV.

WITHIN 10 days after I had turned in my soggy vestments and sent my name to the papers formally renouncing the genteel poverty of amateurism. Charlie Pyle handed me a check for $25,000 in New York. I had never had $50 of a margin all my life and now a strange dullness came over me.

Perhaps, if it had been 500 one dollar bills I could have sensed the reality, but $25,000 was too much. I read the check twice, folded it away and carried it around for a week.

Pyle sat in the drawing room of his hotel suite in New York. Agents stood in a changing group outside his door and now and again his voice could be heard, calling through the transom with smooth urbanity, "Don't be impatient, gentlemen everybody will be heard in due course."

Pyle Shows Bargain Hunter the Way Out.

A man came in with an offer of $100 for some trifling testimonial. Ten days before, in the bright lexicon of my unsophisticated youth, $100 had come under the general heading of adult money and Charlie never had been found wanting in respect for a $100 himself. But now my small town showman, after years of trafficking in nickels and dimes at the pay windows of his small town flicker shows, rose from his desk, grasped the gentleman by the elbow, and, in a voice of unctuous patience, explained, as he edged him toward the exit, that he had come to the wrong door.

"Just take that elevator," he said pleasantly. "Press the button and, when the car stops, tell the man you want to go to the bargain basement. Good day to you," and a "Who's the next gentleman?"

He was frisking like a barn fed old wagon horse knee deep in blue grass. Charlie was in the big money and, while I suppose he did turn down a few thousand dollars of easy increment for the sheer voluptuous joy of rejecting these trifles, it was worth the loss to see him expand. He was very mercenary, but so gay and lofty that you couldn't have called him morbid, and, too, he was such a game trader, setting a high figure with such winning condescension that I think he won more by holding up his price to the few who did invest than he lost by scaring off the shorts.

We had taken in for our joint account about $7000 as our profit on my first professional game with the Chicago Bears against the Chicago Cardinals, Thanksgiving day, 1925. The next Sunday we played the Columbus Tigers in Chicago with a blizzard blowing across the field, and a few days later we dropped down to St. Louis for an exhibition with a picked up team before turning east to gather in the sheaves.

Our arrangement with the owners of the Bears was a curious affair, all set down in lawyerized contracts, and we found ourselves, meaning Charlie and me, in the status of employes one day, employers the next. The Bears were a great football club and on this trip we had league games scheduled in Philadelphia, New York and Boston.

Charlie Keeps Eye Trained on Turnstiles.

On this trip Charlie and I worked the Bears for 25 per cent of the gross receipts after the park rental had been deducted. We ran into fog and rain in Philadelphia, but filled the Athletics' ball yard, and Charlie spent the afternoon hanging around the turnstiles. It was not that he lacked faith in the sportsmen who owned the teams, you understand.

Let us say, rather, that of all the marvels of the mechanical age there were two that fascinated Charlie with an irresistible lure. First in his admiration was the modern cash register and a bang-up second was the computing turnstile. He loved to lean on a cigar counter and watch the figures dance behind the glass of the cash register and the small, quick click of the turnstile recorder was the nightingale's song to him.

He collected $18,000 for the Philadelphia game and we pushed on to New York that night with an open date intervening before our game with the Giants at the Polo grounds. I found Charlie in the Pullman washroom as the train belted through the fog along toward Princeton Junction, stropping his old fashioned razor on the sole of his shoe.

Pyle Sets Up His Store on Broadway And Shows New York How to Do Business

"SON," Mr. Pyle allowed to me in a gentle, fatherly way, "this is the blade that knows no brother. Tomorrow we are going to take a deep cut at the dough on Broadway, let the gyps fall where they may."

That Saturday was pay day in our career. Mr. Pyle opened his store early and before night we had cash or certified checks for about $20,000. There was a $5000 contribution from a malted milk concern for the testimonial, intimating that all that I was or hoped to be I owed to the desiccated dairy food. Charlie got $3500 for a photograph of me wearing a particular kind of sweater and, although I yet have to experience my first smoke, and the sport writers had made a particular point of this in their biographical studies, one advertising agency paid $1000 for a rather non-committal indorsement of a well known cigarette. I could only say that, for all I knew to the contrary, if I were a smoker there was no reason why I shouldn't smoke these pills.

Money Just Rolls in; Charlie Takes It Easy.

We got $3500 for the exclusive right to manufacture and sell the one and only officially authorized Red Grange doll, $1000 for the official version of the life and works of Old 77 himself, this having been my number on the Illinois football squad; another $1000 for my opinion that a certain brand of canned willie really was concentrated porterhouse suffering from false modesty, and so on. There was a Red Grange toy savings bank in the shape of a football on which I indorsed the fine old quality of thrift for $500, and a moving picture promoter showered down $2000 for a 60-day option on my first essay, at the time, in the silent drama. Charlie was so bland and so unblushing and so commercial about the auction of the effortless byproducts that the episode became news in the day's papers. The news stories were pretty candid about the whole proceeding, but this deterred none of the agents who came to bid.

The moving picture fellow hopped aboard our wagon and rode one full turn around the arena, tossing off announcements that he had laid down a certified check for $300,000 to hire Red Grange for a superspecial production. This was a bid thick, considering that we had only $2000 of his money, but he was a client and we tried to make him look a little less ridiculous. At any rate we didn't yell "No!"

Grange Estimates Profit at $250,000.

This was the character of our indorsement and testimonial business on that crazy day, and any one who recalls the guess method estimates of our unearned receipts, which hovered in the region of $250,000, may foot up the proceeds I have mentioned and arrive at the reality.

Generally speaking, the margin between the guess and the net gain has been in the same proportion all the way down the line of my professional career. There was a time when I was widely supposed to have divided a net profit of $1,000,000 with Charlie. Actually we divided about one-fourth of that in net profits. Potentially we made much more, but we always were diverting profits into a reserve or operating fund for new ventures, risking money to make more money and losing the investment all too often.

We played the Giants at the Polo Grounds Sunday, received $27,000 for our bit, and slid down to Washington with a total intake of about $75,000 to date, including the rather disappointing proceeds of the St. Louis game and the one with the Columbus team in Chicago.

The Personal Manager and the Star Take Over Firm—and Some Socks on the Chin

OUR opponents in Washington were a ragtag outfit of ex-collegians who may have been nice enough lads to their mothers but were just so many safe crackers to us. They abused me with vindictive enthusiasm and devoted themselves almost entirely to a collective endeavor to take me apart by hand.

I ache when I recall a bare legged, ornery runt named Lynch who played one of the ends or backs on that Washington team. He had played with some college around Detroit for a time and I had had the pleasure of a social meeting with him in Chicago shortly before this tour began. He had seemed civil enough, but as long as I remained in the Washington game, and I was bound by my contract to stay in there 25 minutes, he clawed me, twisted my ankles, and tried to unscrew my head with an insatiable curiosity to learn how this newspaper hero was put together and what made him tick.

In my experience since then I have learned that the pros of football consider these excesses to be not only unsportsmanlike but unbusinesslike. If I maltreat Joe Doaks in today's game, Joe Doaks will get me another day, so experienced pros presently settle down to a policy of hard, clean play.

If we find a cripple playing on the other side, we treat him with the most elaborate kindliness, wherein we differ from the college chaps who play by the primitive code of the survival of the fittest. I will disclaim credit for noble altruism in this policy of the pros, however, for it is our considered idea that it were better for us to gentle a lame duck and keep him in the game than to bear down on his weakness, aggravate his injury, and put him out, to be relieved by a sub in full vigor and sound health.

The First Jolt on the Chin Comes; Others Follow.

Incidentally, of all the games I have played, I was abused most in one between Illinois and Chicago when two or three maneaters spent the entire afternoon Fletcherizing my raw calves, without salt. I mean no reflection on the coaching of Mr. A. A. Stagg. It may have been an idea of their own, but those boys gnawed my legs every time we piled up and I came out of the game with the imprints of their teeth on both shafts.

Well, in Washington Charlie and I were the magnates. We took over the team under charter at a flat guaranteed price of $10,000, and I also may note that for the first time in our business association we took one on our corporate chin. It was good practice. We took plenty on the chin before we got through.

The next day we played in Boston, reverting to our status of guest artist, employed by the Bears on a percentage arrangement. The winter had closed in on Boston and the trade was meager and mostly honorary, so there were no profits and our share was 25 per cent of nothing. The game wound up in the dusk and we swarmed into cabs for a dash to the train and changed back into our street clothes in the aisle of our Pullman as the express hooted down the line, bound for Pittsburg and another reminder that into each life some snow must fall.

Again, Charlie and I went into our profits for a $10,000 guarantee to the Bears and this time I was damaged in my person as well as in my vanity and fortunes. I had been coming unnerved in the wear and tear of five games in six days and had to resign in Pittsburg. We played in a snowstorm before a small outpouring of patrons.

Chicago Testimonials Bring $14,000 More.

We had collected about $12,000 in Washington and Pittsburg, so our loss on these two promotions was $8000, but we were very sad to hear that in Detroit the promoters of our next demonstration were refunding $28,000 of advance receipts, owing to the news of my temporary retirement. The Bears kept the date anyway playing for the visitors' share of all they could draw, and here a slight misunderstanding occurred to ruffle the serenity of our relations with the proprietors. They decided to drop us out of the reckoning, but Charlie pointed out that it was his football game, like those in Washington and Pittsburg, and demanded a compromise figure. They saw the justice of his argument and we made a little money after all.

Now we came back to Chicago and picked up $14,000 more in the testimonial trade. I gave my approval to a candy bar for a cash royalty of $10,000 and a percentage of all sales, signed the trademark for a sporting goods line for $3500 down, plus a percentage on the gross, and posed for my picture admiring an outboard motor for $500.

Troupe Reaches Florida in Time to Get Eyes Filled With Dust From Crash of Boom

WE were arranging books for a tour, first to Florida and then to California. Just before we left Chicago Charlie and I decided to cut ourselves another piece of cake. We took $25,000 more apiece. I gave my father $1000, bought my brother Garland an automobile, invested the rest of my $50,000, minus the cost of half a dozen suits, in Illinois farm mortgage bonds, and was on my way.

This dividend left us by a small working reserve of capital. We needed it. Our expenses were enjoying a magical growth. We had as much correspondence by mail and telegraph as a fairly prosperous insurance company. This demanded office help, office rooms, all the other familiar office expenses and tolls. We were sending out thousands of free, autographed glossy print portraits of Red Grange in expensive folders, a reckless liberality that cost us $25,000 within a year, and wherever we went we insisted on written contracts to bind all our dealings, which required the advice of counsel. Offhand I cannot say how much we paid the learned gents of the bar on our wandrings hither and yon. These items went into the expense account. It amounted to thousands, though.

Charlie was living in a prosperous state befitting his position as the front office of a high-priced attraction. His expenses were supposed to be defrayed from the joint operating reserve, but he was no hand to carry a little red note book and jot every nickel he spent for a newspaper, and I always have believed that he spent more of his own money than of ours. For my part, $100 a week, plus quarters, transportation and meals as a member of the team, was the expense allowance.

Red's Football Shows Become More Private.

We went straight to Coral Gables, outside Miami, just as the debris of the real estate boom was falling to earth to the melancholy tune of the realtors' lament.

The promoters priced the tickets to $6.60 and $8.80. They ate most of them, as the trade phrase goes, but Charlie had had the forethought to pick up our $10,000 guarantee in advance, so we played the New York Giants before the greatest expanse of empty seats I had ever gazed upon. Tampa was the next stop, and owing to the sluggish rate of the advance sale the promoter asked Charlie to play on a percentage, waiving our guarantee of $5000. Charlie picked up his bag and started for the train, so a committee of local priders, realizing that this game had been rather widely publicized up north, got up a $5000 pool to save the fair name of their community. Jim Thorpe's Rock Island club provided the competitive interest, and we revealed our spectacle to another small attendance.

Our displays became more and more private, but Charlie rushed us back north to Jacksonville for a game with a team led by Ernie Nevers, again gathering in the guarantee, in this case $10,000, before the boys got into their harness. I think Charlie's feat in collecting $25,000 cash in Florida just then should stand for all time as the refutation of any doubts about his genius.

But we were carrying a personnel of about 30 head and a special baggage car, so our expenses, including a large percentage of the net receipts, for the Bears, were so large that if we didn't achieve a net loss on this phase of the tour the result was little better than no sale.

Dinner for 250 Persons, Which Pyle Got Free, Crowning Promotion Stunt

WE rolled along the marshy coast of the Gulf of New Orleans and played at a loss against a team largely composed of Tulane University veterans, promoting the show ourselves in the hope of paying our freight to California. Charlie was on the turnstiles and business was so slow that by the time the game began he was letting the customers in for nickels, clamshells or whatever he could frisk from them. He put in the next 24 hours in his drawing room on the train sorting and counting about two pecks of quarters, dimes and nickels.

But we showed a profit in Los Angeles with a crowd of about 70,000, and made about $35,000 for ourselves. We went on to show in San Diego, San Francisco, Portland and Seattle. Money was no worry to me. I had most of my $50,000 in 6 per cent stuff back in the black earth farms of the Central West, and that was about 50,000 times my average maximum cash holdings during the preceding four years. I cannot claim that we impoverished the people of San Diego, Portland or Seattle, but we made a little money in San Francisco, and were well ahead of the game when we started back to our base at Chicago about the end of February.

Legend of $300,000 Check Fades in Air.

There, the Film Booking Office paid us a cash advance royalty of $50,000 for a movie to be called "One Minute to Play." Our option for 60 days, which we sold for $2000 in New York, had expired and with it the beautiful legend of the $300,000 certified check.

With this royalty, the profits of the long trip to the South and the West, and incidental pickings and pluckings too miscellaneous to tell in detail, the firm of Charlie and Old 77 declared another dividend of $50,000 apiece about the first of March, 1926. This movie paid us about $40,000 more in the next two years and I still receive an occasional check for the price of a new hat out of that extra $40,000 I saw no dividends. We both tossed our shares back into the business and the business didn't prosper.

However, chronologically, I now have received $100,000 and, feeling quite well-to-do and confident that there would be much more where that came from, as in fact I still do feel, I bought my father a home in Wheaton. The house, the landscaping and the furniture cost about $35,000, and, inasmuch as he had kept himself broke to send me through school, I undertook to finance household expenses. I developed a passion for suits, keeping about 25 in my trunks all the time, and now that I was settled in Chicago for awhile, I began to indulge a long suppressed yearning for good automobiles. To date I have had 18 cars, and the depreciation accounts for much of the money I used to have but haven't any more.

Dinner for 250 Persons Cost Pyle Nothing.

Now Charlie decided to promote his tennis show with Suzanne Lenglen, Vincent Richards and Mary K. Browne, as the stars. I liked the idea myself, and we were partners in the business, including the great expense of travel to Europe for two men to convince the lady that she really could make more as a pro than she might as an amateur. We paid her $25,000 cash in advance, plus all expenses of herself, her mother and her maid, and I will certify that Suzanne's expense accounts always maintained the highest traditions of the tennis amateurs. We guaranteed Vincent Richards $20,000, paying $10,000 in advance, and Mary K. Browne's guarantee was $15,000, plus expenses in each case and, in Mary's case, plus the expenses of a traveling companion or chaperon.

Mr. Pyle effected the ballyhoo with refinement and eclat, introducing Richards as his male star with sudden dramatic effect at a dinner on board the steamship Paris at its dock in New York. I regard that dinner as another stroke of sheer genius, for you wouldn't have thought he could square the bill for less than $10,000, yet, all he paid was the waiters' hire and, maybe, the cost of some stimulating beverage for his guests. He talked that party out of the steamship company on the ground that it would be great publicity for their boats, and the thought of an American outfumbling a Frenchman for a dinner check for 350 persons always leaves me awed and reverent.

$20,000 Profit on Tennis Tour.

The tennis tour left us a net profit of about $20,000, but that was the year Charlie was refused a New York franchise in the National Football League. Later, for that reason, we started a league of our own.

Now I didn't want a league of our own, but the same beautiful optimism that talked the Frenchmen out of that dinner party talked me into the football business as a magnate. We got Big Bill Edwards for the Judge Landis of our league, which was an elegant gesture but very expensive, for we paid him $25,000 and got back only half of the money by assessing the other clubs. We were suckers and, far from blaming Mr. Edwards, I think he treated us in strict accordance with the laws of man and nature. He is very substantial physicially, but as the season wore along he became more and more figurative until, at the end, our $25,000 president was merely the head of a nonexistent football league.

Let Go of $15,000 to Support Newark Club.

The clubs stumbled, flopped and sprawled. At the first wobble of the Newark club, Charlie decided that we ought to put in some money to meet the payroll, hoping to keep the league together, and we let go about $15,000 there in loans which I long ago ceased to regard as an asset. It was a crazy promotion and we were badly beaten, but I don't blame Charlie Pyle. I was for him when he was making money and I couldn't turn against him merely because he showed me the way to a loss.

We got one more good grab of money in the spring of 1927, a $50,000 advance royalty from the film booking office for another movie, "Racing Romeo." But our past expenses cut this down to $20,000, which we divided evenly. I gave my $10,000 share to my dad and he now sold his house in Wheaton and moved to Los Angeles.

In the summer of 1927 we made peace with the National Football League, got a New York franchise for our club and played through the season. I came through with some California real estate and a few thousand dollars of ready money. My contract with Charlie ended when the team disbanded.

Their Ways Part, but They're Still Friends.

He then began organizing the first of his two cross-continent bunion derbies, but I had no money in either of these goofy expeditions. I went along with him the first time just to draw such crowds and publicity as I could, and I haven't seen him since the whiskered bunioneers staggered into New York in the spring of 1928.

We are friends still. He was honest with me, and I never knew any man who would go deeper into his pocket to help a friend in trouble. We made a lot and lost a lot together, and if the losing blows were his so were the winners.

BOEHMER GIVEN NO. 1 POSITION AMONG ST. LOUIS JUNIOR PLAYERS

Gustave "Junior" Boehmer heads the 1929 junior ranking list of the St. Louis District Tennis Association, according to the report of Karl H. Hodge, chairman of the Ranking Committee. With Joyce Portnoy as a partner, Boehmer tops the junior doubles.

In the 1929 junior competition, Portnoy, awarded the No. 2 position, was the only player to take a set from Boehmer. The Rovin brothers, Charles and Adolph, placed third and fourth in the singles list, were the only players able to win any sets from Portnoy.

Frank Keaney, Sublette Park star, was awarded the No. 1 place in the district boys' singles list. Ray Guinger was placed second. The committee did not rank any boys' doubles teams.

EIGHT 3-CUSHION BILLIARD STARS IN TITLE MEET STARTING FRIDAY

By Herman Wecke

Eight of the leading three-cushion billiard players in the country will compete in the world championship title tournament to be played at the Palm Garden, New York, beginning next Friday. The entrants will be Johnny Layton, present champion; Otto Reiselt, Gus Copulos, Angie Kieckhefer, Tiff Denton, Charles E. Jordan, Harry Schuler and Allen Hall, St. Louis boy.

The tournament this season is expected to be one of the best ever held. Matches will, as usual, be of 50 points. Four of the players, Kieckhefer, Tiff Denton, Charles Schuler, were forced to qualify for the championship, while the other four got into the competition as a result of having finished ahead of the field in the last title tourney held a year ago.

The original field included Willie Hoppe, former balkline king, but Hoppe was forced to withdraw because of business reasons. He will be replaced by Allen Hall, St. Louis boy, who for the past few years has made his home in Chicago. Hall, a former local title holder and one-time Western amateur champion, is one of the best of the young players in the three-cushion field.

Layton Former St. Louisan.

Several of the contestants are well known to St. Louisans. Layton is a former St. Louisan and for some years held the world pocket billiard championship. From the pocket-billiard field he drifted into the three-cushion field. He has for more than 20 years been recognized as one of the leading contestants in the billiard world. A year ago he retained the championship by defeating Hoppe, 50 to 24, in 24 innings, in the deciding tourney match. Layton is one of the real exponents of the diamond system.

Reisiet, a former champion, rises to great heights at times, but during his 10 years connection with the sport, he has shown himself to be an erratic performer. Copulos, the Detroit entrant, has never held the title, but he has been knocking at the door for a long time. He is a master of the diamond system.

Kieckhefer, like Reisiet, is an erratic player who has held the championship on eight different occasions. He is a southpaw and qualified for the present title event by winning the Northern sectional event at Milwaukee. Denton of Kansas City won the right to play for the championship by winning the sectional tournament held at Peterson's parlors here, when he defeated Gene Deardorff, St. Louis amateur star, in the 100-point play-off match after the pair had tied with four victories and one defeat in the regular competition. He is another former champion.

Two newcomers in the competition will be Jordan and Schuler, former amateur aces. Jordan, after winning the Western sectional tournament by defeating John Fitzpatrick of Seattle in the Western qualifying event, was ruled a professional by the National Amateur Billiard Association. Prior to the time he played in the Western sectional, he was the national amateur champion, a title he was forced to vacate when he was ruled a "pro" by the amateur officials.

Schuler, for seven years, was one of the leading amateurs in New York, but entered the pro ranks the past season to compete in the Eastern sectional meet. He lost to Walter Riley of Philadelphia in the deciding match, but was named to compete when Riley withdrew for business reasons.

Cutler Will Referee.

Albert G. Cutler of New York, one of the leading billiard officials in the country, has been selected to referee.

According to the schedule arranged by officials, four matches will be played each day, except on the first and last. On these days, two games will be decided. In case of a tie for first place, the playoff for the championship will be played Jan. 11.

The champion will hold the title for one year and will not be subject to challenge. In addition to a diamond medal the winner will receive $1200 in cash and a $6000 yearly salary. The player finishing second will receive $1000 and a $3000 salary. All the other entrants will receive some sort of remuneration, figuring in the prize list which totals $15,000 and the gate receipts, which will be split among the eight players, with the winner receiving 15 per cent and the player finishing last 9 per cent.

BOXING SHOW FOR EAST SIDE ARRANGED

East St. Louis will get into the limelight of professional boxing on Thursday night, Jan 16, when the Patrol Organization of the Ainad Temple will present a program under the supervision of the Illinois State Athletic Commission.

Officials of the Masonic Patrol formally applied for a license to promote boxing on the East Side and yesterday received the approval of the commission and obtained the date requested.

C. F. Nelson has been named matchmaker. He announces his inaugural program will comprise two 10-round bouts, two six-rounders and a four-rounder. He has not as yet signed any of the principals but expects to do so shortly.

He is another former champion.

Two newcomers in the competition will be Jordan and Schuler, former amateur aces. Jordan, after winning the Western sectional tournament by defeating John Fitzpatrick of Seattle in the Western qualifying event, was ruled a professional by the National Amateur Billiard Association. Prior to the time he played in the Western sectional, he was the national amateur champion, a title he was forced to vacate when he was ruled a "pro" by the amateur officials.

Schuler, for seven years, was one of the leading amateurs in New York, but entered the pro ranks the past season to compete in the Eastern sectional meet. He lost to Walter Riley of Philadelphia in the deciding match, but was named to compete when Riley withdrew for business reasons.

Cutler Will Referee.

Albert G. Cutler of New York, one of the leading billiard officials in the country, has been selected to referee.

According to the schedule arranged by officials, four matches will be played each day, except on the first and last. On these days, two games will be decided. In case of a tie for first place, the playoff for the championship will be played Jan. 11.

The champion will hold the title for one year and will not be subject to challenge. In addition to a diamond medal the winner will receive $1200 in cash and a $6000 yearly salary. The player finishing second will receive $1000 and a $3000 salary. All the other entrants will receive some sort of remuneration, figuring in the prize list which totals $15,000 and the gate receipts, which will be split among the eight players, with the winner receiving 15 per cent and the player finishing last 9 per cent.

By Clement Glaub.

The racing scene at New Orleans will shift from Jefferson Park to the Fairgrounds track New Year's day, when the Louisiana Jockey Club will open a 54-day meeting with the $10,000 added New Orleans Handicap, the feature event. Eleven stakes are on the 1930 program at the Fairgrounds. The opening event, the $5000 added New Year's Handicap, drew practically the same band of horses which was named for the New Orleans Handicap, to be run Feb. 1.

The Louisiana Jockey Club will distribute more than $160,000 in stakes and purses during the meeting. Seven races are on the daily programs with overnight handicaps featuring the week day cards.

Many prominent Eastern owners will race their thoroughbreds at the New Orleans track. For the first time during the winter, Harry Sinclair's Rancocas colors will be seen in action. Trainer John Lowe has a large band of Rancocas horses stabled at the Fairgrounds track, the majority being yearlings which will be campaigned as 2-year-olds, beginning New Year's day, when all thoroughbreds have a birthday.

Many Owners to Race.

Other owners contemplating racing throughout the winter season at New Orleans are George Collins, S. W. Labrot, Greentree Stable, Frank Seremba and Kenton Farm Stable. Each owner has named more than one horse for the stakes on the Fairgrounds schedule.

In addition to the New Orleans and New Year's Handicaps, the Louisiana Jockey Club will feature the following stakes: Pontchartrain A. B. Dade Memorial, Rex, Winter Garden Claiming, Crescent City, Edgewater Gulf, Washington Birthday, Derby Trial and Louisiana Juvenile Stakes.

Frank Kelly, track superintendent, recently directed the work of mixing sand with the top soil of the Fairgrounds track. The sand will bring the racing strip to better condition than in several years. Horses which heretofore found the Fairgrounds track too hard, will have no trouble in showing their best speed over the improved track.

Col. E. R. Bradley, active head of the Louisiana Jockey Club, is at New Orleans and intends to remain there until some time after the opening of the Fairgrounds meeting. Bradley has a number of racers stabled at the Fairgrounds, among them Beaming Over, Burning Sun, Brother Rank and Buttered Toast. Beaming Over and Burning Sun will be the stable's color bearers in the stake races.

Other Widely-Known Entries.

George Collins named eight horses for the New Year's and New Orleans Handicaps. The best of the band are Saxon, a stake winner last season when he raced under the colors of the Greentree Stable, and Thistle Fyrn, a fine looking filly. Sea Rocket, which performed well for C. A. Coyle at New Orleans last winter, will again carry that owner's silks in the New Orleans Handicap.

Frank Seremba, former jockey, is pointing his crack 3-year-old War Instigator, son of War Fame, for the New Year's Handicap. The colt is in fine shape and ready to face the barrier.

The field for the New Year's Handicap will be picked from the following horses: Dinah Did Upset, Saxon, Thistle Fyrn, Genuine, Chancellor, Prince Pat, Calf Roper, Line Rider, Paul Bunyan, Galahad, Yam Toy, Raucona, Sea Rocket, Inception, Beaming Over, Burning Sun and Donnay.

Duckpin Champion Loses.

By the Associated Press.

HARTFORD, Conn., Dec. 28.—Harry Campbell, national duckpin bowling champion of the Washington, D. C., team, was defeated here today by Jack White of the Connecticut team, 657 to 612.

The Connecticut bowlers, with a total of 1246 against the visitors' 1161, also won the doubles match.

Unemployment.

Several minor leagues are expected to follow the lead of the International in cutting the player limit in an effort to reduce the expense of operating the clubs.

St. Jim Comes From Behind To Win Purse at Havana

By the Associated Press.

HAVANA, Dec. 28.—The Mariel Purse for all ages, under allowance conditions, which featured the race program at Oriental Park this afternoon, went to St. Jim, which races for Mrs. John Zoeller.

Ridden by the lightweight, G. Seabo, he came from behind the pace and disposed of H. C. Hatch's Royal Sable, which had to be urged to the end to retain the place from the fast-closing Flo O'Neil, racing for J. F. O'Neil. Stampdale, the choice, was eliminated from serious contention when, nearing the far turn, he was seriously impeded by Gardner Derr and forced his rider to take him in. Stampdale could not overcome the seeming interference and finished far back.

At the break, Royal Sable, Stampdale and Gardner Derr were quickest in motion and drew away slightly. They raced along, lapped on each other, while St. Jim was in fourth place, with Flo O'Neil next. Nearing the far turn, Gardner Derr bore over sharply and Stampdale caromed into Royal Sable. The latter maintained her position, while Stampdale was forced back and was taken up.

Meantime, St. Jim rushed up fast and, turning for home, held command from there to the finish. The Widener castoff steadily improved his position and was in hand at the finish. Royal Sable was under hard urging in the final furlong to hold Flo O'Neil safe.

PAUL BUNYAN GAINS FAVOR AS NEW YEAR'S HANDICAP CANDIDATE

NEW ORLEANS, Dec. 28.—Interest in the New Year's day Handicap, which ushers in the winter's racing season at the Louisiana Jockey Club's palatial Fair Grounds here, is centering about a Chicago owned bay colt, Paul Bunyan, who bids fair to enter the ranks of the popularly enshrined thoroughbred immortals, following his victory in the Thanksgiving and New Year's Handicaps at Jefferson Park.

Practically every horse of consequence that will oppose the son of Paul Weidel-Audrey Austin in the various stake fixtures of the Fair Grounds program, has finished behind him in the two races at Jefferson, and New Orleans, whose public has had a number of racing idols—Pan Zareta and Black Gold, who are buried in the Fair Grounds infield, to mention only two—is eager to place him on a pedestal with them.

Owner L. M. Severson, and Trainer Frank Rector, a veteran horseman have indicated that their charge will be sent to match strides in all three of the big stakes which top the Fair Grounds program, as well as some of the lesser ones like the A. B. Dade Memorial and the Powers Memorial.

Navy Sports Calendar.

The United States Naval Academy has such a full program of all-year sports that it was found spring football practice interfered with other activities. So "spring" practice was held this fall.

ADDING NEW BEAUTY TO OUTSTANDING PERFORMANCE

New Ford bodies, in beautiful new colors, will be displayed Tuesday by Ford dealers

THE Model A Ford was a good car when it was first introduced. It has constantly been made a better car. As soon as improvements are found and tested they are passed on to the public. That work goes steadily on.

Now comes the time when another forward step can be taken and this policy of constant improvement given still further expression. Tuesday, a new line of Ford bodies will be displayed by Ford dealers.

The introduction of these new Ford bodies is of interest to every motorist. In flowing grace of line and contour—in the carefully planned harmony of every detail of design—they set a new high standard for a low-priced car.

A new, fresh beauty has thus been placed within the means of every one.

All of these new Ford bodies are finished in a variety of beautiful colors, with bright Rustless Steel head lamps, radiator shell, hub caps, tail lamp and cowl finish strip. All have roomy interiors. All bring you the safety, comfort, power, speed, acceleration, ease of control, economy and long-lived reliability that have given the Model A Ford such a high place in the regard of millions of motorists.

SET apart a little while Tuesday to see these new Ford bodies. You will be particularly interested in the manner in which new beauty has been added to outstanding performance. In appearance, as in mechanical construction, craftsmanship has been put into mass production. Further details and illustrations of the new Ford bodies will appear Tuesday in this newspaper.

LETHARGIC TRADING IN STOCKS AT YEAR-END

Despite the Handicap of 12 Per Cent Call Money, Prices in Last Session of 1928 Rose to Best Levels of Year.

MONEY CONDITIONS MORE FAVORABLE

December This Year Has Brought Forward an Unprecedented Amount of Selling to Establish Tax Losses.

NEW YORK, Dec. 28.—The Evening Post, in copyrighted weekly financial review, says:

"The year's closing markets present no contrasts more impressive from conditions a year ago than the substitution of security for buoyant enthusiasm in the stock market itself with the advent of receding business. Instead of the lethargic trading sessions of this week the old year was ushered out with a burst of bullish speculation. Despite the handicap of 12 per cent call money stock prices in the last session of 1928 rose to their best levels of the year. With the advantage of 6 per cent money this year the stock market has been moving rather indifferently within a zone distinctly lower than the prevailing levels a year ago. Even the advantage of a recent 50 per cent cut in brokers' loans, reducing the outstanding volume below any previously witnessed since September, 1927, the exhibition in the securities markets portrays a psychology very much changed and very much calmer than 12 months ago.

Bloom Off of Business.

Essentially the difference in the situations now and then that makes for the poorer markets is that the bloom has fallen from business. Money conditions are now more favorable than then. Money rates have fallen the world over and the supply of funds available for legitimate enterprise is abundant. But business at this time a year ago was headed into a veritable boom. The basis in 1928 was laid not for a culmination of the upward movement in industry but for the beginnings of what was to become a period of unexampled progress. The market then was facing a series of quarterly profit gains that come only once in a great while. It seemed that if only the public's appetite for common stocks could be held within sensible bounds industry might be maintained in a prosperous state for an almost indefinite time.

Will Start From Lower Level.

"Nineteen hundred and twenty-nine is passing into history with the trend in business downward rather than upward. For six months productive activity in this country has been declining. It is down to theoretical normal. Business is starting the new year of course from a lower level than a year ago. The long-awaited corrective adjustment in the stock market has come. These are constructive factors to the eye of the student who views conditions broadly. They are not the sort of influences that lend enthusiasm to the speculative market in securities immediately at hand. Consequently it is natural that December this year has brought forward an unprecedented amount of selling to establish tax losses. What the net result of this selling will be remains a question. There are those who hold that it will stimulate a good market along in January when the tax stock is repurchased but this argument is not entirely convincing to those who understand the practical application of the tax device.

Bond Rise Not Sustained.

"A few weeks ago it seemed almost inevitable that the changed market psychology would result in an increased emphasis on bonds sufficient to introduce a sustained rise in bond prices. With the 1929 advance in stocks and money rates, bonds up to this fall had fallen steadily. Greater conservatism on the part of private and institutional investors and a definitely reversed trend in money rates were the reasons offered for the advent of a lively 1930 market in bonds. These forecasts may still materialize. But it must be written into the records that the results with the advance of December have been disappointing. Perhaps one reason is that the banks themselves have not liquidated their loan positions in any such manner as the decline in brokers' loans suggests. It is possible that the bond market may find itself handicapped until a more complete liquidaton of loans is put through at the banks."

SHARES SOLD NEW YORK, Dec. 28.—Total sales for the week (five days) on the New York Stock Exchange amounted to 13,042,830 shares, compared with 17,904,580 last week. Total sales from Jan. 1 to date were 1,120,602,116 shares, compared with 907,954,400 a year ago and 567,686,000 two years ago.

STOCK MARKET IS OFF MODERATELY IN LIGHT TRADE

Year-End Lightening of Accounts and Cautious Short Selling Carry Active Issues Down 1 to 8 Points.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Dec. 28.—Year end lightening of accounts and cautious short selling sent share prices moderately lower in today's two-hour session of the stock market. The majority of active issues closed 1 to 8 points lower. Trading was comparatively dull, only 1,634,510 shares being transferred, a moderate reduction from last Saturday.

The week-end news failed to meet with constructive interpretation, and speculators for the rise found no incentives to renew operations. With few exceptions, however, important shares were well supported, and bears met with little success in efforts to shake loose any considerable amount of stock, save in some of the merchandising shares.

Much Tax Selling.

Much of the selling was ascribed to operations to establish losses for income tax purposes—there are only two more days available for this purpose—and to liquidation of bank loans against stock collateral as a part of the year end "window dressing."

Bank clearings this week were about 12 per cent below the corresponding week of last year, but the lessened speculative activity may have been in a measure responsible for the decline. Merchants report that there was a marked trend toward lower priced articles, however, so that the holiday cash turnover was probably less than last year's, although about the same volume of goods was moved.

The only important corporate news of the day—the plan of Pullman to acquire two other important car manufacturing units—fell flat as a market factor. An unusual action was the rescinding by directors of Hayes bady of the 2 per cent stock dividend recently ordered.

Bears Are Active.

Taking advantage of the uncertainty over the results of the holiday trade, bears hammered principally at the merchandising shares. Macy was sent down more than eight points, and Sears-Roebuck was sent down five points to 83¼, only 3¼ points above its November bottom, but it closed at 85⅝. Filenes certificates dropped about seven points to a new low at 30. The Fair Co., however, was firm, falling a couple of points.

Allied Chemical dropped seven points, and such shares as Allis Chalmers, American Power and Light, Atlantic Coast Line, Byers, J. I. Case, Delaware & Hudson, Eastman Kodak, Standard Gas, U. S. Industrial Alcohol and Westinghouse Electric closed two to three points lower. U. S. Steel closed at 164½, off 1¼.

Among the few strong spots Union Tank Car and Philadelphia Co. rose six points. Motors were inclined to ease, but Marmon mounted nearly two points. Short covering appeared in Fox Film, and it closed a point higher.

No Money Market.

As there is no money market on Saturday, credit conditions were not a factor in the day's trading. Bankers believe there is a good chance of keeping call money from going above yesterday's 6 per cent level until the return flow of funds begins right after the turn of the year.

Conspicuous in the commodity markets was a rise of about 2 cents in wheat futures. December corn sagged more than a cent. Cotton futures were quiet, and closed practically unchanged.

A notable development in the foreign exchanges was a sag of 3-16 of a point in the French franc, representing profit-taking on its recent rise. Cables colsed at 3.94 1-16, as compared to yesterday's rate of 3.94¼. The highest in nearly two years. The rate is still high enough, however, to make further gold shipments to Paris probable.

BUTCHER HOGS ARE HIGHER FOR WEEK

NATIONAL STOCKYARDS, Ill., Dec. 28 (United States Department of Agriculture).—Swine receipts this week approximated 58,500, as compared with actual arrivals of 73,765 last week and 65,938 corresponding period last year. The holiday at midweek cut in on the marketing of hogs and shipping demand continued broad. During early sessions a "scramble for numbers" pushed prices to the highest point since last October, and top touched $10.05. Part of the gains were erased during succeeding sessions, but there remained a net advance for the period of 25c to 50c on all butcher and bacon hogs. Pigs also scored net advances of 25c to 50c, but packing sows held steady. Lightweight hogs and light lights were in best demand and scored the maximum upturn, with the result that the price spread widened somewhat. Supplies were light on Saturday, with the estimate calling for 5500 head, including 3500 billed through and direct. Shippers were chief buyers, and prices recovered a good share of the loss of Friday. The general market on light and butcher hogs was quoted strong to 10c higher, packing sows steady and pigs, which found a limited demand, slipped backward 25c to 50c. Top price touched $9.90 for a few loads of 170 to 180 pound averages, while bulk of all 160 to 240 pound weights cleared within the narrow spread of $9.75 to $9.85. No heavy butchers, 250 pounds and up, were offered on the closing session, but during the week butchers scaling upward to around 300 pounds cashed at a discount of 15c to 25c from the prevailing price on light and mediumweight kinds. Packing sows cleared at $8 for the majority, although light smooth packers were quotable upward to around $8.25. Most 130 to 160 pound light lights moved at $9.25 to $9.85, with desirable slaughter pigs, 90 to 130 pound descriptions, quotable at $8.50 to $9.25.

Better Steers Higher.

Receipts of cattle this week approximated 9800 head, as compared with actual arrivals of 11,038 last week and 8310 corresponding period last year. The week opened with very light marketings and all prices advanced materially. Following the holiday, supplies far exceeded expectations and values received a sharp setback. Medium grade steers predominated in the late runs and such kinds lost all of the early upturns and more. Better grades were scarce and maintained part of the advance. Compared with the close of last week, better steers and heifers finished 25c higher; medium and lower grades steady to 25c lower; cows steady to 25c higher; low cutters steady; bulls 25c higher; vealers steady to $1 lower; stockers and feeders strong. A part load of 823-lb. yearling steers and a sizeable lot of 929-lb. mixed yearlings topped for the week at $14.50, while 1188-lb. matured steers reached $14.25 and 696-lb. heifers topped for this class at $13.50. Weighty steers were limited to a load of 1512-lb. weights at $12.75 and a load of 1347-lb. averages at $12. Medium weight steers averaging 1206 to 1296 lbs. ranged from $11.40 to $13.75 with the bulk $11.85 to $13.25. Other mediumweight steers or those scaling 1106 to 1188 lbs., ranged from $9.25 to $14.25, majority earning $11 to $13.25. Lightweight steers sold within a range of $8.40 to $14.50 with most offerings $10.25 to $13.35. Bulk of all native steers cashed at $10.25 to $13.25. Several loads of Oklahoma steers made $9.25 to $11. Fat mixed yearlings and heifers bulked at $12.25 to $13.50, with medium heifers at $10 to $12. Practical top on cows was $9 with odd lots up to $10 and the bulk at $7.25 to $8.25. Low cutters cleared at $4.50 to $5.25, cutters up to $6.50. Sausage bulls topped at $8.50, bulk $8.25 down. Good and choice vealers topped at $18.50, within 25c of the high point for the year, but the closing bulk was $16 to $17.50. Stockers and feeders were in light supply and demand was moderate. Steers sold on country account at $9.25 to $10.50, mainly; heifers, $8 to $9, and cows $6.50 to $7.

Lamb Prices Advance.

During the holiday week approximately 4400 sheep and lambs were received as against actual receipts of 6314 last week and 4745 corresponding week last year.

Under light receipts and a good holiday demand, fat lamb prices were boosted 50 to 75 cents during the week, part of which accrued following the holiday. At present values are on the highest level since the middle of last July. Throwout lambs also came in for an advance of 50 cents to $1, and bulk prices are showing a material spread instead of the one-price bulk which has been in effect for several weeks past. Yearlings were too scarce to quote, while the supply of fat ewes was made up of a few individuals and odd lots which sold steady. Quality and finish of the lambs were quite desirable for the most part.

Dressed trade at Eastern wholesale markets was relatively stable during the week, with demand fair and prices carrying a firm undertone.

A deck of good to choice lambs went to shippers on Friday at $13.85, this price establishing the top for the week. Bulk of the fat lambs during the period cashed at $13 to $13.50, with the week-end bulk $13.50 to $13.75, latter price packer top. Throwout lambs were taken at $8.50 to $9, mostly $9 after midweek. A few fat ewes were noted at $5 to $5.50, mostly $5.50.

BOND MARKET IS ONE OF DULLEST OF YEAR

Lack of Interest Results From Firmness of Money and Holiday Apathy.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Dec. 28.—The final Saturday bond market of 1929 was one of the year's dullest. Lack of interest resulting from the firmness of money and the usual holiday apathy held the volume for the two hour session to $5,300,000.

In view of this dullness price changes were unimportant. A few representative rails, industrials and utilities of investment grade moved up about half a point, but only a handful turned over in even moderate volume. Selling for income tax purposes depressed some of the lower priced obligations, mostly in the industrial group.

First grade rails were firm and secondary listings showed to better advantage than yesterday in the few transactions recorded.

American Telephone convertible 4½s lost a point after fluctuating narrowly. International Telephone 4½s yielded about the same figure, but most of the other share privilege debentures were steady. An exception was the Lautaro Nitrate 6s which dropped to the new low of 74, contrasting with its mid-summer high of 104.

Miscellaneous issues which found higher levels included Bethlehem Steel 5½s, Central of Georgia 5s, Duquesne Light 4½s, New York Telephone General 4½s, North American Edison 5½s, and Union Pacific first 4s and 4½s. Their small upward turn was in line with the firmness of high-grade bonds during the holiday dullness.

United States Governments scarcely moved, and foreign obligations fared little better, although French 7s made another new high of 112½ on brisk trading.

COTTON TRADE QUIET AND PRICES LOWER

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Dec. 28.—Cotton was very quiet today with prices sagging off a few points under week-end realizing or liquidation. March contracts sold off from 17.48 to 17.40 and close at that figure, with the general market closing quiet at net declines of 5 to 8 points.

The opening was steady at an advance of 3 points to a decline of 1 point with the irregularity showing the effect of small orders in the comparatively narrow market. There was a little trade buying and covering, but it looked as though the technical position of the market had eased on the rally of about 50 points from recent low levels, and prices worked lower after the initial demand had been supplied. Selling was limited but there were not many buyers, apparently, and the lowest quotations of the day wer ereached in the late trading when January sold at 17.10 and May at 17.63. Spot was quiet, mids 17.30.

There was some New Orleans selling toward the close and perhaps a little local selling promoted by declines in the stock market but no sepial news factor was mentioned in connection with the decline, closing quotations were the lowest of the day.

Evidently traders found little in the week-end news to create trading interest. There was some bullish comment on reports that advices from the goods market stating that buying for immediate or prompt shipment was sufficient to indicate small stocks in the channels of distribution. These features may have accounted for some of the early buying, but the bulk of the day's business was attributed to week-end evening-up.

Liverpool cables said that trade calling had absorbed hedging and continental liquidation.

LOWER PRICE DRIFT MARKS CURB TRADE

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Dec. 28.—Stock prices drifted downward in today's curb market and in the absence of any new adverse busines sor trade developments, brokers attributed the selling to the usual year-end readjustment of speculative accounts. Trading was of a highly professional character.

Shenandoah Corporation issue sold within 1⅛ points of the year's low. Tri-Continental Allied fell 1⅝ points, but most of the other issues in that group showed only narrow fractional changes.

Unconfirmed rumors of a cut in mid-continent crude oil prices probably inspired some selling of the oil shares. Illinois Pipe Line dropped 10 points, Gulf of Pennsylvania 3⅝, and Humble 1⅛. Solar Refining broke nearly five points to 30, or just a point above the year's low.

Publication of an earnings report of the Fajardo Sugar Co., which showed a large deficit for the fiscal year ended July 21 last, was followed by a break of five points in that stock to 51, duplicating the year's low. The stock had sold as high as 124⅞ this year.

In the public utility group, Electric Bond and Share and Cities Service showed only fractional declines, but American and Foreign Power warrants, American Gas and Electric and American Light and Traction each showed losses of four points, or more. Memphis Natural Gas declined to a new low for the year.

New low records for the year were established during the day by Douglas Aircraft, Irving Air Chute, Mercantile stores, Lane Bryant preferred, National Bank Service, Seton Leather and Walgreen warrants.

Newmont Mining was down more than five points.

LOCAL WHEAT HIGHER AFTER LOWER RANGE

ST. LOUIS MERCHANTS' EXCHANGE, Dec. 28.—Wheat futures ranged lower early on the local market but recovered and closed 1⅛c to 1½c net higher following report of receipt of message from Argentine grain house indicating smaller exportable surplus than expected. Report of some wheat being taken at Gulf also exerted influence.

In the cash grain market, soft wheat was up 1½c. Offerings were small and there was light inquiry from order buyers, but there was practically no choice milling qualities on sale. Three cars of No. 2 sold direct from store at $1.38 and a track car of good No. 2 had $1.35 bid and was held at $1.38. Sales of No. 2 were on a basis 2c above the Chicago May figure and No. 3 weevily 3½c below. Hard wheat was 1½c to 2c higher. The basis as compared to futures was stronger. Offerings were light and mostly low grades of ordinary qualities. Most of the receipts reported were on contract. There was fair milling inquiry. Sales of No. 3 were on a basis 7½c below the Chicago May figure. Corn was steady to 1c off, but the basis on yellow as compared to futures was 1c and 1½c higher. Mill and shipping orders weer filled and there was a fairly active demand from elevators and local mills, and the moderate offerings cleared closely. Oats were in light offering. The better classes wer taken by local trade and mills.

Wheat opened unchanged to shade higher and then ranged fractionally lower in early period. Winnipeg was unchanged early and Liverpool closed ⅛d lower to ⅛d higher. Corn shaded a little early. May wheat opened at $1.33⅜, July wheat $1.33⅝ and May corn 96⅝c.

Local wheat receipts, which were 50,400 bushels compared with 30,800 a week ago and 46,200 a year ago, included 30 cars local and 6 through. Corn receipts, which were 67,200 bushels, compared with 50,400 a week ago and 140,000 a year ago, included 41 cars local and 7 through. Oats receipts, which were 15,400 bushels, compared with 22,000 a week ago and 38,000 a year ago, included 6 cars local and 1 through. Hay receipts were 9 cars local and 1 through.

WHEAT CLOSES HIGHER FOLLOWING A SETBACK

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Dec. 28.—Swift right-about-face action of wheat prices today resulted largely from word that Argentina as a source of supply is taking a backseat. One of the large grain concerns in Argentina was represented as having cabled an estimate that Argentina will have only 50,000,000 bushels of wheat available this season to meet European needs. This amount is much below any figures heretofore announced, and the market here suddenly began to climb, houses with foreign and seaboard connections taking the lead as buyers.

After jumping 3c a bushel from the day's low point, Chicago wheat closed nervous 1½c to 2⅛c above yesterday's finish. Corn closed unchanged to 1⅛c down, oats ⅛c off to ⅛c up, and provisions unchanged to a decline of 2c.

Helping to give decided impetus to late advances here in wheat values today were advices that more or less United States wheat at the Gulf of Mexico ready for immediate use had been purchased on a level equaling quotations for May delivery. This would be about 4c a bushel above the basis prevailing in export circles, and appeared to have an electric influence on the market in view of dispatches telling of vanishing supplies in Argentina. Hopes of enlarged trans-Atlantic demand for wheat from North America were also stimulated by talk current that European continental prices for native wheat have advanced sharply in comparison with United States markets.

Contrasting sharply with the price bulges which the Chicago wheat market scored in the late transactions, a downward trend was shown during the first part of the day. Among the factors responsible for the early setbacks here was dispatch saying that Argentine farmers were selling freely and were delivering liberally to exporters at unfixed prices. Such reports, however, were quickly lost sight of when subsequent more definite news from Argentina appeared to have far greater significance. The 50,000,000 bushel estimate of the Argentine exportable surplus available for Europe specified that the amount named is exclusive of 30,000,000 bushels required for Brazil and 10,000,000 bushels probably unmerchantable. No figures on North American wheat export business done today were obtainable.

Corn market weakness was associated with the fact that corn to fill December contracts here can be furnished by means of corn in cars on track in Chicago railroad yards.

Oats sympathized with corn.

Scattered liquidating sales tended to ease down the provision market.

"Blue Hell" Ball Given in Honor of Elizabeth Jamison

Novel Decorations at Glen Echo Country Club in Compliment to Song Featured by Princeton Triangle Club.

"WHEN you're dead!
And friends have all wiped their eyes,
The parson has closed his book,
And the journey's begun,
Devils come and as you can well surmise,
They wrap you in sheets of flame,
Oh Boy! Blue Hell is Waiting!"

"BLUE HELL" was realistically pictured last evening in striking decorations for a ball at the Glen Echo Country Club, given by Mr. and Mrs. Paul Bailey Jamison, 6105 Lindell boulevard, for their debutante daughter, Miss Elizabeth Jamison. Complimentary to the Princeton Triangle Club whose performance, "Le Chien d'Or" many of the guests witnessed at the Odeon preceding the party and whose members were among the guests, the decorative theme was developed from one of the song hits of the piece, "Blue Hell."

The entire club was draped in sulphur blue to represent the flames in satan's abode and was lighted by blue and white lights. The lounge with its blue festooned ceiling and draped walls had a wide valance of cloth of silver. Suspended from the ceiling a large revolving silver ball caught and reflected the tiny shafts of light from the chandeliers which were concealed by large blue shades ornamented with devils' masks. Imitation flames glowed in the fireplace about which were banked palms and evergreen interspersed with flowers.

Mr. and Mrs. Jamison and their daughter received in this room. The debutante wore the gown in which she served as maid of honor at the Veiled Prophet ball, a dainty frock of turquoise blue satin and tulle, designed with a long closely fitted bodice and a full tulle skirt trimmed in applique of the satin outlined in rhinestones. She carried a bouquet of pink roses. Mrs. Jamison wore a gown of pale blue crepe made on long sweeping lines and trimmed in rhinestones. Her flowers were orchids arranged in a shoulder corsage.

Upon entering the ballroom the guests passed through an arch over which forbidding figures held Dante's lines, "Abandon Hope All Ye Who Enter Here," and found themselves in the depths of an imaginary inferno. Blue flames leaped from the wall and a black, silver bordered freize depicted between bursts of fire, devils' heads grinning at the dancers.

At one side of the room was constructed an enclosure lined with a rock-like formation, from which emerged thin blue flames from a bed of hot coals. The entrance was guarded by a party of merry painted imps who tended the fire with pitchforks.

The lights were covered by cylindrical shades of deep brimstone blue edged with a silver scroll and decorated with heads of black devils. In a corner of the ball room an orchestra in red devils' costumes, played from an improvised stage. The entertainment was augmented by specialty numbers by members of the Triangle Club.

At midnight a buffet supper was served in the dining room, which, like the other rooms, was decorated in blue. The table, almost room length, was built in a several tiered, modernistic effect, covered with white, and on its top a frosted Christmas tree, revolved in the light from showers of globes overhead. Masses of poinsettias and greenery marked the various levels. Breakfast was served early in the morning at small tables laid in the grill.

More than 500 guests attended the party which was one of the most elaborate and the last of a long list of large affairs for this year's debutantes. Miss Jamison, a popular bud of the season, was formally presented to society at a tea which her mother gave at their home in October. Last night she was the guest of honor at a theater party at the Triangle Club performance at which Mr. and Mrs. James T. Pettus, 41 Kingsbury place, were host and hostess.

Louise Rexford Weds E. S. Wilson Jr. In Church Ceremony

SURROUNDED by decorations reflecting the traditions of Christmas—spicy cedar trees and lighted candles, combined with clusters of colorful poinsettias, Miss Louise Augustine Rexford, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ley Peterson Rexford, 4757 Westminster place, became the bride last night of Eugene Smith Wilson Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Smith Wilson of New York. The ceremony was performed at the Central Presbyterian Church by the Rev. A. L. Kinsolving, rector of the Grace Episcopal Church at Amherst, Mass., a close friend of the bridegroom. The wedding was one of the outstanding social events of the winter.

The chancel and altar were banked with Christmas trees, illuminated by the glow from many candles which filled standards of various heights. Tall vases of poinsettias provided a fitting background.

In keeping with the general color scheme, touches of poinsettia red were used on the costumes of the bride's attendants. The bridesmaids, Miss Alice Chapman, Miss Martha Schuyler, Miss Elizabeth Hoblitzelle, Miss Laura Capen, all of St. Louis; Miss Paisley Ball, Winnetka, Ill., and Miss Janet Williams, Montclair, N. J., were gowned in egg shell satin, fashioned after the empire mode, with short waisted surplice bodices cut to a low V, without sleeves, and long clinging skirts trailing at both sides. In lieu of arm bouquets they carried muffs of egg shell satin attractively decorated with feathery fern centered with clusters of poinsettias. Their slippers were of satin tinted to poinsettia red and adorned with crystal buckles, the gifts of the bride.

Mrs. Lindell Gordon Jr., formerly Miss Maud Miller Street, wore soft apple green satin, made en princesse to the hipline where it flared in circular effect to the floor and ended in a built-in train. A satin bow was attached to the gown at the low bodice edge, with streamers to the floor. She wore slippers to corespond, and her muff was of green satin with poinsettias.

The bride wore her mother's wedding gown of white satin, grown yellow in the 24 years since it was first worn. It was designed with a deep bertha of rose point-lace, and trimmed with many rows of hand shirring popular two decades ago. Short puff sleeves were edged with shirring, and more of it adorned the flaring skirt of the otherwise princesse gown which dipped into a train. A front panel

School Set at Luncheon Given by Mrs. Balfour Craib

Southern smilax covered the walls between the long windows, and was hung about the edges of the blue sky painted on the ceiling. Orange trees laden with ripe fruit concealed the windows and fireplace. Great clusters of yellow balloons with one of deep blue at the top of each were grouped around the sconces, the lights in which were in amber and blue. More balloons floated from the chair backs, and upon being released added a touch of blue and sun-tipped color to the sky-like ceiling.

One large table, shaped like a swastika, was laid for 170 guests, members of the school set. The place cards were of white swans, the nut cups in orange tints with a tiny tangerine fastened to the handles, and Silver icicles sparkled from the branches of the trees through the soft lights glowing from the tapers placed above the altar. On either side were placed large wrought iron baskets filled with brides roses and poinsettias. The bridal party came down the broad stairs and through the hall into the living room, being preceded by two of the groomsmen carrying white satin ribbons to form an inclosed court. On the east side of the room on an old refectory table and on the west side on a low cabinet were placed tall tapers in brass candlesticks and these were the only lights used during the ceremony.

Christmas Week At White House

WASHINGTON, Dec. 28.

CHRISTMAS week in Washington was home week for the student element. President and Mrs. Hoover had a family party about them much of the time. In spite of the White House fire there was never a more typically American holiday spent in the old mansion.

In addition to the formalities exchanged between President-elect Pascual Ortiz Rubio of Mexico and President and Mrs. Hoover, there was a continuous series of dinner parties in the White House.

At the dinner to the Mexican President-elect there were present the Ambassador of Mexico and Senora De Tellez, together with members of the Cabinet, several Senators and others from official life and their ladies.

Next Wednesday there will be a return to the interrupted official program when the President holds the New Year's day reception.

The White House celebration took on a colonial air Christmas eve and Christmas day, with a big tree standing in the main entrance hall, trimmed with gilt paper ornaments, chains, cornucopias, horns of plenty, stars, strings of popcorn, popcorn balls, ginger bread men, horses and candy canes.

There was another tree which stood at one end of the state dining room, but it was as modern as a long dress skirt, and flashed electric lights. There were gifts for every guest on both trees, and the two family dinner parties in the state dining room, one on Christmas eve, the other at noon on Christmas, were mixed events, with children and grown-ups seated about the same table.

Two of the debutantes of the week received flowers from the White House conservatories as they made their formal bows to high life in the capital. They are Miss Junia Culbertson, daughter of the United States Ambassador to Chile and Mrs. Culbertson, to whom Mrs. Hoover sent a big boquet of orchids and lilies of the valley, and Miss Mildred Huston, debutante daughter of Mr. Claudius Huston, chairman of the Republican National Committee, who received a similar bouquet. Miss Culbertson will open the bachelor cotillion next Jan. 13. Mrs. Edward Everett Gann, sister of the Vice President, will receive the guests at this cotillion, Allan Hoover, son of the President, attended the coming out ball of Miss Culbertson.

Mrs. Woodrow Wilson recently returned from extensive travel in the Orient a few days ago, poured tea at the coming out party of her niece, Miss Clara Lutz Bolling, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Wilmer Bolling. Mrs. Carry T. Grayson, wife of Admiral Carey Travers Grayson, who was a physician to President Wilson, also assisted at the tea.

The biggest Christmas gift received in the official set in point of bulk at least, was the fine saddle horse and hunter, "Lumber Jack," which Senator Tasker L. Oddie received from Mrs. Oddie Christmas morning. The Senator had seen and admired the horse when on a visit to Virginia.

How New York Society Folk Spent Christmas

NEW YORK, Dec. 28.

THE debutantes and collegians, whose gaieties have been overshadowed recently by the festivities of their elders, found themselves the center of the glittering Christmas pageant. From the first of this week until New Year's day they dominate the social stage and so many parties, dinners and dances have been planned in their honor that they have found it almost impossible to catch all their cues.

Many of the fashionable folk spent Christmas at their Long Island estates, where greenhouses and wooded acres supplied the poinsettas and Christmas trees for the decoration of the spacious homes. One of the largest family parties was held at East Island, the country home of J. P. Morgan, who has long made a practice of spending the holiday at his country place. His 15 grandchildren came from their own homes to gather around the big lighted tree that always marks the Morgan Christmas family party.

Mrs. Henry P. Davison Sr. gave her holiday party at her home at Peacock Point. Mr. and Mrs. Frederick B. Pratt entertained at their estate in Glen Cove, where an indoor squash court provides a favored amusement for their guests.

One of the gayest holiday debutante parties was given by Mrs. Edward C. Delafield at the Park Lane in honor of Miss Mary Delafield. The debutante, who wore a long frock of cream-colored satin and carried white orchids, received her guests in front of a tapestry of red and gold. The ballroom was massed with silver-decked Christmas trees and poinsettas brought from the hothouses of the Delafield country home at Riverdale, and the walls were hung with smilax and silver leaves.

More than 500 guests danced under the blue lights that played about the ballroom of the Ritz-Carlton for the coming-out party of Miss June Blossom.

The nuptials of Miss Lettys Curtis and Dr. Daniel Scott Jackson of Corbridge, Northumberland, England, caried out a white color scheme in the gowns of the bridal attendants and the decorations of the Madison Avenue Presbyterian Church, where the ceremony took place.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, Ronald Eliot Curtis, wore a simple gown of ivory planne velvet, made with a long full skirt which fell in a train of three tiers, the longest of which was bordered with Point de Venice lace. She wore a long tulle veil and carried a sheaf of lilies.

Her bridal attendants were costumed in frocks of cream-colored taffeta, made with tight-fitting bodices, short puffed sleeves and long circular skirts. They wore long white gloves and small caps of gold and silver mesh, the only color note in the ensemble being the red anemones that sprinkled their bouquets of white carnations.

While the larger part of New York's smart folk joined in the holiday gaities at home, many journeyed far afield to spend the winter season. Mrs. William G. Rockefeller was among the fashionables who embarked for Cuba and the West Indies. Mrs. Grahm Fair Vanderbilt expects to leave shortly for Florida, and others of society's members are already dividing their time between the golf links at Pinehurst, N. C., and the bridle paths at Aiken, S. C.

The music lovers in society's ranks deserted the debutante gaities Friday evening to hear the "Messiah" presented by the Oratorio Society of New York in Carnegie Hall. Hundreds of the fashionables filled the boxes during the oratorio which was conducted by Albert Stoessel.

Rilye Nelson Weds Walter D. Semple

BOONVILLE, Mo., Dec. 28. MISS RILYE STEPHENS NELSON, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Arthur W. Nelson, and Walter D. Semple, Prosecuting Attorney of Cooper County, were married this morning at Eastwood Farms, the Nelson home, 15 miles south of Boonville.

The ceremony was performed in the living room of the Nelson mansion with the couple standing in front of the fireplace, with a lighted Christmas tree adding its glow to the scene. The Rev. J. Roy Gregg, rector of Christ Episcopal Church, in Boonville, officiated in the presence of only immediate relatives. The bride, who became widely known when her father was candidate for Governor of Missouri in 1924, was attired in her great-grandmother's wedding dress, and wore a wedding veil which was worn by her aunt, the late Mrs. Martha Rolwing. Arthur Nelson III, brother of the bride, and Miss Betty Semple, sister of the bridegroom, were the attendants.

Following the wedding Mr. and Mrs. Semple departed for a short visit in St. Louis, after which they will be at home in Boonville.

The bride was educated at Lindenwood College, St. Charles, and Miss Maderia's school in Washington, D. C. She also attended the Erskine school in Boston and spent a summer in Europe traveling.

Mr. Semple, who is a son of Mrs. R. Belle Semple, Boonville, attended Missouri University and is a graduate of the law school of Washington University. His home was formerly in St. Louis.

CONGRESS RAKED FOR FAILING TO PROVIDE FOR OLD PEOPLE

Secretary of Society Aiding the Aged Calls Group Insurance and Industrial Pensions Inadequate.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 28.—Congress was criticised today by Abraham Epstein, secretary of the American Association for Old Age Security, for its alleged indifference to the destitute aged of America. Epstein said virtually every nation save the United States had made some provision for the dependent aged.

"The Christmas appeals of newspapers for poverty-stricken people," Epstein said, "are a humiliating blot on the fair name of our nation."

He declared that group insurance and industrial pension plans were inadequate to cope with the problem. He spoke at a breakfast meeting of the society.

Nora Bayes Not Yet Buried.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Dec. 28.—The body of Nora Bayes, actress, who died insolvent March 19, 1928, is in a receiving vault at Woodlawn Cemetery awaiting burial. Fees for the vault have been paid monthly by Benjamin Friedland, her husband. No explanation has been forthcoming from him. Theatrical friends of the comedienne in London have started raising funds for burial, but permission of the family is necessary.

RECEPTION FOR PASTOR 25 YEARS WITH CHURCH

Winnebago Presbyterians to Honor the Rev. Jerrie Johnson Tuesday Evening.

A quarter of a century has been spent in the pastorate of the Winnebago Presbyterian Church, 3711 Tennessee avenue, by the Rev. Jerrie Johnson, whose long service there will be honored by a New Year's eve reception at the church Tuesday evening.

The reception will last from 7:30 to 9 o'clock and there will be a ceremonial service from 9 to 10:15. A. T. Potthoff is chairman of the committee of members in charge of arrangements.

Twenty-five years ago, in 1904, the year of the Louisiana Purchase exposition here, the Rev. Mr Johnson became pastor of Winnebago Church, which had then only 94 members. It now has 650 members, besides 772 in the Sunday school and 370 in the home department. The Rev. Mr. Johnson in that time has married 450 couples—an average of 18 a year or one every three weeks.

Three times during the quarter of a century the St. Louis Presbytery has sent the Rev. Mr. Johnson to the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church as a commissioner—to Columbus, O., in 1907; Rochester, N. Y., in 1915, and Philadelphia in 1920. He was moderator of the Presbytery in 1915 and has held important committee posts in that ecclesiastical body.

Five members of Winnebago Church have become Presbyterian ministers during their pastor's time and another is studying to become one, while five women members have entered foreign mission work.

Two sons of the Rev. Mr. Johnson are ministers. One is the Rev. W. D. Johnson of Carondelet Presbyterian Church and the other is the Rev. John E. Johnson, a Navy chaplain on the U. S. S. Camden. The other sons are Dr. O. W. Johnson, a Kansas City physician, and Arthur Johnson, an attorney. One daughter, who was Miss Anna May Johnson, married an elder of a Presbyterian Church in Dubuque, Ia., and the other, Miss Nelle Johnson, is at Asheville, N. C., with the Presbyterian Board of National Missions.

University Head to Quit.

LEXINGTON, Va., Dec. 28.—Dr. Henry Louis Smith, 70 years old, president of Washington and Lee University, will retire Dec. 31, after serving 49 years as teacher and university head, it is announced today. His resignation was tendered in October, 1928, but was deferred at the trustees' request. Smith plans to move to Greensboro, N. C., and take up business.

THREE PAIRS OBSERVE WEDDING ANNIVERSARIES 20TH TIME

Herman Hoch, Harry Seidell and W. W. Hall, With Wives, Have Done So Annually.

For the twentieth consecutive time six persons celebrated their wedding anniversaries together last Friday evening at dinner. They are Mr. and Mrs. Herman F. Hoch, 435 Oakwood avenue, Webster Groves; Mr. and Mrs. Harry Seidell, 836 Westwood place, Kirkwood, and Mr. and Mrs. William W. Hall, 3936 Greer avenue, St. Louis.

The dinner, at which six other guests were included, was held at the home of the Hochs, whose thirtieth anniversary it was. The Seidells have been married 26 years and the Halls 25 years. Hoch is principal of the Cote Brilliante School, Seidell principal of the Marquette School, and Hall teacher in Spanish at Beaumont High School.

The three pairs came to St. Louis a little more than 20 years ago, the husbands to take positions with the St. Louis public schools. None of them had met before coming here. The celebrations, at which is has become customary to have six other guests, are held in rotation at the celebrants' homes.

SALE OF NEW COLISEUM ORDERED ON FORECLOSURE

Holders of $250,000 in Bonds Allege Default in Interest Payments; Other Claims.

A decree was signed by Circuit Judge Landwehr yesterday ordering the sale of the New Coliseum building and contents, at Jefferson and Washington avenues, on foreclosure. The sale is to be conducted by Andrew H. Kaufman and Ben Phillipson as receivers of the Coliseum Co., at the Real Estate Exchange, at a time to be fixed by them.

The receivers were appointed in October on petition of the Mercantile Commerce Bank & Trust Co., as trustees for a group of bondholders, who alleged default in payment of interest on a $250,000 bond issue. It was further set forth that the company had failed to meet monthly payments of $1000 due in November to John and Frank McNeary, owners of the ground, each of whom was guaranteed $500 a month as long as he lived.

Judge Landwehr's decree shows that $173,750 is still due on the principal of the bonds, with $8841 added as interest. There is also due, besides rental to the McNearys, the sum of $17,375 in attorneys' fees and $2000 for expenses, the court found.

FEDERAL AID FOR EDUCATIONAL RADIO PROGRAMS PROMISED

Secretary Wilbur to Give His Personal Attention to Fostering This Work.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 28.—Any broadcaster ready to proceed with educational radio programs will receive the assistance of the Bureau of Education.

In addition, Secretary of the Interior Wilbur said today that he would give his personal attention to educational radio programs so far as his time permits. His announcement was made following the preliminary report of a fact finding committee appointed last June to ascertain possibilities of education by radio.

The aid to be given educational broadcasting by the office of education marks the first step of the Interior Department toward working out a specific plan for use of radio in direct application to education, as distinct from programs primarily for entertainment.

Wilbur said the Radio Committee has practically finished its work and that a complete report with recommendations will be ready by the first of the year. He added that the committee's measure of the possibilities appear so promising that the department is preparing to lend every possible aid.

WATCHMAN AND NEGRO STOLE TON OF IRON, POLICE SAY

Have Admitted Taking Metal Ingots From St. Louis Coffin Co.

Clarence W. Pierson, 1031 St. Ange avenue, a licensed watchman employed by the St. Louis Coffin Co., 1821 Chouteau avenue, and William Stafford, 1822 Papin street, a Negro employe of the company, have admitted, according to police, taking slightly more than a ton of iron from the supply for coffin handles.

They sold about $40 worth of it and a quantity was found in Stafford's home, police said. Thirty-six ingots weighing 60 pounds each were taken. Stafford was arrested first and involved Pierson, police reported. Pierson has been suspended by police as a watchman.

She had been under treatment for a nervous disorder and had frequently talked of suicide to hospital attaches.

Winston Churchill Impressed By a New and Thriving Canada, Reservoir of Grain and Minerals

He Finds Montreal and Toronto Scenes of Immense Development, Quebec Like Scotland—Sees Winnipeg at Harvest Time.

By WINSTON CHURCHILL.

IN revisiting the new world after nearly 30 years, I planned to sail direct from England to Canada and to travel across the Dominion to the Pacific, to descend the shores of that ocean as far as the Mexican border, and thence to work back by the Grand Canyon to Chicago and the Atlantic.

THIS is the seventh of ten articles by Winston Spencer Churchill, British statesman, on his impressions during a recent tour. Churchill, who was First Lord of the Admiralty at the beginning of the World War, was Chancellor of the Exchequer in the Conservative Cabinet which went out of office when Ramsay MacDonald became Prime Minister. In next Sunday's article he will write of a visit to the battlefields of Virginia.

This journey of about 15,000 miles can be conveniently made in three months. The voyage from Southampton to Quebec or Montreal carries one, in a week, less than half of which is in the open sea, up the noble estuary of St. Lawrence into the heart of Eastern Canada. It has the disadvantage of omitting the long-settled and highly developed maritime provinces of Canada, and it exposed me to the kindly reproach of "having started a thousand miles too far inland." But otherwise it is to be strongly recommended. The romantic charm of the City of Quebec is matched by the singular beauty of the surrounding country. When I arrived it suggested Scotland at its best; the fertility of the lowland and the rugged grandeur of the highlands, enhanced by the splendors of autumn forests.

To feel a country, you have to nibble its grass and handle its trees. An hour's run from Quebec led me into the delicious valleys of the Jacques Cartier. The meadows expanded amid wooded heights; clear streams descended on every side, from lake to lake and pool to pool, all abounding in fish, to swell the broad, fast-flowing river. Water power, timber, farming, sport, glorious scenery, buoyant air! What a place to make a home!

Even Bridge Is Same.

The view of the St. Lawrence from the Heights of Abraham reproduces with uncanny similarity that of the Firth of Forth from the gardens of Hopetown; the same broad fields, the same purple grass, the same vegetation, the same clear, keen atmosphere and even the same vast cantilever bridge. I had never visited Quebec before, and followed with the deepest interest Wolfe's amazing exploit.

Well it is said that genius is akin to madness; for what could be more mad than to have dared that long succession of decisive risks? To quit his base and sever his communications; to divide his forces, to row the main part upstream past the batteries of the fortress, amid enemy patrol boats with nothing but darkness and fortune for his ally; to make his little army climb and scramble up an earthly cliff, difficult for even a single accoutered man, and lastly, with no hope of retreat by land or water, to range it in battle against well-trained troops twice his numbers. Yet genius overcame these very hazards and in their extravagance rested the safety and hope of the attempt. Nothing in war is comparable to surprise.

The capital cities of Montreal and Toronto, each with a population of more than a million, had quadrupled in size and multiplied still more in wealth, since I last visited them. Today they are the scenes and centers of an immense economic and social development. Their wonderful communications by water and by railway unite them not only to the continent, but to the world.

We left Toronto in the Canadian Pacific car which was to be our home for some weeks and plunged out on a 1200-mile swoop to Winnipeg. The fertile, cultivated lands of Ontario, rich in fruit and vegetables, studded with hamlets and farms—regions definitely subjugated by man, perennial fountains of commerce and agriculture—were left behind us.

Savage, Desolate Beauty.

The train entered a vast "No Man's Land." Hour after hour for hundreds of miles we traversed scenes of savage but desolate beauty. One rocky wooded hill succeeded another in every direction, and in their recesses were innumerable lakes. Here and there a swift-flowing river, packed with floating timber, gave some evidence of structure and activity; but for the rest it was a wild tumult of ground stern and lonely. Even along the railways scarcely a dwelling could be seen. We were crossing a petrified sea whose waves were rocks, whose foam was forest. I could not imagine how anyone except the Indian hunter traversed these wilds on foot where valley leads to valley and range succeeds range in seemingly endless succession. A wild beauty haunts these solitudes so plentifully supplied with water, so clothed in forests.

Very early in the morning we were at Sudbury at the extreme north of Lake Ontario. I looked through my window into the paling dawn and saw the flames of furnaces and the pouring smoke of chimneys here and there on the horizon. These harsh regions are now the center of great mineral wealth. No one can tell what wealth they hold; but here at any rate, is one of the world's finest deposits of nickel and copper. The conductor, seeing me peering through the window at the bleak panorama, interjected "Here's where all those great fortunes have been made in the last few years. Yes, sir! This is International Nickel."

Lake Superior Sunset.

All day long we journeyed through uninhabited lands of monotonous beauty, and as evening fell the train skirted the northern shores of Lake Superior. The limpid waters, clear and blue, of a mighty inland sea fringed with rocky islands and marvelously tinted by the sunset greeted the eye. The train wound for a hundred miles or more along the shores of the lake. One could see the rocks, worn smooth by the winter storms of ages, running deep down into the clear water. Here and there a hamlet, a few fishing boats, and to the north the same wonderful unending alternation of lakes and mountains. With the night we arrived at Fort William. It is a tremendous piece of machinery for storing and embarking grain. Miles of enormous elevators, a good harbor, a fleet of grain ships, deep water communications with all the great lakes, with all the great cities on their shores, with canal systems constantly improving, with the St. Lawrence River, with the ocean, with the world; a fountain of food as yet the unique outlet of the Manitoba wheat fields.

It was not until the next morning that we reached the plains. The rocky hills were left behind and so were the lakes and forests. We were traversing the bed of a long vanished sea, once larger than all the great lakes put together. Roads and homesteads, sometimes—though not often enough—protected by well planted trees, mark the surface of man-

U. S. Absence From League Will Complicate London Conference Problems, Herriot Believes

"Naval Question Has Not Two But Three Hearth Stones: Washington, Geneva and—Hear Me Well—Berlin."

By ÉDOUARD HERRIOT,
Former Premier of France.

PARIS, Dec. 28.

THE gathering of diplomats in London in January to discuss the furthering of peace by lessening each Power's ability to wage naval warfare, has the earmarks of being the most important world conference since the Versailles Treaty meetings. It picks up and carries much further the Kellogg and Briand ideas of making war more difficult and London may conclude the admirable work undertaken in Washington.

For my own part, I am optimistic, although as a Frenchman I must say that France enters the conference with greater prospects of sacrifice than any other power. The conference troubles France greatly. To prepare for it, interministerial conferences came one after another during December in Paris. One of the most important occurred at the office of Tardieu in mid-December, and the greatest interest attaches to the presence there of Minister of Colonies Francois Pietri, the Corsican protege of Clemenceau.

The presence of Pietri at the conference indicates that the French Government intends to defend its world interests in the grave discussion of the naval problem.

All Things With an Eye on League of Nations.

Moreover, the summoning of Manigli, the leader of the French functions at the League of Nations is an assurance that nothing will be done which is not in accord with the work at Geneva, with the efforts of the preparatory committee and the program of the general conference for disarmament. France has no desire to take at any time a position which might hinder nations, large or small, which are already associated with the efforts of the League of Nations.

On all sides there are preparations for the important event. We learn from Tokio that Japan is not likely to accept for light cruisers the proportion of 60 per cent fixed at Washington, and that Wakatsuki will uphold before the London conference the necessity of determining the number of cruisers by the general economic status of each country (the length of its sea-coast, commerce, ocean routes and so forth).

Much nearer to us, Italy is examining the problem of submarine craft. Certain of her technicians have counseled her openly to relinquish this defensive arm. A naval officer of high rank writes in the Giornale d'Italia that the next war will be waged by entirely new methods and that the military objectives which Italy might hope to gain with submarine methods will be obtained by other and better adapted means. At the same time, Italy may be persuaded by certain political reasons which seem to her desirable, to abandon the policy of seeking naval parity with France.

Comparisons, Negotiations, "An Excellent Formula."

In truth, there are many complications involved without speaking of the famous rights of neutrals on the high seas. Happily, understanding minds are employed and will continue to be employed in reducing the difficulties already so numerous. France cordially welcomes the recent speech of Arthur Henderson; his courtesy and generosity were deeply appreciated. The English Foreign Minister defends, as we do, the League of Nations, and like us considers the London conference a prelude to conversations by the Geneva Assembly on a General Conference on Disarmament.

"The understanding arrived at between President Hoover and Mr. MacDonald," said Henderson, "does not signify that we are going to submit at the conference propositions determined exclusively by British interests. We shall attempt, on the contrary, by means of negotiations and comparisons, to effect a reduction and limitation of armaments which is in the interest of all."

Comparisons and negotiations—such is the formula of Henderson—and it is an excellent one. The words spoken in London on Dec. 8 by Gen. Dawes were not less wise. As my great friend, Jacques Louis Dumesnil, recently declared, France intends to show on her part every possible evidence of good will. Article 8 of the pact of the League of Nations obliges us "To reduce our armaments to the minimum compatible with national security and with the execution of international obligations imposed by common action."

An interesting snapshot of M. Herriot.

We frankly accept this obligation, and if the protocol we proposed in 1924 had been ratified, perhaps the problem submitted to the London Conference would not exist today.

Today two theoretical principles must be faced: one, adhered to by France, Italy, Japan and the preparatory committee on disarmament in its entirety, is that of disarmament by each country according to the necessities of maintaining security—which implies the interdependence of all armaments, land, naval, aerial—and the other which seems to be the theory of Great Britain and the United States hopes for a regulation separating the three forms of armament, and particularly naval disarmament. If we understand clearly our American friends, land disarmament for them would be merely a European problem, while naval disarmament would be a world problem.

French Say All Forms of Armament Are Inter-Related.

The French uphold the theory of inter-relation of the three armaments, agreeing at the same time to the necessity of solving the problem placed before us for all Powers to decide; for Spain, for the South American Republics, and for Russia as well. Here is an example which vindicates our stand. Although limited by the Treaty of Versailles, Germany launched her famous light cruiser A, and this phantom ship, springing abruptly out of the depths of Scapa Flow, is already a troubling problem.

There are other conflicts of theory. For France and Italy, the limitation of fleets must be governed by the global tonnage; for our Anglo-Saxon friends it must operate by categories. The celebrated Washington conference of 1921-1922 created an international agreement valid until 1936 concerning various facilities for aeronautics; it left unsolved the problem of cruisers, destroyers and submarines. Let us not return to the causes which provoked in 1927 the checkmate to the three-nation conference at Geneva—brought about by the then existing opposition between Britain and the United States—or the failure of the British compromise of 1928 by the double refusal of the United States and Italy. The last named country remained insistent upon the global tonnage theory and claimed parity with France.

This formidable imbroglio still existed when the Kellogg Pact was interposed—the document which placed war outside the law and upon which the entire London conference is founded. Among other interesting facts, the Gibson declaration of April 22, 1929, opened new possibilities of negotiation; the conversations of Hoover and MacDonald further cemented the understanding between the United States and Britain. The London conference was made possible.

France will attend this conference, but, we say frankly, with a presentiment of certain danger for her. We are not able, since the general formulas that we proposed for the protocol were rejected, to expose either the security of our parent country or that of our colonies. The most peace-loving among us

He Advises Delegates to Beware Lest Russia Order Several Playthings (Battleships) From Germany.

(and I swear I can give proof of what I say) are afraid of a rearrangement of the German naval organization—in our eyes an imminent menace. For us there is the problem of submarines that our Anglo-Saxon friends would like to see suppressed, as Kellogg proposed in the note of Feb. 5, 1929. Whether it is desirable or not, this suppression would be conducive to the absolute mastery of the seas by the United States and Great Britain, states that can be called in alluding merely to capital ships, the great capitalists of the ocean.

Germany, by the very treaty of Versailles, can construct six battleships of 10,000 tons each without limitation of the caliber of her guns, while Washington has reduced us to a maximum caliber of eight inches. In fact, the new German craft carries guns of 280 millimeters; its power is obtained by eight Diesel motors developing 50,000 horsepower. Already, indeed, the present antiquated English and American cruisers and battleships are seriously menaced. When this craft is escorted by its five brothers it will be, you may well believe, a formidable family; one which will be easily able, the necessity arising, to forsake its touristic jaunts in the Baltic Sea. Pay close attention, my good delegates in London, that Russia does not order from Germany several playthings of the same type.

Insists on Submarines as Essential to Defense.

In Washington, France declared loyally she was making all the conditions necessary to her security for craft other than capital ships and airplane carriers. She did not even construct the great units to which she had a right, but she will not be able to give up the submarine, a defense which is essential to her, not only through her own interest, but through that of all the lesser Powers; she will not be able to renounce her protection of her own security and that of her colonies by upholding the theory of the independence of the three armaments, by setting aside the Geneva laws.

We French Democrats see once again in the present difficulties, proof of the complications entailed when there is a refusal to accept a universal solution for universal problems. In proposing the protocol, France offered to regulate by the application of a single method all these current questions. The naval question has not two but three hearth stones: Washington, Geneva, and—hear me well—Berlin. France, as she did at the Franco-British compromise in July-October, 1928, will do her best to reach an understanding since she herself set the example in the transaction on global tonnage.

Absence of U. S. From League Raises Difficulties.

But we would not pardon a government which would sacrifice our independence and our security. Italy in reflecting, will understand that the interests binding her to us in ties of friendship surpass in importance immeasurably those which might oppose her to us. Again there is going to be seen the difficulty arising from the official absence of the United States from the great international and permanent organization of peace. Will the London conference succeed as the Washington conference succeeded, or will it fail as the three-nation conference failed? Nobody knows and in any case, in the same way that we have frankly exposed our conditions, we will aid frankly in the ultimate object of the conference—success.

But to be definite, there are two methods which are opposed to each other in this grave affair of naval disarmament. One of these methods consists in first creating an understanding between the strongest two naval Powers in order to apply it thereafter to five and then stretch it finally to all the states. Is that really a modern formula for peace? Is it not a heritage from the ancient formulas of force and power?

The other formula, which is the French formula, consists, as we have tried so often at Geneva, in bringing to bear the combined study of the assembly of nations on universal problems. It is a method ambitious in appearance but simpler in reality because it does not multiply categories, particular cases and exceptions.

Whatever happens, France will do all that can be expected of her to reach a final accord, but she will perceive in her work in London—and this will not be the least honor of her role—that in acting for her own cause, she will also act for all nations that have territory to defend, national independence to safeguard.

Is It Right to Hang a Man?

Lord Birkenhead Discusses The English Law, Its Effect Upon the Potential Murderer

Cites Killings of Unusual Brutality—Thinks at Times of Hysterical Interest in Slayer Victim Is Forgotten.

By the EARL OF BIRKENHEAD,
Former Lord Chancellor of England.

LONDON, Dec. 10.

THERE is an opinion, held by responsible people, that it is no longer right to retain the death penalty as a form of criminal punishment. Probably it is impossible to convince them that their opinion is erroneous, but there is a danger that they may by their insistence impose that opinion upon the community if nothing is said on the other side.

It is to those who have an open mind, and are therefore ready to consider carefully the arguments on both sides, that these observations are addressed. I do not desire to preach to the converted or to persuade those who are convinced that I must be wrong.

I think it uncontrovertible that a country can call upon its men to die in order that the community may live. It does not matter whether the soldiers are volunteers or conscripts. Consequently, I doubt whether the principle underlying the objection to the death penalty is not really the expression of unconscious pacificism.

Yet, it may be objected, such a sacrifice is for the life of the community. The death penalty is a punishment for an offense against its laws. Is there, then, no crime which is aimed against the life of the community?

Spies and Traitors.

What, then, are we to say of a foreign spy who is seeking to discover and betray our secrets to the enemy? What as to that viler person, the traitor, who seeks to subvert the laws and constitution of our country, who lends his aid to the enemy which is attacking our lives and liberty? If it is lawful to resist the enemy and kill him in open, manly conflict, is it not also right to trample out the life of the worm who is a canker in our midst?

What is the object of punishment? I take it that primarily the object is to inflict upon the offender punishment for his misdeeds, and also, if it be possible, to cause him (or others similarly disposed) to reform. It must also not be forgotten that it acts as a deterrent to others, and further by punishing an offender after a due examination into his guilt, it prevents both the community and individuals from taking the law into their own hands to exact retribution.

I am unmoved by the argument that the death penalty does not deter murderers. In the sense that no punishment has ever been an effective deterrent to a man who has committed a crime, it is a mere platitude. If punishment were an effective deterrent in all cases, there would be no crime.

A criminal is a man who has not been deterred, whether he be a pickpocket, a burglar, a bigamist, or a murderer. In his case the deterrent has failed. But to argue from the exceptions that hanging is no deterrent to a man who may be tempted to commit murder is to advance a very grave error of reasoning. We should require to know all the cases in which that temptation has arisen and has been resisted, and in what number or proportion of cases the death penalty has operated to aid resistance to temptation.

I am certain that in the case of dangerous crimes, such as burglary and housebreaking, the fact that detection and capture will, at worst, lead to imprisonment; but that the avoidance of capture by murder will cause his life to be forfeit, has operated, and does operate, upon the minds of criminals who spend their lives in such pursuits, and that thereby householders have gained a security which would not otherwise be theirs.

Four Great Crimes.

Let us leave on one side the case of the foreign enemy and the foreign spy, and the soldier who dies in our defense, and consider the problem as one merely of criminal law. Let us concede, what is the fact, that the death penalty is a most serious one, which should not and must not be inflicted save to correct the gravest crimes. Then, examining those cases and investigating instances where persons have been guilty of such crimes, we shall see the problem in a concrete form.

There are four crimes for which the penalty is death: Treason, arson, etc., in arsenals and dockyards; piracy with violence, and murder. There are, I believe, no others. We must remember that it is not sufficient to dispute the justice of the death penalty in the case of any particular crime; it may well be that with regard to that offense the need for such a punishment has ceased though the penalty is retained, but that will not show that the penalty should be inflicted in other cases. It must be that there is no crime so enormous that the offender must die.

Now as to treason. We know that, in days gone by, treason was a charge often made on inadequate facts and under barbarous laws. We do not always bear in mind that those barbarous laws have been repealed, and that the law of treason is now comparatively simple.

I conceive that in some of the existing cases it may well be that the death penalty is excessive, but most of them are also triable under the treason-felony acts which were passed so that the offense can be treated as a felony without capital punishment.

Casement—The Traitor.

There is, unfortunately, a recent case, that of Casement. This man, born of good family, had spent his life in the service of the state. He had shortly before the war retired on a pension, after receiving a knighthood for his services.

For some reason, which remains obscure, he became disaffected, and during the war he was proved by the clearest possible evidence to have been engaged in the German service. He sank so low as to attempt to seduce British soldiers from their allegiance and he was sent on an expedition intended to hold up a considerable portion of our forces, at a time when we were straining every nerve and needed all our resources to resist the enemy attack. He was captured and his attempt failed. He had a fair trial and was condemned. He had, in the hour when his country was most in danger, helped those who were threatening not only us but the world.

Was it wrong to declare his life forfeit? If it was, then one must admit that there can be no case in which the state can say that a man shall die. I am certain that it will be generally agreed that his sentence was just and merited, and that it was right that he should die.

Of the second offense, I believe that there is no modern instance in this country. During the war there was found no one so base as to inflict that injury upon the country, or to give such assistance to the enemy. If there had been, the offender would have been aiming at the life of the community.

I know that my retirement will make no difference in its cardinal principles; that it will always fight for progress and reform, never tolerate injustice or corruption, always fight demagogues of all parties, never belong to any party, always oppose privileged classes and public plunderers, never lack sympathy with the poor, always remain devoted to the public welfare, never be satisfied with merely printing news; always be drastically independent; never be afraid to attack wrong, whether by predatory plutocracy or predatory poverty.

Rep. Elmer on State Police.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

I READ your editorial Wednesday on the "Proposed State Police." In the main I concur with it, and the very reason you suggest is probably the main one why the bill was not passed by the Fifty-fifth General Assembly. It would be no time until the State police would be a mere smelling committee searching and arresting citizens without any justification or excuse. An officer now arrests for the commission of a misdemeanor in his presence, or where he has reasonable grounds to believe that a felony has been committed, and in St. Louis police can arrest where they have reasonable grounds to believe that a misdemeanor or felony had been committed. It is very easy for officers to give some sort of excuse on which to base this reasonable ground. The scent of moonshine whisky emanating from a car and assailing the olfactory nerves of a policeman has been held a reasonable ground upon which to search the car. So it is easy to see what the State police would be doing in a short time.

One of the main reasons why I opposed the bill in the last Legislature was the fact that in the country where there are no police, very few crimes are committed, and are almost immediately detected and arrest follows; while in the large cities, where all of the police are, the major crimes are most rampant. The State could not afford to patrol all the highways in an efficient manner. The last bill provided for 100 State police. Each policeman would have to patrol 15 miles of concrete and 66 miles of secondary roads if the State is to be policed. To say this could be done is idle talk. The reasonable cost of this could not be less than $300,000 per year, and this in view of the proposed increase of taxes to meet the requirements outlined by the recent Survey Commission where $158,000,000 additional taxes are demanded for other purposes. These are additional reasons why I think the State police would be an "intolerable affliction."

Hunting Abuses.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

ON Dec. 1, (Sunday), three hunters from St. Louis were driving out Cap-au-Gris street in Troy. A squirrel ran across the street into Judge E. B. Woolfolk's yard. These three hunters got into action at once and after one volley the squirrel fell to the ground and one hunter went into the yard to retrieve the game. He was met by the Judge with this question: "Why don't you go hunting in the Zoo—it's closer to you and the game is bigger?" and then for good measure the Judge added a few more remarks.

Four laws violated. Shooting on the highway, in the city limits, on Sunday and trespassing.

Last fall at Moscow some St. Louis hunters fired at a bunch of quail in a corn field. They heard a boy scream. They asked him if he was hurt. He replied that he was. The hunters ran. The boy went to the house with his eye shot out and his team had run off, tearing up the wagon (he was gathering corn).

Besides these incidents I can give names of farmers that have had horses and mules shot, pigs shot, chickens shot and stuffed into hunting coats; sounds bad, does it not? The country and the city must try to get together on this question. Both sides are to blame, don't you think?

Poisoned Liquor.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

THE wets are clamoring a lot of clams about deaths from "poisoned liquor." Liquor is itself poison. The word "intoxicating" means poisoning. All intoxicating liquor is, by definition, poisoning liquor. To poison poison works no harm unless the poison introduced is more deadly. In point of fact, the denaturants introduced into alcohol are usually less poisonous than alcohol. The wets have poisoned the public mind by falsely stating that the Government poisons alcohol to make it dangerous and deadly. The purpose of denaturing alcohol is to make it so unpalatable that it is undrinkable. Dr. George H. Bigelow, Commissioner of Public Health of Massachusetts, states:

> What is killing people now who die of alcoholism is what killed them back in the days of the high alcoholic death rates of 1916 and 1917 and before, namely, ethyl alcohol, grain alcohol or "good pure" alcohol.

Dr. Reid Hunt of Harvard Medical School confirms this observation from his personal investigations.

It is probably true that bootleggers and moonshiners occasionally, in the process of coloring, redistilling and blending, hit upon a concoction more deadly than alcohol. But in any case there is an absolutely sure preventive which is always available, and with which every drinker is perfectly familiar—don't drink it. That is a remedy which has never been known to fail as an effective antidote for either pure or poisoned alcohol.

RAILROAD CONSOLIDATION.

Against its will and better judgment, the Interstate Commerce Commission has drawn up a plan to consolidate the railroads of the country into 19 major systems. It was compelled to do so by a clause in the transportation act of 1920. Twice it asked Congress to be relieved of the task because of its belief that "such a plan is either impossible or unwise, in view of the extreme difficulty of predicting future developments in transportation." The commission also demurred because this feature of the transportation act was badly drawn and placed what seem to be insuperable obstacles to any such complete consolidation as Congress had in mind. Receiving no authority to discontinue the work, it has done its best to carry out the mandate.

The joker in the law is in the matter of procedure. It is provided that before any particular consolidation is authorized by the commission it must first ascertain the value of the properties involved. This task alone would require years of laborious investigation, with long-drawn-out litigation as a possible sequel. Some less cumbersome way to ascertain capitalization was vainly suggested by the commission. The law also provides that consolidation be dependent upon the unanimous consent of all the carriers involved. This means that any small carrier, dissatisfied with the price paid for it, could upset the whole plan, or that, to obtain unanimity, the larger carriers in the consolidated group would be forced to buy up the smaller ones at their own figure. Thus the transportation act's provisions violate a rudimentary business principle.

Perhaps the most illuminating comment on the commission's plan is found in the separate opinion of Commissioner Eastman. Although differing from the majority in certain important respects he concurs in the plan largely "because it is not very important, after all, whether or not it is the best plan that could be devised." He means that, since no authority exists to carry the plan into effect and since it may be altered at the commission's discretion, the plan carries no greater weight than a mere suggestion from the commission.

Mr. Eastman is unable to discover any strong sentiment for consolidation, except among bankers who would profit by it. He says:

> Such sentiment as appears to exist in favor of the consolidation of the railroads into a very few great systems is, I believe, largely artificial. According to my observation, there is very little sentiment of this kind among either shippers or railroad officers. For the most part I think that it emanates from financial circles which are likely to reap large profits from the mere process of putting the roads together.

The Commissioner feels a major merger program would heighten the alarm felt in the country over the progress of consolidations and unification among industries in general. This movement, tending to place control of industry into fewer and fewer hands, may be inevitable in some industries, and even as to the railroads, but he does not see any reason for official acceleration of it. Moreover, he is not impressed with the arguments that consolidation would lead to increased efficiency. He says:

> There are strong grounds for belief that the best results in operating efficiency and service are secured when a railroad system is small enough so that the executive can maintain something like personal contact with the employes all down the line and also with the shippers in the territory served.

Under all the circumstances, there would seem to be little profit in discussing details of the commission's plan. It becomes largely of academic interest, for example, to find that System No. 19 provides for the union of the Rock Island and the Frisco with some 39 subsidiaries. Conceivably, a Rock Island-Frisco merger would be highly desirable, but it would be difficult even for transportation experts to give a definite judgment on such a merger, complicated as it is by 39 subsidiary ones. The fact that the commission seemingly favored the Van Sweringens, or Prof. Ripley's point that the fifth Eastern trunk line outlined by the commission is unwise, likewise are of little more than controversial value.

The real battle will come later when and if the railroads undertake to comply with the commission's plan. Unless Congress makes the commission's plan mandatory, the chances are the railroads will not take the initiative, but will dismiss the subject, except in isolated instances. Of course, there is always the chance that promoters, like the Van Sweringens, will seek to capitalize the commission's plan, but they will do so without the sympathy of the great bulk of practical railroad men.

To sum up, the merger plan was conceived in an awkwardly written law and perfunctorily created by an unwilling commission. It has all the faults of any grandiose scheme which attempts to put down on paper what can only be worked out in a long process of trial and error, subject to economic laws and transportation necessities. Its virtue is the negative one that it has no binding effect.

THE SEARCH FOR EIELSON.

Both here and in Russia there should be satisfaction at the way human needs have cut the red tape of diplomacy. In appealing directly although "unofficially" to the Soviet for help in finding two missing American aviators, Secretary Wilbur has acted wisely. Had he sent his message to an "outlaw" nation through the State Department, it might have been lost in the tortuous mazes of diplomatic form. The request, although belated, for co-operation in seeking Lieut. Ben Eielson and Earl Borland, missing off the Northeast Siberian coast since Nov. 9, may result in success. In any event, it is another indication of how senseless is continued refusal of the United States to recognize Russia.

It is on recommendation of the veteran explorer Stefansson that the search gains new impetus. There is a good chance for the men to have survived, he says, pointing out the many landing places in the Arctic. Although they carried for themselves only a month's food supply, they also had rations good for 30 days intended for the icebound ship Nanuk, whose passengers they were engaged in rescuing. The probable scene of their mishap has been narrowed down to a 50-mile strip. Eielson has a long record of Arctic experience, and has been missing in the Far North before. In 1927 he and Sir Hubert Wilkins were gone almost a month and then reached safety, relating how they had been forced down in a storm, had waited in the plane for better weather, and then, with great difficulty, had taken off again.

Since most of the available planes have crashed in the search, Stefansson thinks it is time to call on Russian icebreakers and aircraft. The work of the Russians in rescuing eight members of the Italia party has not been forgotten. The Soviet has the best facilities for the search, which has now commenced, stimulated by a $1000 reward by Russia.

FRANCE AND THE LONDON PARLEY.

In rejecting the Kellogg treaty as a basis for naval disarmament and asserting that France is not interested in the forthcoming London parley as an end but merely as a discussion as to how that end might be brought about, Premier Tardieu confirms the expectation that the French mean to throw a monkey wrench into the machinery at London next month.

That is, the French have not despaired of an Anglo-French entente. They arranged one secretly two years ago with Mr. Baldwin's Tory Government, and if they could do it once they believe they can do it again. The Labor Government which looks across to the United States enjoyed once before a brief period of power, and France knows no reason why its present tenure should be very much longer. The strategy of France is therefore to obstruct agreement between England and the United States, and as one of the five powers among whom agreement will be sought at London she is in a position to exercise great influence.

Whatever we may make of the friendly negotiations between Messrs. Hoover and MacDonald, to France they mean an Anglo-American alliance. Nothing could be farther from the thought of Mr. Hoover, or from the thoughts of all those who look forward hopefully to the London parley, than that naval parity should constitute an entente. To the French that is exactly what it would be. In the political philosophy of that country there are no platonic friendships among nations. If England and the United States agree to naval parity when the United States is plainly in a position to become mistress of the seas and dispossess Britannia, that would mean to the country which has fought more wars than any other nation in history a covenant between England and America to rule the seas as one twain and therefore as allies.

This would be to frustrate the French hope of an Anglo-French alliance. Since France is the dominant land power in Europe, and England is the dominant naval power in European waters, particularly in the Mediterranean, the Anglo-French alliance which Mr. Snowden exposed and frustrated would have been to France such a guarantee as she has not enjoyed since the Entente. Under it she could have occupied herself with affairs on land, leaving to her great naval ally the security of French interests at sea.

This is the major obstacle to that balance of power and consequent lessening of naval armaments which Messrs. Hoover and MacDonald have visioned. Not that France wants to prolong the naval burden of men anywhere; but that she needs Britannia, now throwing kisses to Uncle Sam.

THE VINTNER OF THE PENOBSCOT.

Arthur R. Gould, United States Senator from Maine, will not be a candidate to succeed himself. The country that did not expect much from his advent into the "greatest deliberative body" and did not receive much, will bid him a cheery good-by. It will remember him as the exquisite purist who, when his fellow savant, Prof. Bingham of Connecticut, scanned the chamber for a friendly face, arose and deposed that "the Senator seen his duty and done it." It will also remember Mr. Gould as something of a magician who, by following faithfully the "inclosed instructions" from a vendor of grape juice, succeeded in drawing benign port, topaz sherry, comforting Burgundy, lilting Chianti, soothing Madeira and proud old Chateau Yquem—all from the same keg.

And so farewell to the Vintner of the Penobscot.

CHECKING UP ON THE PROPHETS.

Now that the seers are issuing their annual predictions for the year to come, a scrutiny of their past records is timely.

Raphael, the English prophet who puts his forecasts into an almanac, saw for 1929 a variety of disasters, most of which failed to happen. For instance, his psychic seismograph registered earthquakes about the Caspian and in the Southern United States. He warned aviators to beware of landslides and earthquakes, and the warning must have been heeded, for no flyers were damaged in that way. Raphael did foresee the end of the Baldwin Cabinet, which isn't much for a prophet to brag about.

Hoboken's own "scientific astrologer," Gustave Meyer, delayed his forecasts until May 4. Here are a few samples of his prescience: "Earthquakes in California and Ohio." Half right, at least. "Prohibition will become a paramount subject." How did he ever guess that? "Stock brokers are warned of disaster." The brokers did well, but their customers— "It is a very evil period for Col. Lindbergh." Since this was written after Lindbergh's crack-up at Mexico City and before his marriage, it has all the essence of a dirty dig. "There will be great bank failures." Partly averted by Flint's bon Mott. "A great fire at Washington." Mr. Hoover should have doubled his insurance. "A bereavement in the Cabinet." This is getting uncanny. "Great benefits to literary persons." We understand Chic Sale did well. "Business will be virtually at a standstill." The stars didn't know about Hoover's confidence conferences.

"The prestige of astrology as a science will become greatly exalted," Prophet Meyer concludes. To judge by the past record, however, there's no need of getting excited over the prophecies for 1930.

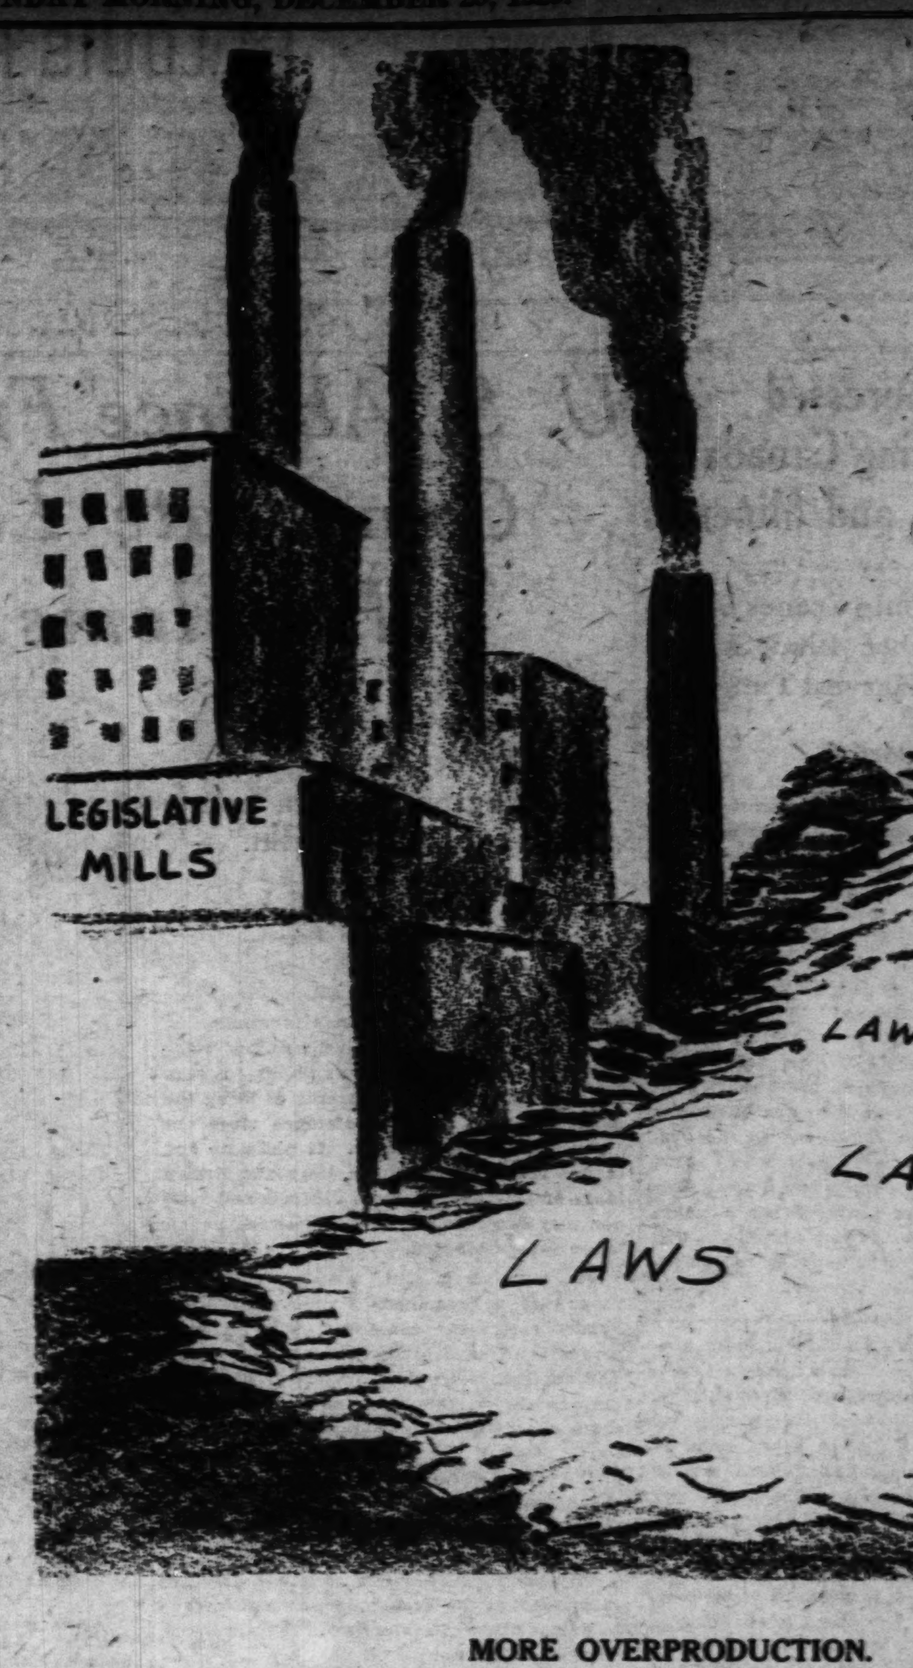
THE WHITE HOUSE STANDS.

The loss of historical documents was the worst effect of the fire that damaged the presidential office building Christmas eve.

There is general joy, however, that the White House was untouched. The old structure is not only cherished for its stately simplicity and attractive, harmonious setting, but it is rich in historical associations. It admirably fits its purpose, the official residence of the President of the Republic.

The present White House is the second. The first, begun in 1792 and finished in 1800, was occupied first by President Adams and subsequently by Jefferson and Madison. It was burned by the British in 1814, when the Capitol was destroyed, and was rebuilt on the same plan. The building was designed by James Hoban of Dublin, who modeled it after the palace of the Duke of Leinster, near Dublin. The old location selected by Washington and Major l'Enfant was retained for the rebuilt mansion. Built of freestone and painted white, the name White House is appropriate.

As the official home of all the Presidents from Monroe to Hoover, the White House is a treasure the loss of which would be irreparable.



MORE OVERPRODUCTION.

Children of Famine

Porto Rico, U. S. possession in Caribbean, has promising future but now is poverty-stricken, with many persons in need of food, its Governor writes; children have suffered most; 60 per cent of all on island undernourished, many slowly starving; their resistance to disease is low; prompt relief in form of supplies is needed.

Gov. Theodore Roosevelt of Porto Rico in New York Herald Tribune.

THE future of Porto Rico is very promising. We have a people of good intellect and character. In the ordinary course of events they will make for themselves the chance to show their worth. Our trouble lies in the fact that for a diversity of causes we are at the moment poverty stricken.

To grasp our problem it is necessary to have a glimpse of what Porto Rico is. We are a small island, only 100 miles long by 35 miles broad. We have 1,500,000 people, most of whom are dependent on agriculture for their living. This offers a great problem, because not only have we a population density of more than 400 to the square mile but, in addition, large tracts of mountainous country are unproductive.

Wages are very low. The small farmers get only a bare existence from their farms. Within recent years small factories have been started in many of our coastal towns. There is a great opportunity for the development of more, and I firmly believe the future holds such development. Our salvation clearly depends mainly on two things—increased industrialization and the development of intensive cultivation of the soil.

During the last 30 years conditions have become steadily better in Porto Rico. Education increased. Our health department was developed. Our public works of every sort multiplied. Even with that development, the condition of the average man was not good.

Then the cyclone struck us and in its trail came disaster for all. More than 300 lives were lost and $80,000,000 worth of property was destroyed. Schools were blown to the ground; homes were wrecked; factories were severely damaged; crops of sugar cane were cut by 20 per cent; the fruit trees were uprooted, thereby destroying not only the year's crop but the capital as well. Worse than all this, the coffee plantations, on which the greatest number of the small farmers depend, suffered severely. There will be little, if any, coffee crop this year, and two or three years more must pass before we get back to normal.

Unemployment, either total or partial, is present everywhere. Men and women can find nothing to do and therefore can earn nothing. We cannot offset unemployment, as is often the case in America, by an increase in public works, for the Government has not the money. Riding through the hills, I have stopped at farm after farm where lean, underfed women and sickly men repeated again and again the same story—little food and no opportunity to get more for the present. Of course, disease has spread, for living conditions of this sort always beget disease.

As usual the children have suffered most. Less able to bear privation than their elders, they have felt it even more keenly. The basis of health is adequate food and this the children of Porto Rico have not had—and do not get today. Hundreds of thousands are on starvation diets. Our local Parent-Teacher Associations, composed of people many of whom are very poor, have provided certain meals at the schools. In this they have been aided by the Junior Red Cross. Unfortunately the funds at hand are so limited that we are able to take care of only a very few children. Even these resources are rapidly dwindling now.

In the last six weeks I have traveled all over the island. I have been through school after school. I have seen hundreds of thousands of children, and I write now not of what I have heard or read, but of what I have seen with my own eyes. I have seen mothers carrying babies who were little skeletons. I have watched in a class room thin, pallid, little boys and girls trying to spur their brains to action when their little bodies were underfed. I have seen them trying to study on only one scanty meal a day, a meal of a few beans and some rice.

The Red Cross of the island, which is in perhaps the best position to know what conditions actually are, for they have trained workers visiting the families, tell me they estimate now that 60 per cent of the children of the entire island are undernourished. Of this 60 per cent, a large number are literally slowly starving. Of course, the result is obvious; in their weak and depleted condition they go down before attacks of any serious disease.

An investigation by the Red Cross not many months since of a poorer section of this city gave the following statistics: 80 per cent of the children under 3 years of age were found to be suffering from chronic intestinal troubles; two-thirds of the children were both underweight and undersized; 70 per cent had decayed teeth. The babies were fed black coffee or boiled herbs, sweetened with a little sugar, as milk was too expensive. Rice and beans in small quantities were the principal nourishment. All these children could offer little resistance to diseases, especially tuberculosis.

The death rate on our island from tuberculosis has more than doubled in the last 15 years. According to our Department of Health, it is now 301 to the 100,000—in other words, more than four times as great as that of the United States. Last year there were 4442 deaths reported from this cause, and there were doubtless many unreported. Probably today there are 40,000 Porto Ricans suffering from this disease. The root of all this trouble is malnutrition.

Our island will turn the corner in the near future, and with more industries and intensive cultivation, greater prosperity will be spread through the rank and file of the people. But that is the future, not the present. It will come too late to save the lives of many of our children. It will come too late to prevent disease from permanently damaging the others who will live.

The pressing need now is for food. If we can get it we can distribute it through our schools. At least by that method we can reach the vast majority of our children. These hundreds of thousands of children are American citizens. They are suffering more than any other children under our flag. They deserve our attention equally with the children of the continental United States. It is our duty to endeavor to provide for them a decent opportunity in life.

WASHINGTON DAY BY DAY

WASHINGTON, Dec. 28.

THERE'S a group of young women in the tiny little village of Vienna, Ga., who look forward eagerly each year to the time when Congress adjourns. They comprise a Sunday school class at the Baptist Church. Their teacher is the junior United States Senator from Georgia, Walter F. George. Whenever Senator George returns to Vienna, he meets with his group of girls on Sunday morning.

When he left Georgia to come to the Senate seven years ago, he announced that he liked teaching a Sunday school class so well that he hoped he would be able to do so in Washington. However, he has not found a class in the Capital. Only when he returns to his home town of 2000 people is he able to impart Biblical instruction to the young.

The tall, dark-haired, dignified Georgian is distinguished from his colleagues in other ways than being a Sabbath school teacher. He is also the only United States Senator who ever succeeded a woman.

SEVEN years ago he stood aside in the Senate chamber while Mrs. Rebecca Latimer Felton was sworn in as his predecessor and proclaimed the first woman Senator. It was an act of chivalry on George's part. The Felton appointment was merely a compliment. Mrs. Felton was an active Senator for only 22 hours.

Few men have come to the Senate as little known at first as was Senator George. He was a small-town lawyer, and probably had never made more than a dozen political speeches in his life before he entered the race.

Born of poor parents of the small farmer class in Georgia, he worked his way through college and law school, and had risen to a seat on the Georgia Supreme Court bench by the time he had reached his early forties. He had resigned as justice and was practicing law in Vienna when he ran for the Senate and was elected.

THE man's outstanding characteristic is his seriousness. One of his closest friends says: "I doubt if he ever told an anecdote, or figured in many worth the telling."

Yet George is thoroughly human—in his own quiet way. When he makes a speech in the Senate his style is reminiscent of the classic writings on common law. The United States Supreme Court once quoted from a speech of his in a decision.

His physical presence is striking, and his speaking voice—soft and thoroughly Southern—is pleasing. Personally he is one of the most reticent men in the Senate. He is inclined to be more studious than anything else. His philosophies of politics and public service are well developed and clearly defined.

Georgia thought enough of him to support him for the Presidency at the Democratic National Convention in Houston last year.

PORTUGAL SENDS 'REDS' TO EAST INDIAN PRISON COLONY

Prisoners Treated More Humanely by New Governor of Island in Indian Ocean.

By the Associated Press.

TIMOR, Portuguese East Indies, Dec. 28. — Portugal's "reds," anarchists and all those sentenced to long penal servitude, expiate their crimes under the scorching sun of their penal settlement in the Indian Ocean.

A few weeks ago, a grim prison-ship which makes the journey once a year, arrived here with a fresh cargo of 300 desperadoes. The "doom-ship" had stopped at Loanda and Lorenco Marques, two Portuguese penal colonies on the African coast to pick up those, who, through mutiny and bad conduct, made themselves liable to a more severe punishment.

All the convicts were confined in great steel cages and guarded by armed warders.

The conditions in the prisons here formerly were appalling, and escape practically impossible.

The new Governor of the island, Gen. Theophile Duarte, has made changes. The prisoners are treated humanely and food and living quarters have been improved.

Gen. Duarte found that the colony's bad roads could be mended by convicts. He selected 200 of the penitentiary's 600 inmates and granted them their freedom, with the proviso, however, that once a week they should report to prison authorities. The only identification mark which they carry is the regulation wide-brimmed straw hat across which is splashed the word "convict."

SALVADOR-GUATEMALA RAIL LINE INAUGURATION CEREMONY

Presidents Meet at Frontier to Mark Completion of 800 Miles.

By the Associated Press.

SAN SALVADOR, Republic of Salvador, Dec. 28.—The Presidents of Salvador and Guatemala met at the frontier today and inaugurated a railway link joining the systems of the two Central American republics. Botr Secretaries of State and other high functionaries attended and eulogistic speeches were delivered.

A memorial slab was placed across the frontier, each President remaining on his own soil.

By the railway line Salvador is given an overland route to the Atlantic Ocean and the time required to transport its products to the North Atlantic and European markets is reduced anywhere from seven to 15 days.

The project, built by the International Railways of Central America, represents an investment of $12,000,000 and welds railways of Guatemala and Salvador into a single system of approximately 800 miles of main track, representing a total investment of $80,000,000 described as the largest railroad enterprise outside of the United States under American management.

ATTACKS BUS MONOPOLY RULING AS INVALID

Alton Company Appeals to Constitution in Demanding Permit, Once Refused, For Its Line.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Dec. 28.—A ruling of the Missouri Public Service Commission granting a motor bus company what amounts to a monopolistic use of a public highway for transportation of passengers for hire, is attacked as unconstitutional in a motion filed with the commission today by the Alton Transportation Co. for a rehearing of a case in which a bus permit was refused it.

The Alton Transportation Co. is a subsidiary of the Chicago & Alton Railroad Co. Recently a permit was denied it for a proposed bus line between Jefferson City and Mexico, Mo., over United States Highway No. 54. The commission pointed out that another company, the Pickwick Greyhound Line, already was authorized to operate over most of the route and ruled there had not been a showing of public necessity for the proposed additional line.

U. S. - GERMAN REPARATIONS SETTLEMENT NEAR CONCLUSION

Statement by Berlin Expected Today, If Comparison of Text Is Finished.

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, Dec. 28.—Negotiations between the German Government and Edwin C. Wilson of the American embassy in Paris looking toward a direct settlement of German reparations payments to the United States, are approaching conclusion.

It is expected that a statement will be issued by the German Government this evening, provided the comparison of texts of the agreement can be finished by then.

The contents of the agreement will not be disclosed here, but it is thought that the German Government will later issue a statement enlarging upon the brief communique which may be handed out today.

$100,000,000 ARGENTINE LOAN

Made by American Bankers, According to Buenos Aires Rumor.

By the Associated Press.

BUENOS AIRES, Dec. 28.—The newspapers Razon and Prensa today published rumors that the Government momentarily expected to announce a $100,000,000 loan from American bankers to meet various pending obligations. Financial circles in Buenos Aires had no definite information about the loan, but it is known that President Yrigoyen recently asked American and British bankers to submit their terms for a loan of £5,000,000 (about $25,000,000).

Le Epoca, the Government organ, did not publish the report.

H. P. MAMMEN QUITS PARKS AIR COLLEGE

Resignation as Head Effective Wednesday—He Will Enter New Business.

Harry P. Mammen, president of Parks Air College Inc., has resigned, effective next Wednesday, to enter another business.

With his brother-in-law, Oliver L. Parks, former Lambert-St. Louis Field flyer, Mammen was an organizer of Parks Air College, which grew within less than two years to be the largest civilian aviation schools in the world. Mammen's efforts were particularly devoted to the financial structure of the school.

When the Parks enterprises were sold recently to the Detroit Aircraft Corporation for more than $1,000,000, Mammen was invited to join the new organization as an executive but declined because the new business venture in which he was already interested, would not permit him to leave St. Louis.

BANK OF PALESTINE PROPOSED: $2,000,000 FUND AVAILABLE

This Is One Suggestion As to Use of Money Raised to Aid Jews in Holy Land.

By the Associated Press.

JERUSALEM, Dec. 28.—To aid their co-religionists in Palestine, Jews throughout the world have raised approximately $2,600,000 within six weeks, about $500,000 more than the whole of last year's colonizing budget.

Four weeks the Zionist Executive has been deliberating how best to apply this money. Some $500,000 has been appropriated for the immediate relief of refugees from the destroyed places in the form of food, clothing and housing. The balance is to be expended for constructive purposes.

Differences of opinion have arisen with regard to the best plan to be followed. Some advocate that all the destroyed quarters be rebuilt and so extended as to be secured from fresh Arab attacks. Others are of the opinion that only the economically sound points should be restored.

The Jewish National Council, the highest representative organ of Palestine Jewry, suggests the establishment of a Bank of Palestine. This bank would have the remaining $2,000,000 as its working capital and permanent reserve. For the present and with the help of other banks, it would be used for construction loans.

Still another proposal would have the funds applied to cover the Zionist colonization budget of next year.

HAY TELLS HOW WILSON DROVE LOBBYISTS FROM WASHINGTON

Contrasts Late President's Efforts With Recent Tariff Making in Anniversary Address.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

DENVER, Colo., Dec. 28.—Charles M. Hay of St. Louis delivered the principal address at the annual Woodrow Wilson dinner in Denver this evening, the seventy-third anniversary of the birth of the late President.

Hay, in a eulogy of Wilson, traced the achievements of his administration, beginning with the driving of the lobby from Washington in 1913 in advance of the consideration of the tariff bill and contrasting the condition then with the disclosures of the influence of the lobby in recent tariff making. He concluded with praise for the Wilson efforts for world peace and asserted that, while the League of Nations was not approved in this country, the effect of the Wilson effort was to be seen in steady progress toward reduction of armaments, in the League of Nations and the World Court.

PRODUCTION OF CHICAGOAN'S OPERA PUT OFF FOR A YEAR

Chicago Opera Company Says It Lacks Time to Give "Camille" Properly This Season.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Dec. 28.—The curtain will not rise for the world premiere of "Camille," an opera by the young Chicago composer, Hamilton Forrest, for another year, the Chicago Civic Opera Company announced today.

Production of the new opera had been anticipated as one of the most important events of the present opera season. The cast, with Mary Garden in the title role, had been working for some time with the composer and Maestro Emil Cooper.

"It is the desire of the company to give this work by a Chicago composer the finest possible production," the announcement said, "and to assure it the outstanding success which they are confident it will attain. The opera requires a great number of rehearsals, and it is difficult to find time to give the work the necessary preparation, and produce it at a date which would permit the number of performances which the work deserves."

To File New Appeal for Snook.

By the Associated Press.

COLUMBUS, O., Dec. 28—An application for a rehearing of the appeal of James H. Snook, former Ohio State University veterinary professor, now under sentence to be executed Jan. 31 for the murder of Miss Theora K. Hix, will be filed in State Supreme Court within 10 days, E. O. Ricketts, one of his attorneys, said today. Ricketts said the application had been prepared. The court several days ago rejected Dr. Snook's appeal from the death sentence.

Lord Birkenhead Discusses Workings of English Law

he would have forfeited his right to continue among us. I assert that it would not be right that such a man should live.

Death Penalty for Pirates.

The third offense is piracy with violence. We think that piracy is an obsolete crime. There are no pirates nowadays, and time has confused in one golden haze the exploits of those mariners of England, who exacted retribution in the days when private vengeance was still arguably lawful, and the misdeeds of the truculent ruffians who disgraced the high seas before the British navy drove them into oblivion.

But history proves that piracy revives whenever Government is weak, and at the present time we are mourning the loss of two gallant gentlemen who died defending their ship from the pirates whom lately we dislodged from Bias Bay.

In the olden times the pirate was described as "Hostis humani generis," and he alone of all criminals could be hunted down and tried by any nation, no matter what his allegiance or where he preyed. The rule applies to this day.

If the murderers on the Anking are caught the question will arise: Should they be executed? The law says that, if their guilt is proved, they have incurred the penalty of death. These men assume the guise of passengers, they rob, murder and ravish, fearing neither God nor man. Unless they are extirpated they remain a menace to the public, a danger to commerce, and a terror to the peaceable.

We have not only to reckon with the actual offenders. There are thousands there, inured to murder, plunder and crime, they flourish with impunity, and winter only when force, which alone they understand, teaches them that they too will suffer if they do not abandon their evil ways. These men, of course, are Chinese, but we must not assume that they are pirates because they are Chinese.

A Terror of the Seas.

All nations bordering on the seas will produce pirates if the hand of authority is weak, and our records are as full of pirates as any.

There was one Teach or Blackbeard, one of our race, "a Bristol man born," who infested the West Indies in the early eighteenth century. Powerful and unscrupulous, valiant and uncouth, he went into the fight covered with belts of pistols with lighted links in his hair. He was a robber and a murderer who feared neither God nor man. Fourteen wives had a feeble hold upon his affections. He was neither faithful nor jealous, but placed them at the disposal of his comrades when he was in the humor.

While he was alive, he was the terror of the seas and his impunity encouraged others who found his villainy glorious. He was slain in an attempt to capture him or he would have been hanged. Was it wrong to kill him in an attempt to vindicate the law? Would it have been an unjustifiable act to have hanged him if he had been taken? His fate leads one to doubt whether, if the law ought not to countenance capital punishment, it ought also to punish those who kill to protect themselves or their possessions.

If life is so precious that the law will not take it, then must we tamely submit to be robbed or even murdered by an armed miscreant though we can save ourselves at the expense of his life? The law now says that we lawfully may. There have been in recent years cases in which men have repelled attempts at crime by slaying the offender. It would be a curious result if logic compelled us to condemn the intended victim because he was so wicked, so vile, so disregardful of the sanctity of life as to slay a violent felon.

Should Life Be Spared?

But when people talk of the death penalty, they usually have in mind the fourth offense: Murder. The offender has not considered the right of the victim to live. That victim is now dead and buried. Sometimes we are tempted to think, when we read of hysterical interest in murderers, that the victim is forgotten. Let us recall one or two of the people who ought not to have been hanged, if it be true that the State ought never to require his life of a man.

In the early part of the eighteenth century, there were two wretched men who earned a precarious and not always honest livelihood in Edinburgh. By accident they learned that a dead body was worth money if sold to the anatomists. They improved on the practice of the Resurrection Men by making their own corpses.

For a time they flourished, and many poor people died in order that these men might feed their worthless bodies and keep their paramours. At last they were detected. Hare saved his skin because without him the necessary evidence was lacking. Burke was condemned and hanged, and by his crime added another word to our language.

Of all vile wretches, none could be viler. And I venture to think, in view of what happened to Hare, that if the death penalty had not been a weapon in the armory of the law, Judge Lynch would have showed his ugly countenance and a justly incensed mob would have done what the law refused to do. Was his life not forfeit?

There was a trial in 1879 which excited interest at the time.

Kate Webster, a woman of a criminal record, took service with a widow lady and murdered her with premeditation. She dismembered the corpse and disposed of the remains by boiling it in a copper. She even, so it is said, attempted to dispose of the fat by selling it to neighbors as dripping—part of her perquisites. She was arrested while trying to dispose secretly of other parts of her mistress' body. She was tried and found guilty. The law claimed the forfeit and she paid it. I find it difficult to believe that the sentence was wrong.

Murderer of Three Women.

Take another case: George Joseph Smith, whose trial is known as the "Brides in the Bath" case. He was a man who set himself, like Landru, to live by swindling confiding females. He offered them marriage. If they parted with their means before the ceremony, he decamped and left them penniless. If they were more cautious and waited until after he had kept his word, then he robbed them as soon as possible after the marriage, leaving them as penniless as the others. If they were not so confiding, and death only could part them from their poor possessions, then he killed them in such a way that they seemed to have died naturally.

He did it once too often. He was tried for the murder of three women, and there is reason to believe that there were many more whom he had deceived and murdered.

There is also Neil Cream, who must have been sane, for the scrupulous care with which the Home Secretary inquires into the sanity of a condemned murderer is well known. He murdered women of the lowest class for obscure motives, probably to gratify his erotic tendencies. He was a man of some education. So, too, was Armstrong, a university graduate and a solicitor, who poisoned his wife in cold blood, and attempted the life of a colleague merely to cover up a defalcation. Again, Brown was a man of remarkable ability, if his companion, Kennedy, was merely a ruffian.

These men were all hanged. The list can be extended indefinitely until the repetition of horrors almost destroys horror. Yet, it would seem, we are to believe that the law was wrong in taking their lives, and we were wrong to approve the sentences of the law.

Life-Terms in Prison.

There remains two points which it may be useful to mention. It is said the experience in other countries has shown that the abolition of the death penalty has not increased the number of murders. It may be the case in particular areas, but the experiment has not been tried for a sufficient period or over a sufficiently wide area, to form an accurate opinion for our guidance.

We need also to examine the fate of the murderers who have been relegated to life-long imprisonment. It has been said that in some cases at least the various conditions imposed have constituted in themselves a death sentence far more terrible than one which is expressed to be a death sentence. And while imprisonment is mentioned, cannot it be contended with at least as much force that the State has no right to deprive a man of his liberty? And if not imprisonment, then why fines? Why taxes? And the wheel comes round full circle—civilization is again anarchic barbarism. It is not proved that the death sentence is no deterrent. I venture to suggest that no one who strictly examines his own soul can deny its potency.

And lastly, there is the lingering fear that the penalty of death may be exacted in a case where a mistake has been made. If the accused is alive, such a mistake can, though imperfectly, be put right, but if he is dead, life can never be recalled.

As Sir Edward Marshall-Hall in the Seddon case told the jury: "There is one thing the scientists have never been able to find, never yet been able to discover, with all their research and with all their study, and that is, how to replace the little vital spark that we call life. . . . If your verdict is against him, that vital spark will be extinguished, and no science known to the world can ever replace it."

Making Certain of Guilt.

It is impossible to deny that in human affairs, the chance of mistake cannot be wholly eliminated, but in the administration of justice, and more particularly in murder trials, scrupulous care is taken to prevent a miscarriage of justice. There is the preliminary investigation by the police aided, as soon as real suspicion is cast upon a definite person sufficient to warrant his being charged with murder, by the public prosecutor. There is an investigation before the magistrates. There may be a further inquiry by the Coroner. Even after committal, no trial can take place, in the absence of a verdict by a Coroner's jury, unless the grand jury, after hearing the witnesses find a true bill.

The trial before Judge and jury is in public and their decision depends upon the evidence. Again, after a verdict of guilty, there still is the opportunity of appeal, in some cases as far as the House of Lords. And when the legal proceedings are over the Home Secretary considers the sentence in order that he may advise whether the Prerogative of Mercy shall be extended to save the murderer's life.

In the legal proceedings, the court is bound by the rules of evidence—rules indeed that shut out much that in other lands is admitted to prove guilt—but the Home Secretary is not bound by these rules and can listen to any circumstance, however irrelevant in law, which may tend to lead him to the path of mercy.

The public can rest assured that the utmost care is taken not to execute the prisoner unless his guilt is manifest and in many cases not even then. But the fear of a possible mistake has no bearing on the problem whether the State ought, or can in natural justice, deprive a murderer of his life. We are all agreed that a man charged with murder should not suffer the penalty, whatever it may be, unless he is guilty.

I have considered on many occasions with sympathy and with careful attention the arguments brought forward against capital punishment. They have not convinced me.

How Canada Impressed Churchill

conquered territory. The roads are only earth tracks, practicable in summer time because of the drouth and in winter because of the frost. The farms are simple and unadorned; mere workshops where food is produced on a gigantic scale, and wealth is steadily gathered by lonely, thriving families.

Winnipeg's Harvest Time.

Before midday we drew near to Winnipeg. When I was there 29 years ago its population had risen by leaps and bounds to 40,000. Now it exceeds a quarter of a million. Then it was winter and one stepped from the cars into horse-driven sledges and a temperature 20 or 30 degrees below zero. On my recent trip I arrived at the reaping of the harvest from the golden fields of an illimitable cultivation. Motor cars thronged the busy streets of tall and sometimes stately buildings, vast hotels, theaters, storehouses—a populous modern city. the continent. We were in the world's greatest grain emporium.

We were now in the center of We were at the source and focus of those processes which bring cheap food to far-off, unthinkable millions.

The exportable surplus of the crops of Manitoba gains reward of many millions a year, streaming back incessantly to enrich its producers. Rich black loam, sometimes 20 feet in depth, the deposit of ages on the bottom of our vanished inland sea, produces, up to the present without refreshment, this boundless annual reward.

We had left smiling and cultivated Ontario; we had traversed the broad rocky barrier which had hitherto cut the continent in twain but in which now mineral wealth begins to grow and sparkle, and we had reached the metropolis of the corn plains. Before us in the 800 miles to the slopes of the Rocky Mountains, Saskatchewan and Alberta unfold vast surfaces of waving crops stretching each year farther and farther to the north, until no one can say at what point in the Arctic regions wheat cannot be grown with profit.

MUSEUM TO DISPLAY ART IN PRINTING

Examples of Movement to Preserve Medieval Tradition Sent From Germany.

A collection of 133 books privately printed in Germany as a result of a movement to perpetuate the medieval tradition of printing as an art will be exhibited at the Art Museum during January. In designing type and arranging pages an effort has been made to reflect the character of the book.

The books were conceived and executed as artistic unities and to that end type faces were hand cut, the composition was by hand, and special attention was given to selection of ink, paper and binding. All of the books are from private workshops where one man frequently is type designer, compositor, printer and publisher. Few of them have reached the public, the greater number being absorbed by a limited circle of collectors.

Among books in the exhibit is a Bible of Luther, printed by the Bremer Presse at Bremen. It is the first representative edition since Luther's time which gives the text in its original form. The original text was lost in intermediate editions because of mutations in the language. Five years were required to design the type for this book, and the work of setting up the type and printing the 2200 pages required the efforts of six men for two and a half years.

From the same press is a volume including Homer's Iliad and Odessey, printed on hand-made paper. For this edition a font of Greek type was designed which aimed to reform the ordinary Greek types by substituting a pure typographical character suggestive of the symmetry of the Greek language. Other volumes are St. Augustine's De Civitate Dei, Dante's Divine Comedy, Bacon's Essays, and Goethe's Faust.

The Museum will exhibit also a group of 25 originals of illustrations prepared for "Book Trails," a series of children's books. The illustrations are graded in treatment and color, from simple, bright colored poster effects used to illustrate nursery rhymes to more elaborate pastel tinted treatments of interest to older children.

TO EXTEND FOREIGN TRADE CAMPAIGN TO LATIN AMERICA

Chamber of Commerce to Send Literature to Mexico and Other Countries.

The mail campaign to direct the attention of business men in most of the other important countries of the world, to the advantage of St. Louis as a manufacturing center, which the Chamber of Commerce has been conducting, will be extended to Latin-America next year, beginning with Mexico.

The chamber's Foreign Trade Bureau sent out 22,000 pamphlets about St. Louis in recent months, and found this medium effective in drawing foreign trade to St. Louis. Now most of the importers of Mexico and Central America and South America will be reached with booklets printed in Spanish or Portuguese, depending on the tongue used by the recipient. The Industrial Club is co-operating in the activity.

A Musical Comedy Week

"Connecticut Yankee" at the American, and "Follow Thru" at the Shubert, Both Begin Local Engagements Tonight—Casey Stock Company Continues "The Bachlor Father" at the Orpheum With Several Fine Plays Announced to Follow—Bert Lytell Coming in "Brothers," and "After Dark" Is a Likely Early Visitor.

MUSICAL comedy comes into its own this week at the theaters with "A Connecticut Yankee" holding forth at the American and "Follow Thru" singing and dancing its way out at the Shubert. Both will get going tonight and, at the same time, the Casey Stock Company, at the Orpheum, will start the second week of "The Bachelor Father."

All the splendor which Mark Twain indicated in his famous satirical classic, "A Connecticut Yankee," is said to be brought to life in vivid colors in the musical comedy version of the novel produced by Lew Fields and Lyle D. Andrews. Beginning with a modern episode laid in the banquet hall of a hotel in Hartford, the musical comedy takes its audience back through the ages to the Court of King Arthur and his Knights of the Round Table. One sees Guenievere and Launcelot, Galahad and Merlin the Magician, and Queen Morgan le Fay. There are episodes on the road to Camelot, in the courtyard of the King, and then several settings which reveal Britain of the Sixth Century after it had been Americanized and brought up to its twentieth century methods, for Mark Twain in "A Connecticut Yankee" argued for the modern way of doing things and proved that we are lucky to be living today and not in the days of old when knights were bold.

The adaptation for musical comedy purposes has been made by Herbert Fields, Richard Rodgers and Lorenz Hart, who are well known by reason of their former successes—"The Garrick Gaieties," "Dearest Enemy," "The Girl Friend" and "Peggy Ann." The song hits are numerous and are already familiar here, thanks to the radio and records.

Heading the cast are Richard Lane and Mary Adams, well known musical comedy artists. Their associate players are Nana Bryant, Paul Everton, George E. Mack, Starke Patterson, Helen Gates, Francelia Waterbury, Gordon Burby, Bert Saunders and numerous others. There is a large singing and dancing ensemble.

SCHWAB AND MANDEL'S musical comedy, "Follow Thru," at the Shubert, is heralded as one of the outstanding successes of the past three seasons. It will be presented here by the same company that played it for six months in Chicago. The cast includes Bobby Jarvis of "Good News" and "The Desert Song" fame; Olive Olsen, who scored a success in Chicago; Lilian Bond, an English girl brought to America by Earl Carroll; Warren Hull, who recently appeared here with Joe Cook of "Rain or Shine;" Dorothy Daw of "Good News" reputation; Harry Tighe, recruited from the movies; Nayan Pearce, Helen Carrington, a Ziegfeld beauty; Dave Thursby, Eddie Tamblyn, Thomas Tracey and Peggy O'Neill, who says she created the Black Bottom and tap-Charleston dances.

"Button Up Your Overcoat," "I Want to Be Bad," "Lucky Star," "You Wouldn't Fool Me, Would You," "I Could Give Up Anything but You," and "If There were No More You," are several of the song hits from the show which, like the numbers in "A Connecticut Yankee" have been made familiar to St. Louisans by way of radio and phonographs.

THE Casey organization was enthusiastically welcomed to the Orpheum Christmas night. Arthur Casey has brought a high-class company of stock players to St. Louis to be augmented, from time to time, by visiting artists, and the list of plays which he announces for the future will provide theater-goers with some fine entertainment at a low price of admission. "The Bachelor Father," a delightful comedy, was an excellent choice for the opening bill. The second offering, starting next Sunday night, will be a mystery play, "The Silent House," a fast-moving melodrama in which much Chinese cunning and intrigue is shown and in which lots of old Chinese torture tricks are used by Doctor Chan-Fu in his efforts to accomplish his ends. Chan-Fu's role will be played by Howard Lang, the original star of the Broadway company, who is coming to the Orpheum specially for this appearance. Louis Tanno will also appear in his original role of Predaro.

Supporting them will be Arthur Pierson, leading man; Grace Troy, ingenue, the only feminine member of the cast; Pierre Watkin, who is playing the role of the bachelor father to such satisfaction this week; Alexander Campbell; J. James Downing, Leste New and Henry Norell.

Coming attractions to be presented by the Casey company include "The Royal Family" starting Sunday night, Jan. 19. This brilliant comedy from the pens of George Kaufman and Edna Ferber played at the American Theater last season. Jefferson de Angelis of the original cast and either Cissie Loftus or Henrietta Crosman will be the visiting artists with the Casey Players. Other plays noted for production are "Journey's End," "Meet the Wife," with Mary Boland, original star; "Craig's Wife;" "Remote Control," in which Arthur Pierson, leading man was featured in New York, and "Holiday."

PATRONS of the American Theater will see Bert Lytell in the dual role that kept him at the Erlanger Theater, Chicago, for four months, and at the 48th Street Theater, New York, for a whole year, when John Henry Mears presents Mr. Lytell here in "Brothers" Sunday, Jan. 12. Well known as a stage and screen star Lytell won fresh laurels by his creation of the twin brothers in Herbert Ashton Jr's. romantic melodrama. As both hero and unhappy villain of this play he runs the gamut of emotions and is said to keep his audience mystified by his quick changes from one character to the other.

THE show that has done more to upset the established traditions of the show business than any drama within the ken of theatrical cognoscenti may be an early attraction at the Shubert-Rialto. Manager Karty announced today that an effort is being made to book "After Dark," that made fortune after fortune for its sponsors a generation or two ago, has returned to the limelight and promises to do even more nobly by those who have effected its renaissance.

Written by that great craftsman of his era, Dion Boucicault, "After Dark, or Neither Wife, Maid nor Widow"—to give the play its full quota of titles—it was counted a masterpiece from the late '60s up to the beginning of the current century. Audiences lived the tribulations of Eliza, applauded the noble reformation of Old Tom and baited the moustached and grandiloquent Chandos Bellingham, unmindful of its unconcerned machinery and apparent absurdities.

With the coming of the celluloids, melodrama as a stage attraction languished. For 30 years dust has collected on the manuscript of the old play. Then some chap with a smart idea came along and did the thing in the manner of four or five decades ago. What made 'em yell with approval in '70 made 'em yell with approval in '29. But the public pays as well to be made to laugh as to be thrilled.

Three Productions Outstanding On the Stage During the Year

NEW YORK, Dec. 28.

THE salient dramas of 1929 in the American theater were three: "Street Scene," Elmer Rice's tragedy of lower middle class life in New York; "Journey's End," English World War play by R. C. Sheriff, which has been seen in St. Louis, and "June Moon," hilarious and penetrating American comedy by Ring Lardner and George S. Kaufman.

"Street Scene," as the outstanding hit of the year and recipient of the Pulitzer drama prize, commanded most attention. Its author had shown earlier in his career a keen ear for the tempo of the machine age, and in "Street Scene" he employs an unorthodoxy of treatment which shows his independence of the conventions and cliches of the theater.

Yet he infuses two familiar ingredients of the stage—a love story of an Irish girl and a Jewish boy, and the murder by a stage hand of his wife and her lover—and these sugar-coat the somber undertone of the drama, whose main errand is to show the barrenness and shallowness of the life some millions of urbanites live along the side streets of New York.

Through the windows of a typical Manhattan apartment house of the poorer class, and on the sidewalk in front of it, Rice lets us glimpse the daily lives of a group of city dwellers. His is not a great play, but it was the best American play of its season and it holds up to careful scrutiny an observant picture of a current scene.

"JOURNEY'S END" is a first play by an English clerk, welling out of his own deep-seated revulsion for war because of what it does to gentlemen.

Inevitably it was compared here with "What Price Glory?" which holds foremost rank among American World War plays, but the two are as different as the British and American viewpoints. Sheriff's idealistic and gentlemanly army officers, young Oxonians proud of culture and breeding, would find incomprehensible the boisterous veneries of Capt. Flagg and Sergt. Quirt.

Sheriff wrote passionately of gentlemen whose souls were twisted by war and who went to futile death with high loyalty but without any zest for adventure—men inspired to courage by their heritage rather than by the excitement of the moment.

And probably his play will be more ageless than "What Price Glory?" which was rather the better theatrical exhibit. Written for the English theater, it lost none of its force when set before American audiences.

IT may be that from the remoter observation point of two or three years hence, Lardner's "June Moon" will loom as the greatest landmark of 1929 in the American theater.

Its mad humors are only a veneer, for at bottom, as Lardner chides the nation's song writers, he reveals a savage scorn for the follies and foibles of his time. If he follows this comedy of contemporary manners and morals with others in the same vein he may yet show himself the ablest playwright of his time at holding the mirror up to American life.

Of other plays worth attention there have been several.

"The Criminal Code" by Martin Flavin argues that something is wrong with penitentiaries as institutions for reclaiming men. It is stark tragedy, and it is made much more effective by the vivid settings of Robert Edmond Jones and Arthur Byron's portrayal of the prison warden torn between the necessities of his job and a desire to be compassionate and fair.

In Preston Sturges, author of "Strictly Dishonorable," the stage has found a new playwright capable of writing sheer and trivial comedy with a delightful deftness of touch.

EUGENE O'NEILL has brought forth but one new play in the year—"Dynamo," intended as the first of three dramas dealing with man's belief in God. It was not a success in New York, nor a good play, and since its failure O'Neill has laid aside the other plays of his trilogy. Meanwhile his monumental "Strange Interlude" continues to be seen widely here and abroad.

Musically the year on the stage was marked by the presentation of "Sweet Adeline," a worthy successor to "Show Boat" by the same authors, Jerome Kern and Oscar Hammerstein II; and by the continued appearance of costly and lavish musical shows of the sort indigenous to the New York stage.

Into the theater the motion picture companies have come this year to finance gorgeous musical shows, so that when these have attained the prestige of Broadway success they may be carted, cast and all, to Hollywood for transference to the audible screen.

This trend betokens a growing domination of the stage by the interests that control the screen.

Kruetzberg-Georgi Dancers Here Jan. 7

Harald Kreutzberg and his dance partner, Yvonne Georgi, will be presented for the first time in St. Louis at the Odeon on Tuesday evening, Jan. 7, under the auspices of the Civic Music League. The pair met first as students of the Mary Wigman School of Germany; both worked in the ballets of the Berlin and Hanover operas and both had an urge for emotional expression in preference to convention.

For their program here they will do a number of the dances which have won special acclaim and Kreutzberg, for one of his solo dances, will do "The Angel of the Last Judgment." The program includes numbers for the pair and many solo dances for Kreutzberg and Miss Georgi.

Little Theater Group to Give 'The Ivory Door'

Milne's Fantastic Comedy to Be Presented for a Week Starting Monday, January 6 by Amateur Organization.

"THE Ivory Door," A. A. Milne's three-act fantasy with a prologue, satirizing tradition and superstition, will be shown Jan. 6 to 11, by the Little Theater of St. Louis, 812 Union boulevard. As the organization's fourth production since November, "The Ivory Door" is announced as sparkling entertainment against a background of medieval scenery and colorful costumes of the period. By special arrangement this will be the second amateur performance of "The Ivory Door" in the United States.

The cast includes among many seasoned Little Theater actors, Ashley Bickmore, whose Joxer in Galsworthy's "The Pigeon" and "Prologue" in Mrs. Sachs' "The Twelfth Disciple" recently, have secured for him special favor as a character performer. Mr. Bickmore will play the part of the Chancellor in "The Ivory Door."

In accordance with its policy to expand its program each year, "The Ivory Door" is the first of two "extra subscription" bills to be presented during the 1929-30 season. Unlike "The Twelfth Disciple," which was open only by invitation or through churches, and unlike "The Marquise" and "Hell Bent for Heaven," which were the first two productions covered by season tickets, admission to "The Ivory Door" will be by box office sale only. It is hoped from this play to judge to some extent public interest in the expansion of The Little Theater program, officials of the organization state.

Many Fine Pictures in 1929

"Last of Mrs. Cheyney" Best of the Dramas, While "Rio Rita" Headed the Musical Offerings—Frank Fay Off to a Great Start in His First Film—The Rise of Ronald Colman—Growth of the Business in One Studio.

By NIE.

THE rapidly ending year saw the advent of the talking movies. Beginning rather badly while the producers experimented with the sound machines—a start which caused many fans to imagine that the whole affair was just a novelty which would quickly pass—the new form of entertainment got on its feet quickly and now the silent picture is entirely a thing of the past. With the coming of the talkies came some fine film plays, musical plays and dramas, more perhaps than during any other year the screen has known. Picking the 10 best from the lot, then, is a difficult matter but there are two or three at least, which stand out over all of the others.

Of the dramas "The Last of Mrs. Cheyney" would seem to be easily the best picture of the year, but a musical show, "Rio Rita" was probably better entertainment with "Broadway Melody" running that type of performance a close second. Norma Shearer was the star of "The Last of Mrs. Cheyney" with Bebe Daniels at the top of the "Rio Rita" cast and Bessie Love and Charley King getting the honors in "Broadway Melody."

The other seven in the present critic's idea of the 10 best are "The Dance of Life," with Hal Skelly; "Charming Sinners," with Ruth Chatterton, who was also the star of another winner, "Mme. X"; George Arliss in "Disraeli"; "The Lady Lies," with Walter Huston and Charles Ruggles; Will Rogers in "They Had to See Paris" and Jack Oakie and Helen Kane in "Sweetie." The last named was a very light little picture which was tremendously appealing and entertaining.

THE St. Louis Theater, along with its vaudeville and moving pictures is adding a dancing chorus to its program. Twenty-four local girls, many of whom were with the Rockets at the Missouri, have moved into the house almost next door. They will have a specialty all to themselves and will be used with any of the headline acts from time to time when they can be fitted in. The plan is being tried out by the R. K. O. circuit here and if it clicks it will be done in other cities. There will be no master of ceremonies, however.

The Fox, for the time being at least, has failed in the effort to bring Harry Rose here as its new M. C. Instead, starting next Friday the stage shows at Mr. Fox's cinema temple will be led by Bert Frohman.

AND while on the subject of Masters of Ceremonies it might be mentioned that Frank Fay, in the films, is as big a hit at the Grand Central as he was on the Missouri's stage. Ever since "The Show of Shows" opened at the Grand Central Christmas night the Grand avenue theater has been turning 'em away and Fay—who happens to be most of the show as well as the best of it—is the big drawing card.

Frank has apparently deserted the regular theater for the movies for all time. He and Barbara Stanwyck, Mrs. Fay, you know, are living in the old Harry Langdon home in Hollywood and talking about building a new place on a large estate out there. Signed now as a Warner Bros. star for Vitaphone specials, Fay's migration West transports him back to his native California after 25 years spent in the theaters of the East. Born in San Francisco in 1897, he took to the road almost immediately, traveling with his parents both of whom were vaudeville players. His first professional appearance was made at the age of seven as a wee bit of the title role of "Babes in Toyland." The gifted personality of this red-haired youngster caught on at once and the demand for his services grew rapidly. He played for a time with E. H. Sothern and when he was just 21, entered the field of musical comedy. Later he became a featured player in Winter Garden stage shows, notably in "Artists and Models."

FRANK's first movie chance came to him out of a clear sky. Warner Bros. were searching high and low for someone to play the featured characterization in "Under a Texas Moon," an all-color Vitaphone picture in which romance, comedy and songs are blended. Every available actor in Hollywood was considered and rejected for the role of the devil-may-care bandit who always has on his tongue what is known in the vernacular as a snappy wise-crack. Fay was selected practically by long distance. He caught a train from New York, dyed his flaming red hair black, took upon himself a borderland Mexican accent and made his debut in the talkies. This picture is to be shown here some time next month.

Upon the completion of this part, Warners signed him to act as master of ceremonies for "Show of Shows." The spontaneity of his humor also earned him a back-camera assignment for in collaboration with J. Kiern Brennan, he prepared much of the special material used in various numbers of the production.

ANOTHER male star who has come to the front, after a training on the legitimate stage, is Ronald Colman, who is in "Condemned" down at Loew's this week.

An Englishman by birth, trained for engineering, descended from the Colmans, father and son, who were playwrights and theatrical producers in eighteenth century London, young Colman early felt the hereditary call of the stage and was doing well as a juvenile until the war broke out in 1914. A mere youngster, he enlisted in the London Scottish immediately and served during the first and second battles of Ypres.

Invalided home in 1917, he went back on the stage and became a leading man, luck which lasted until post-war depression drove him to the United States as a potential field for his abilities. Two Broadway engagements—and then Henry King, looking for a leading man for Lillian Gish, saw him at the Henry Miller Theater in New York and sent him to Italy to play opposite Miss Gish in "The White Sister." In this picture and "Romola," which followed it, he attracted much favorable notice.

Sam Goldwin signed him by cable while he was still in Rome to go to Hollywood. With Vilma Banky, then newly imported from Hungary, he made a hit in "The Dark Angel," and, with "Beau Geste," for which Goldwyn loaned his services to Paramount, he was established as a leading film actor.

Co-starred with Miss Banky in a series of films which made them a traditional pair of lovers—"The Magic Flame," "The Night of

Molinari Begins Engagement With Local Orchestra

Will Play Beethoven's "Eroica" Symphony and Mme. Mary Molinari Will Sing Three Rare Songs.

BERNARDINO MOLINARI returns as guest conductor of the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra for its concerts on Friday afternoon and Saturday evening this week, concerts of which Mme. Mary Molinari, the conductor's wife, will be the soloist. For his first appearance in the orchestra's golden jubilee season Molinari has prepared an unusual and interesting program.

The major work is Beethoven's "Eroica," a symphony which broke the bonds of that music form as it had previously existed and permitted the development of the symphony as we know it today. Originally inspired by the career of Napoleon, upon whom Beethoven had looked as a liberator, its dedication was torn from the title page when Napoleon proclaimed himself Emperor, and in its stead were substituted these words: "To the memory of a great man." Later, when Napoleon died, Beethoven declared that he had written the erstwhile Emperor's funeral oration years before.

The other purely orchestral numbers on the program are the "Torch Dance" and "Romeo's Ride" from Zandonai's opera, "Juliet and Romeo." These two excerpts were presented for the first time in America by Molinari in the course of his last season's visit to St. Louis. They are extremely dramatic.

Interest centers in the appearance of Mme. Molinari as soloist of the program, for she is to sing three rare and almost unknown airs with the orchestra. Two of these are her husband's transcription of old Scarlatti pieces "La Violette," a song, and an air from the opera "Il Sedecie Re dei Jerusalemme." The arrangement calls for a string orchestra and Maestro Molinari is said to have been in quite his happiest vein in making the versions. The third of Mme. Molinari's songs is "Notturno," by Tranck, a charming song setting for the verses of Fourcaid.

Mme. Molinari's voice was heard for the first time in St. Louis last season when she sang off-stage an incidental solo in the symphonic work "Singing Sicily."

Molinari made his American debut with the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra three years ago. His remarkable success here resulted in one or two guest engagements elsewhere that season, and last year in engagements in Philadelphia, Detroit and New York. This season he is to conduct the New York Philharmonic-Symphony for five weeks after his engagement in St. Louis.

His program for next Friday and Saturday's concerts is:

Symphony No. 3 in E Flat (Eroica) ....Beethoven
Arias with orchestra
(a) Aria from the opera Il Sedecie, Re dei Jerusalemme ....Scarlatti
(b) La Violette ....Scarlatti
(Accompaniment for string orchestra arranged by Mr. Molinari.)
(c) Notturno ....Tranck
Mme. Molinari.
Two excerpts from the opera Juliet and Romeo ....Zandonai
(a) Torch Dance
(b) Romeo's Ride

The "Eroica" Symphony Again

Molinari Will Play the Greatest of All Beethoven's Major Works — Wagnerians Promise Modern Stagecraft.

By THOMAS B. SHERMAN.

BERNARDINO MOLINARI has placed Beethoven's "Eroica" Symphony on the first program he will present in St. Louis which means that this department is forced to regard the forthcoming pair of concerts as among the most important of the season.

The "Eroica" has not been played in St. Louis since the incumbency of Mr. Ganz. But even if it appeared on local programs with the same frequency as the Beethoven C Minor, I would feel that its performance called for something more than the polite attention accorded to the usual symphonic program. If the Ninth Symphony, the Manzoni Requiem and the Bach B Minor Mass, demand a special tuning up of one's sensibilities so should the "Eroica." It is not built on the same monumental scale but its internal force is just as great as any of these and its psychological reverberations are greater.

To me it is the colossus of all symphonic works and one of mankind's supreme achievements. Music patrons with modernist leanings may laugh at that.

The examples of astringent seventh chords, clashing tonalities, anticipations, sudden alterations of tempo and the like, which occur in the "Eroica" seem elementary to one who has been listening fondly to Ravel, Stravinsky, Schoenberg, Hindemith et al. Moreover, the spiritual attitude discernible in the music is one which they feel has been completely discredited by modern science.

PROMETHEUS defying the gods, in the light of prevailing contemporary reasoning, is just a child playing a game, for there are no gods and if there were they would take no more account of him than of the nearest pediculus capitas. Man is a physical entity living in a world of physical forces which may be evaded for a while but never conquered. His part in such a world is one of cynical resignation and avoidance and his art, to be justified, should be factual, behavioristic, objective and have nothing to do with imaginary organs such as the heart, the soul, etc., etc.

This is no place to oppose an opposite philosophy to the mechanistic principles which have so obviously conquered modern music. One can only suggest that the so-called Modern Temper, in music, may have already been outmoded by still more recent scientific investigation.

In any case, and under any system of thought, the spiritual attitude implicit in the Beethoven "Eroica" is one that still strikes fire from struggling humanity. In those bounding rhythms and muscular harmonies, one hears the repercussions of a hand-to-hand encounter with reality—an encounter taking place on a far frontier of consciousness. The hero of this encounter is no fair-haired dragon slayer out of a German picture book, but one who knows all there is to know about his helplessness and is still unafraid.

THE Wagnerian Opera Company's production of "Der Ring des Nibelungen," which will be presented at the Odeon for three days beginning Feb. 21, will be put on in accordance with modern ideas of stagecraft if advance statements issued by Impresario S. Hurck are to be trusted. Precisely what is meant by "modern stagecraft" is not disclosed. I have been assured that the Rhine maidens will not be suspended by ropes visible to the audience, which may be taken to mean that the obvious crudities of the usual Wagnerian production will be eliminated. But one should not be disappointed if it develops that the Wagnerian conventions which obtain at Bayreuth are still reflected in these productions.

This would mean that the imaginative and simplified decors of artists such as Gordon Craig have not yet been called in to enhance the significance of Wagner's music—in other words, that the Ring has not yet received that really revolutionary treatment in staging that it so obviously needs.

But merely to preserve a reasonable illusion of physical reality in the execution of Wagner's stage direction is a job that requires immense labor and great ingenuity. If the Rhine Maidens actually seem to be swimming, if Alberich turns to a small creature the size of a frog with a fair degree of deceptiveness, if the bridge to Walhalla approximately resembles a rainbow, if the magic fire ring does not suggest a leaking steam pipe, the audience no doubt will be satisfied.

In connection with the prodigious number of props and sets necessary to the "Ring," Mr. Hurck, who is sponsoring the transcontinental tour of the Wagnerian company, has made the following statement:

RECENTLY, when the scenery, costuming and luminous effects to be employed by the German Grand Opera Company upon its transcontinental tour arrived in New York on the S. S. Republic, it required 20 60-foot auto trucks to transfer the equipment to the vast stage of the Century Theater. There was 560 feet of it—that is, there was enough to fill eight 70-foot baggage cars. The Century Theater was taken over by Impresario S. Hurck of the German company, and it is in that house that the final touches will be put on the stage settings and everything made perfect for the dress rehearsals which will take place in New York before the organization opens its tour in Washington on Jan. 6. All the scenes, electrical devices, costumes, armor, swords, shields, guns, spears, helmets, breast-plates, headdress, sandals, and so on, used in the Wagnerian music-dramas were purchased in Berlin.

"Few people not intimately connected or familiar with the theatrical or operatic world have any conception of the cost of grand opera production. In present-day production no product of the looms, no fabric is too rich or rare, no costume too expensive for use on the lyric-dramatic stage. Today every item that enters into grand opera presentation is sky-high in price—the orchestra, the ensemble, the stage hands, costumers, scene painters, electricians, to say nothing of the immense salary list of the artists and the cost of railroad transportation.

"The electrical department of the German Grand Opera Company whose appealing forces will present Richard Wagner's entire cycle, "Der Ring des Nibelungen," at the Odeon in the three-day engagement beginning Friday, Feb. 21, is an interesting one. It comprises hundreds of boxes of effects and appliances including portable switchboards of modern design, footlights, border lights, cables, dimmers, flood lights, spotlights, lanterns, chandeliers and the like. Four expert theatrical electricians are alone necessary to handle this equipment. Then come the great scenic drops—a hundred of them, each 70 feet long, done on imported Irish linen.

"THE foliage borders are of imported fish-netting material. Five costumers are employed on the tour. The ladies' and men's wardrobe occupy huge specially constructed trunks and crates. The 'props' for each opera are crated, these items including everything pertaining to the decoration of the scenes, such as furniture, rock pieces, set pieces, fantastic figures, masks, crypts, grotesque designs and the like. Specially built, plush-lined boxes contain the tiaras, brilliant neck pieces, crowns, etc. Armor is heavily used in the ring and other German operas. Spears are made of aluminum to insure the lightness of weight. Swords, rapiers, breastplates and helmets are made of steel.

"When on tour, all stage effects except the big scenic drops are carefully packed in specially-made boxes and crates, each of which is painted a different color, denoting the contents and making their handling en route much more convenient.

"And now the wigs! This is the most important and interesting feature of the operatic costuming in the organization presenting the German master-works. The German company carries $15,000 worth of this head-dress material, and it is cared for by two hair experts. The hair is all imported, some from Switzerland, Germany, France and Czecho-Slovakia. It comes from nuns, peasants, prisoners, poor people who sell their locks to secure a few dollars. The Czechs are said to provide the longest and finest hair, and this is made into gorgeous head dressings."

All this gives but a modest idea of what grand opera is all about, what is back of all the fray and fuss in the front of the house when the opera opens.

HOW the business of making movies has grown can be gathered from the announcement that during the past week the technical directors of First National Studios launched "set" No. 20,000 out in California.

This means that since the studio moved to its present location not quite five years ago, on a site of 78 acres near Burbank, a town near Hollywood, that number of sets has been designed and built for the 270 films produced there.

The first picture launched on the studio lot when it was built began filming before the plant was quite completed. It was called "Forever After," and Lloyd Hughes and Mary Astor were its stars.

The 20,000th set represents a monstrous gilt animal head with gaping maw, for a unique stage on which ballet girls will dance in "Show Girl in Hollywood," an ambitious production in Technicolor, with Alice White and Jack Mulhall in the leading roles.

It's a far cry between the two pictures, a whole story of advancement in cinema art, with three great revolutionary developments, is embraced. The three big developments, of course, are sound, color, and the latter's resultant stereoscopic effect or "third dimension."

Pictures in the days of "Forever After" averaged 38 "sets," a set often including only a single angle of a wall, or a porch outdoors, a bit of garden or other simple background for the action, artificially prepared.

Pictures in the days of the early "talkies," when it was nearly impossible to shift the cumbersome sound devices then used to many different sets, averaged only 11 sets.

"Show Girl in Hollywood," representing the modern development in talking, color and three-dimension films, has an architect's plot which calls for 64 sets.

This picture, incidentally, will resemble a tour of the studios, for most of its background is that of the movie studio.

"The Forest Ring."

At the auditorium of the Bishop Tuttle Memorial, 1210 Locust street, tomorrow afternoon the Children's Theater will present the 3-act fairy play "The Forest Ring," by William De Mille and Charles Barnard.

Some New Year's Resolutions By the Movie Stars.

OUT IN HOLLYWOOD

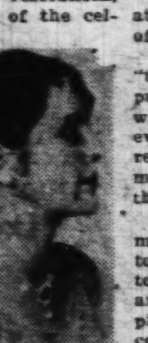
HOLLYWOOD, Dec. 28.

AS ol' Man Year 1929 blows out and gay Young 1930 steps in, there is bound to be the usual to-do of New Year's resolutions, and the picture stars of the celluloid capital are among those hastening to join the ranks of the "resolutionists," many of whom place "Resolved: Not to buy stock on margin" at the top of their list.



BILLIE DOVE.

Richard Barthelmess makes the personal resolution that he will beat Ronald Colman and William Powell at tennis, and adds sadly that since all of his dogs are either lost, strayed or stolen, he will not buy any more pedigreed pups until after 1940. His closing resolution is that his next vacation trip will take him to China, but possibly that is with an eye to calling attention to the fact that in his next picture, "Son of the Gods," he will portray a Chinese boy.

"Resolved," says Corinne Griffith, "that I will no longer go in for distinctive auto radiator ornaments, as they are either stolen or copied. And, as I am only making two pictures a year—Fannie Hurst's 'Back Pay,' being the next—I am going to spend more time at the beach and get a heavier coat of tan. I am going to Europe."

"Resolved," sobs Alice White, "that I won't talk to a man in public because I am getting fed up with being announced as engaged every week. I will fight for the return of short skirts. I will avoid marriage as long as possible for the sake of a career."

"Resolved," says Billie Dove, most enigmatically, "to learn how to operate a studio sunlight arc; to learn to speak French fluently; and to try to obtain a role in a picture in which I can appear as a costume character."

Dorothy Mackaill's resolutions hint broadly that Dorothy loves travel. "I will positively make a trip abroad in 1930 and visit Hull, my home town in England," says Dorothy, "and I will spend more time at Agua Caliente; and also make a trip to Honolulu as often as I can get a vacation from the studio."

"Resolved," says Loretta Young, "to become a star in 1930; to have a saddle horse of my own; and to go on with a college education, studying at night between pictures."

Alexander Gray, who makes his screen debut with Marilyn Miller in "Sally," resolves to buy a home in Beverly Hills and do as the other film people do; not to wear a beret, even if he drives an open motor car.

Bernice Claire, formerly of the San Carlos Opera company and protege of Mme. Jeritza, who makes her film debut in "No, No, Nanette," says, "Resolved, to give a party when the first one of the three pictures I have made is finally released. Resolved, not to get married in 1930."

"Resolved," says Louise Fazenda, "to play at least three serious roles in 1930 if First National will let me; to give a party for all of the former Mack Sennett players still in pictures, and to meet Mayor Walker, Babe Ruth and John Doe."

IT'S an old family custom, the way these Hyams give an interview. John Hyams, the father, started it, and gave the idea to Leila McIntyre, the mother, who told their daughter, Leila Hyams. It goes this way:

LEILA HYAMS.

"My life has been an uneventful one. But you go ahead and lie and I'll swear to it."

That is a good example of what Hollywood calls a "gag," the meaning of which is far removed from Webster's definition.

Expressive Hollywood uses the word "gag" to indicate puns, wise cracks, alibis, and even bad liquor, all of which has nothing to do with the subject at hand.

BETWEEN scenes of "Fresh From College," in which Miss Hyams is appearing opposite William Haines, she said she was practically born in a theatrical trunk.

Before she was old enough to know it, Miss Hyams had been from one end of the country to the other with her trouping parents, the stage team of Hyams and McIntyre.

When she grew up she became a member of their act, and later she was in a New York show for a year.

Movies seemed to her to offer greater opportunities, and four years ago Miss Hyams tried them, but success was not instantaneous.

In between scarce film jobs, she posed for advertisements.

Since she got her first big "break" in "Dancing Mothers," Miss Hyams has climbed steadily upward. She was the girl in "Alias Jimmy Valentine," and since she has been in "Spite Marriage," "The Idle Rich," "The Bishop Murder Case" and others.

FILMLAND, for all its vaunted sophistication, managed to get as thoroughly a-twitter over Christmas as any thoroughly a-twitter small town in the country.

Heralded commercially weeks ago by the decoration of Santa Claus Lane, erstwhile Hollywood boulevard, with gayly lighted trees dotting most of its length, the holiday season has given the movies another opportunity to demonstrate their sway over the city as a whole.

NANCY CARROLL.

The whole pageant of Christmas festivity hereabouts being a carefully planned show, it was only natural that the studios should be called to help.

But it was strange enough when, on the night the Lane was dedicated officially, aircraft gave the throngs below the thrill of a "snowfall" where real snow is impossible.

AND it was downright amusing when, on other nights as a red-flanneled, white-whiskered Santa drove his reindeer down the street, he was preceded by a movie truck carrying a studio "wind machine" into which an attendant dutifully poured movie snow, sending a swirling trail of flakes to beat in Santa's face and get matted in his beard.

You had the feeling that the truck should have been "off-stage," and that a camera should have been traveling beside old Nick.

Santa on these excursions always is accompanied by some movie star who thus does her bit for the Christmas spirit, and incidentally takes the spotlight and enjoys the brief publicity it affords.

Nancy Carroll did the honors as Miss Christmas one night, and on being requested to repeat the next refused—her reason, it is said, being the fear that "if Santa and I are seen together twice there'll be rumors of a romance!" (This Hollywood!)

NEW ART BOARD MUM ON THE LYON STATUE

Unwilling to Be Drawn Into Controversy.— All Appointees to Serve.

Mayor Miller's appointees to the revived Municipal Art Commission will accept the positions, a canvass by the Post-Dispatch disclosed yesterday.

They are unwilling, however, to comment on the Gen. Lyon monument at Grand and Pine boulevards, which has been subjected to extended criticism. One said he had passed the statue, but had not examined it closely. Another, who had seen the statue, said he did not care to be drawn into the controversy. All said they would withhold discussion, if any, of the monument, until the commission has its first meeting, probably after the first of the year.

Criticism of the monument moved Mayor Miller to revive the commission Friday, two years after the previous terms had expired. The Mayor had declared he would fire the commission if it reported the monument unfit for public display, but that he wanted it to pass on future works for permanent display.

It develops that one of the Mayor's appointees is not a resident of the city. He is John Noyes, a landscape architect, who lives in Clayton, but whose offices are in the Railway Exchange Building.

"I'm willing to serve, if there's no technical objection to my residence," Noyes said. "My business is in the city and I used to live in the city. I looked up the statute and it's ambiguous on that point. I am under the impression some past members of the commission lived in the county."

Others named to the commission by the Mayor are:

Isaac A. Hedges, 9 Westmoreland place, Mayor Miller's campaign manager at last election, and manager of the Cupples Station properties of Washington University.

Edward A. Faust, 1 Portland place, capitalist.

Frank Nuderscher, 3126 Compton avenue, a painter, known for his river front and industrial paintings.

Guy Study, architect, Arcade Building; educated at Washington University and abroad.

Victor Berlendes, sculptor, 1425 Kentucky avenue.

The terms of Hedges and Noyes expire April 20, 1932; Faust and Nuderscher, April 20, 1931, and Study and Berlendes, next April 20.

SAYS WIDOW FAILED TO LIST ASSETS OF HUSBAND'S ESTATE

Insurance Broker Seeks Removal of Mrs. Rose Falzone as Administratrix.

Removal of Mrs. Rose A. Falzone as administratrix of the estate of her husband, Frank A. Falzone, who was president of the Western States Life Assurance Co., was sought in a petition filed in Probate Court at Clayton yesterday.

The petitioner, H. P. Heibel, Clayton insurance broker and stockholder in the Western States Co., states he has reason to believe Mrs. Falzone failed to list several pieces of property belonging to the estate and that hence the interests of creditors can best be served by appointment of a disinterested party.

Mrs. Falzone was appointed shortly after the death of her husband, Oct. 11. An inventory filed subsequently showed assets of $17,[illegible]11.19, of which $15,000 was in real estate. Only 24 shares of stock in the insurance company, valued at $480, were listed.

Heibel, in his petition, states that he believes 11,000 shares of the stock as well as the Falzone residence at 7532 Forsythe boulevard, and several other pieces of real estate, should have been listed. A hearing on the petition was set for Jan. 13.

BREADON AND WIFE SUE LUKE E. HART FOR $12,500

Action Follows Auto Collision; Attorney's Son Also Named in Petition.

Two suits, for a total of $12,500, were filed yesterday by Sam Breadon, owner of the Cardinals, and his wife, against Luke E. Hart, an attorney, 6154 Kingsbury avenue, and Hart's son, Paul, 17 years old, as the result of an automobile accident, Nov. 25, last, at Euclid avenue and West Pine boulevard.

Mrs. Breadon's suit for $7500 is for injuries which she suffered when the chauffeur-driven limousine in which she and Breadon were riding collided with a Ford coupe driven by young Hart. Breadon's suit, for $5000, is for loss of Mrs. Breadon's "society and services" as a result of the accident, according to the petition, and in payment for money spent for medical attention. Both suits charge young Hart negligently ran into the Breadon car.

Luke Hart said he planned to file a counter-claim against Breadon. The Ford, he said, was overturned and damaged $200, when the Breadon car containing "Breadon, Mrs. Breadon, a Negro chauffeur and four dogs" failed to make a boulevard stop at West Pine and struck it.

GRADE CHANGE HURT PROPERTY $35,000, SIX CLAIM IN SUITS

Three Others on North Meramec Avenue Ask $15,000 for Damage.

Change of grade of North Meramec avenue, Clayton, when it was paved last summer, damaged their property, it is asserted by plaintiffs in six suits for damages, aggregating $35,000, filed in Circuit Court at Clayton yesterday. The improvement has made the street level higher than their property, they aver.

Previously, three similar suits, for $15,500, had been filed by other property owners, who claimed the street level was made lower in front of their places, lessening the value of their holdings.

Those who filed suits yesterday and the amount of damages asked are: Mr. and Mrs. Paul T. Bolz, 329 North Meramec, $5000; Mr. and Mrs. A. Mansur Tebbetts, 315, $5000; Mr. and Mrs. William H. Harsh, 323, $5000; Matilda Lowe, owner of apartment at Kingsbury boulevard and North Meramec, $10,000; John A. Higgins, 333, $5000, and Charles M. Smith, 341, $5000. Those who previously filed suits are: Mr. and Mrs. Joseph C. McAtee, 132 North Meramec, $4500; Mr. and Mrs. Frank Ruhl, 200, $5500, and Mr. and Mrs. Charles L. Kreutz, 214, $5500.

Correction on Wellston Raid.

It was stated in last Thursday's Post-Dispatch that a woman whose complaint caused deputy sheriffs to raid a flat in Wellston resided at 1800 North Leffingwell avenue. That address is the residence of Charles Paul.

Optimism is high in real estat ircles, with the opinion that 193 ill be marked by renewed activi y in all sections of the real estat arket. This assumption is base n the trend toward real estate in estments since the collapse i New York stock market price he real estate market has lagge throughout the closing year, owin o adverse monetary conditions lus a surplus of apartments.

Conditions never were more conducive to a vigorous real estate arket in both the city and th uburbs. This is true particularly f available capital.

Offers submitted within the las week look to an augmented movement in investment propertie specially those in the speculativ category. Prospective purchaser include many former stock market operators, who promise to become a factor in real estate activities in the ensuing year. An incentive to uyers is the fact that prices are w, with margins for liberal profits. This applies especially to partments and flats, which of necessity must be liquidated.

Bargains in Flats.

Transactions in apartments and lats from all indications will be o ecord proportions, swollen by be ated purchases. Offerings, according to real estate agents, are eplete with bargains in building f these types. The market posi ion of both apartments and flat as been strengthened appreciabl s a result of the restrictions place n building loans for such structures.

There is adequate capital for ew buildings, with the exception f apartments, which restrictions n loans to large extent virtually xclude. Capital is available at omparatively low rates of interest r homes and for business and industrial buildings.

A feature of 1930 likely will be revival of downtown and uptown building projects, halted by dverse financial conditions. Life nsurance companies, which have arge surplus funds for investment, re mentioned as available sources f supply in this connection. These projects promise to be supplemented by new building projects for oth the downtown and uptown enters.

35-Story Tower Planned.

Several of the newest projects re designed for sites in the business section east of Eighth street. s has ben told, the most notable f these contemplates a 35-story ower designed to set off the former National Bank of Commerce nd Federal Trust Building block, 0 and 16 stories in height, and xtending from Olive to Pine on he east side of Broadway. It ould replace the former Post-Dispatch building at 410 North Broadway, which forms a part of his block.

The business section between ighth street and Broadway, is xpected to be benefited by the proposed opening of the Eads Bridge upper deck as a free highway for vehicles and pedestrians. Various projects have been disposed for the site of the present ederal building. The most ambitious contemplates a 45-story tructure, the first 25 stories for department store and the upper 0 stories for offices.

REAL ESTATE MEN OPTIMISTIC ABOUT 1930 PROSPECTS

Plenty of Money Expected to Be Available With Investors Turning From the Stock Market.

HALTED PROJECTS TO BE REVIVED

These Include a 35-Story Tower on the Site of the Old Post-Dispatch Building.

By Berry Moore.

Optimism is high in real estate circles, with the opinion that 1930 will be marked by renewed activity in all sections of the real estate market. This assumption is based on the trend toward real estate investments since the collapse in New York stock market prices. The real estate market has lagged throughout the closing year, owing to adverse monetary conditions, plus a surplus of apartments.

Conditions never were more conducive to a vigorous real estate market in both the city and the suburbs. This is true particularly of available capital.

Offers submitted within the last week look to an augmented movement in investment properties, especially those in the speculative category. Prospective purchasers include many former stock market operators, who promise to become a factor in real estate activities in the ensuing year. An incentive to buyers is the fact that prices are low, with margins for liberal profits. This applies especially to apartments and flats, which of necessity must be liquidated.

Bargains in Flats.

Transactions in apartments and flats from all indications will be of record proportions, swollen by belated purchases. Offerings, according to real estate agents, are replete with bargains in buildings of these types. The market position of both apartments and flats has been strengthened appreciably as a result of the restrictions placed on building loans for such structures.

There is adequate capital for new buildings, with the exception of apartments, which restrictions on loans to large extent virtually exclude. Capital is available at comparatively low rates of interest for homes and for business and industrial buildings.

A feature of 1930 likely will be a revival of downtown and uptown building projects, halted by adverse financial conditions. Life insurance companies, which have large surplus funds for investment, are mentioned as available sources of supply in this connection. These projects promise to be supplemented by new building projects for both the downtown and uptown centers.

35-Story Tower Planned.

Several of the newest projects are designed for sites in the business section east of Eighth street. As has ben told, the most notable of these contemplates a 35-story tower designed to set off the former National Bank of Commerce and Federal Trust Building block, 10 and 16 stories in height, and extending from Olive to Pine on the east side of Broadway. It would replace the former Post-Dispatch building at 410 North Broadway, which forms a part of this block.

The business section between Eighth street and Broadway, is expected to be benefited by the proposed opening of the Eads Bridge upper deck as a free highway for vehicles and pedestrians. Various projects have been disposed for the site of the present Federal building. The most ambitious contemplates a 45-story structure, the first 25 stories for a department store and the upper stories for offices.

Would Stabilize Values.

A building on an overshadowing scale is urged for this block, which is regarded as the hub of downtown St. Louis, as a factor that would tend to stabilize real estate values in this part of the city.

Another factor that will accelerate developments on Twelfth boulevard and on Washington avenue is the Illinois Traction Co., subway plans, which include conversion of the former 10-story Carleton Dry Goods Company's building at the northeast corner of Twelfth boulevard and Washington avenue into a passenger station. Negotiations are pending for corners on both Twelfth boulevard and Washington avenue. The most important involve the southwest corner of Twelfth boulevard and Olive street, the northwest corner of Twelfth and Pine street, the northeast corner of Twelfth and Spruce streets the northeast corner of Twelfth and Chestnut, the southwest corner of Twelfth and Spruce street and the southeast corner of Washington and Eleventh street, the latter recently purchased by Charles Cella through the Mercantile Commerce Bank & Trust Co.

HORACE CULLING'S RESIDENCE ON BOLAND DRIVE COMPLETED

The residence of Horace R. Culling, which has just been completed on Boland drive in the Moorlands, was designed by and erected under the supervision of Maritz & Young, Inc., architects.

It contains a living room, sunroom, dining room, breakfast room, kitchen and pantry on first floor. There are three master bedrooms, two baths and servant's room and bath on the seond floor. The garage is in the basement.

MORE THAN 100 HOMES BUILT IN INGLESYDE SUBDIVISION

An example of North St. Louis Real Estate progress is cited by the John C. Greulich Realty and Investment Co. which placed on the market, Inglesyde, during the latter part of 1929 and eclipsed any previous development of this company.

Inglesyde extends from Goodfellow boulevard to Kingshighway and from McLaran avenue to Melrose avenue and has more than 100 homes.

The entire development of Inglesyde Subdivision Nos. 1, 2 and 3 represent a development of 28 city blocks and improvements aggregating approximately $1,500,000 has been placed there during the last three years.

Prospects for 1930 appear favorable. Eight homes have already been sold from the plans, with building operations to start about March 1.

Isaac T. Cook Co. has leased to Moss & Lowenhaupt Cigar Co. a shop in the Arcade Building.

Weiler Bros., jobbers of costume jewelry, have leased a portion of the first and third floors of the building at 1214 Washington avenue.

CHAIN STORE REVIEW FOR YEAR

Recognition of the strategic position St. Louis occupies as a merchandising and distributing center has brought many new firms to the city during the past year, Chain Store Age declares in its annual survey of national real estate conditions appearing in the current issue. Information on conditions in St. Louis was supplied by Isaac T. Cook Co.

Business has expanded from the central retailing sections to subcenters in various parts of the city, and the advent of Neisner Bros., Inc., Louis K. Liggett Co., Peck & Peck, J. J. Newberry Co., W. T. Grant Co., Lerner Stores Corporation and Sears, Roebuck & Co. into St. Louis during 1929 has stimulated retail trade in the hitherto unimportant locations.

Additional features favorable to the growth of retail trade in St. Louis, noted by Chain Store Age, are the great development of roads in Missouri and Illinois, making the city easily accessible to outlying districts, and the excellence of the labor situation within St. Louis, owing to the many kinds of industries located there.

ADVISES REAL ESTATE LOANS AS GOOD INVESTMENT IN 1930

Thomas Rielly of Mercantile-Commerce Co., Points to Improved Renting Conditions, Cheaper Money, Available Capital.

Real estate loans will be a desirable and active form of investment in St. Louis in 1930, Thomas Rielley, vice president of the Mercantile-Commerce Co., said yesterday. Rielley is in charge of the real estate loan department of the company, a subsidiary of the Mercantile-Commerce Bank and Trust Co.

"Nothing that happened during 1929 affected the real estate loan market here to an appreciable degree," he said. "Throughout the year there were ample funds for home owners and realty projects of a meritorious nature. The tight money market, which prevailed during the summer and early fall, was to a certain extent a blessing in disguise to owners of improved real estate, because of its effect in curtailing speculative building operations. This curtailment is proving a boon to renting, and will, undoubtedly, result in an absorption of many existing vacancies.

"The improved renting conditions, placing investment properties on a sounder income basis, coupled with cheaper money, should stimulate the demand for that class of real estate during the coming year.

"However, bankers generally agree that while in recent months there has been a growing market for mortgage securities, still the investing public is more discriminating in its wants and is seeking quality rather than a high yield. Liberal loans made under easy money conditions are not being renewed for the original amounts, and mortgages for building projects of a class where an oversupply exists are looked on with askance. On the other hand, there is an abundance of capital available at reasonable rates for fundamentally sound projects and plans for new work of that classification are receiving favorable consideration from mortgage lenders.

"The prospects for the coming year indicate that a healthy condition should exist in the mortgage field, from the standpoint of both the borrower and the lender. There is a feeling that considerable work will go ahead on plans now in the hands of architects, and that other projects which were halted by the uncertainty of the money market, will take on new life and be pushed to completion."

NEW ST. LOUIS PLANT TO MAKE SYNTHETIC RUBBER

The establishment of an industry for the manufacture of synthetic rubber, the Vulrox Corporation, was announced yesterday by George C. Smith, director of the Industrial Bureau of the Industrial Club of St. Louis.

The factory, at 2600 North Broadway, will occupy 85,000 square feet of floor space and employ 25 workers. It will produce material for the protection of pipeline and conduit from corrosion and of machinery from rust.

C. Norman Jones is president. The capital investment is $50,000. The plant will be in operation Jan. 1.

WILLIAM L. HECKMANN GIVES SECOND CHRISTMAS FESTIVAL

The second Christmas day festival was given last week by William L. Heckman, developer of the Eldorados and Spanish Lakes communities in North St. Louis County. Twelve hundred persons attended the party, held at Larimore and Trampe roads, north of Baden, where a large cedar tree was decorated.

The guests were chiefly children from St. Aloysius' Parish School, Prigge Public School, Bellefontaine Methodist Church Sunday School, lot owners from Eldorados Nos. 1, 2 and 3, Spanish Lakeview and Eldorado Park, and families who have built and reside in Eldorado. Gifts were distributed by a Santa Claus.

THREE LEASES HANDLED BY MARTIN & BREITT

The Ever Clean Seat Pad Co. has leased the two-story building at 1511-21 North Twelfth street through the Martin & Breitt Real Estate Co. The building, which contains 30,000 square feet of floor space, will be used for factory and warehouse purposes. This building will form an addition to the building the company now occupies, 909-15 Lucas avenue. The company manufactures seat pads for automobiles. The lease was made for the account of the Brecht Casing Co.

Martin & Breitt has leased for Letitia Bock the two-story building at Tenth and Morgan streets to the Zeiser Bros. Sign Co.

Martin & Breitt also leased the first floor storeroom at 809 North Tenth street to Charles Travagliante, for a restaurant. This lease was also made for Letitia Bock.

LAND TITLE INSURANCE FIRM STARTED IN 1880

Has Office Opposite Courthouse in Clayton and at 717 Chestnut.

The Land Title Insurance Co. of St. Louis is preparing to mark its golden jubilee year in 1930. The firm organized in 1880, has been active a half century in insurance and protection service to land buyers and mortgage investors.

The present name is the fifth under which the company has done business. The initial organization was a private partnership of E. P. Cloud and Henri Chomeau, with offices in the St. Louis County Courthouse at Clayton. The two men handled all the business, Cloud doing the locating, and Chomeau the copying and clerical work.

Following the entrance of E. L. Dosenbach and the retirement of Cloud, the business was incorporated in 1901 as Chomeau & Dosenbach Land Title Co. A few years later the name was changed to the St. Louis County Land Title Co. The company's office was at Forsythe boulevard and Meramec avenue.

In 1912, the company moved into its present home, 7912 Forsythe boulevard, opposite the Courthouse. In 1905 David Schmid succeeded Chomeau; in 1906 D. C. Taylor succeeded Schmid; in 1913, George W. Wolff succeeded Taylor in 1923 James M. Rohan became president.

An expansion program, started by Rohan, led to the purchase of the St. Louis Title Co., in 1926, and the establishment of a downtown office in that company's former quarters, 717 Chestnut street, where the company now operates under its present name, Land Title Insurance Co. of St. Louis. The company retains also its office in Clayton. One of his additions to the business has been the establishing of an escrow and conveyancing department."

Other officers are Grover W. Devine and J. Philo Young, vice presidents, and C. F. Jacobsmeyer, secretary. The company employs 90 persons including expert title examiners, copyists, stenographers and other trained helpers.

E. S. Block Advanced.

E. S. Block has been elected second vice president of the Henry R. Weisels Co., Inc. He was formerly secretary of the company.

BUILDING OWNERS FACE INCREASED VACANCIES IN 1930

Situation Due to Great Amount of Construction Now Under Way and Planned for This Year.

HEAD OF OPERATORS' BODY GIVES VIEWS

Declares Some of New Floor Space Provided Merely Adds to Overbuilt Condition.

The office building industry, which may be properly classed as one of the greatest industries of the United States, since it represents more than $7,000,000,000 worth of invested capital, faces 1930 with many problems, according to Paul Robertson, president of the National Association of Building Owners and Managers. "We will begin the year," he says, "with an office space vacancy that is slightly in excess of the normal vacancy. The last quarterly survey of the National Association of Building Owners and Managers made in October disclosed a vacancy of 11.55 per cent. Another survey will be made immediately as of the first of the year to determine whether or not there has been any material increase in that vacancy."

Robertson's Statement Continues:

"We are convinced that with the addition of many more millions of square feet of office space during 1930 the national average of vacancies will be higher than in 1929—in fact higher than at any time since before the World War. There is a tremendous amount of building going on throughout the country and many more projects will begin to assume definite form during 1930. The contracts let for office buildings during the first 11 months of 1929 have not only greatly exceeded those of 1928 by millions of dollars but by millions of square feet of floor area as well. It is too early to give figures for the entire year but within a few weeks the totals for 1929 will be definitely known.

"Some of the new construction of office buildings is justified from the standpoint of local market conditions. Some of it is clearly adding to already overbuilt conditions. The National Association of Building Owners and Managers will do all within its power to throw a clear light on actual conditions in order that prospective owners may realize what their new buildings will be faced with in the rental market.

"Despite this situation there is but little pessimism on the part of the present building owners and managers, for those who are in that business today have a much better conception of the requirements of their job than ever before, and much better than most of the newcomers in the field. They have a better understanding of rental campaigns, operating problems and service to tenants than ever before. We are firm believers in the slogan, 'Keep your tenants satisfied and you will keep your tenants.'

"In this connection, the National Association of Building Owners and Managers has gone on record at the recent business conference held in Washington at the behest of President Hoover, promising to do everything within its command to see to it that our properties are maintained to the highest degree. We hope to assist in the stabilization of business by spending money where justified in redecoration, improvements and in some instances remodeling. We are urging our members to refrain from cutting wages and reducing personnel. Briefly, we who own and manage the places where the business of the nation is quartered will carry on as we have in the past. That will be the contribution of the building owners and managers to 1930."

WASHINGTON U. PURCHASE AT 21ST AND WASHINGTON

College Buys Five-Story Building at Northwest Corner—Coronado Garage Sold to General Cab Co.

They included the five-story building at the northwest corner of Washington avenue and Twenty-first street which was purchased by Washington University and the Coronado Garage at 3728-40 inclusive Washington avenue which was purchased by the General Cab Co.

The Twenty-first and Washington avenue building, which was owned by the Burdeau Real Estate Co., has a frontage of 75 feet on Washington with a depth of 137 feet on Twenty-first street, extending through to Lucas avenue. The Universal Furniture Co. and the Britt Printing Co. occupy the building under leases calling for annual rental of $22,500.

The total valuation of the property involved, according to George Burdeau, president of the Burdeau Real Estate Co., was about $500,000. Isaac A. Hedges handled the negotiations.

The General Cab Co.'s property has a frontage of 111 feet on Washington with a depth of 234 feet. A garage for 325 automobiles occupies the rear of the premises, and a building containing six stores with apartments above occupies the Washington avenue front.

The consideration was in excess of $400,000. Negotiations were handled by Phil Cohn and J. E. McCausland, real estate agents of East St. Louis. The property was owned by Philip Morrison.

The General Cab Co. will occupy the Washington avenue garage as its headquarters.

Since the 80's

In the early eighties three men were drawn together on Eighth and Locust streets with the thought of serving St. Louis through the development of real estate. Out of their concerted thought and action we have today in this bank a department which has exerted its influence on more than a hundred major real estate developments on St. Louis' most prominent streets. We have served multitudes of people who have listed their property with us and we are confident, by virtue of experience, that we can serve profitably in the direction of any real estate project whatever, be it selling, buying, renting, leasing, or property management. We now invite the citizenry of St. Louis to join with us in the continued ideal of service with which we approach the new thirties.

PRISON SHIP MUTINY QUELLED BY GUARDS

126 Long-Termers Break for Freedom on Way From Portugal to Africa.

LISBON, Portugal, Dec. 28.—The Colonial Office reported today that a serious mutiny among convicts on a Portuguese prison ship bound for the African penitentiary at Loanda, Angola, had been quelled only after desperate hand-to-hand fighting.

The report stated that the convict ship Guinea was conveying 126 long-term prisoners when the outbreak occurred. The ship was within five miles of the coast when the convicts made a wild break for freedom, savagely attacking the guards and crew.

It was only after a desperate fight that the guards, who were armed with rifles and bludgeons, succeeded in overpowering the men and locking them up in the hold.

A second attempt at a breakaway was made as the Guinea was going into port, the convicts smashing their shackles and rushing on deck. They were again overpowered. This time by troops summoned by radio.

All of the prisoners finally were transferred to shore under a strong escort.

SUCCUMBES UNDER ANESTHETIC

Patrick O'Brien, 40 years old, a chauffeur, 5555 Terry avenue, died yesterday at Missouri Baptist Hospital under anesthetic during preparations for an operation to correct a dislocated right shoulder.

Death was caused by respiratory paralysis, according to Dr. Joseph P. Daugherty of 1300 Belt avenue, in charge of the case. An inquest will be held tomorrow. O'Brien was injured Friday night when he fell on the sidewalk at Goodfellow and Natural Bridge avenues.

$13,196,249 OF $34,616,938 DUE IN ST. LOUIS TAXES PAID

Shortage of $500,000 Over Corresponding Date Last Year Attributed to Half Working Day.

Tax payments received at the City Collector's office, up to the close of the half-day business period yesterday, amounted to $13,196,249.48. The total levy of St. Louis municipal, State and school taxes for this year is $34,616,938.72, not including the State income tax, which will be payable in June.

There are two more full days, tomorrow and Tuesday, for payment without penalty. Payments made after the end of 1929, or mailed in letters postmarked later than midnight of Dec. 31, must include penalty payments at the rate of 1 per cent; those delayed until after Jan. 31, 2 per cent, and so on at 1 per cent a month.

The total was more than $500,000 short of the figure for last year's collections on the same date, but that is attributed to the fact that yesterday was only a half-day, while Dec. 28 of last year fell on Friday, a full day. The collections for yesterday morning were $1,091,169.71. The large corporations, including banks and utilities, customarily delay their payments until the last day of the year. Delinquencies always amount to several million dollars, and this money straggles in through the succeeding months.

Clerks will work at the office today in opening mail, but the office will be closed to the public.

NEW APARTMENT BUILDING 4906-12 W. FLORISSANT SOLD

The 16-family apartment at 4906-12 West Florissant avenue, complete Oct. 1 by Liebowits Construction Co., was sold by Hartwig-Dischinger Realty Co., to Lenore Realty & Investment Co. Each apartment consists of three rooms, including bedroom, living room, dinette and kitchenette; colored tile bath with showers, electric refrigeration, latest built-in features, fireproof garage for 10 cars.

The building was leased entirely before completion.

Head of Architects' National Institute Urges Construction Now.

Build now is the slogan of the architectural profession, according to C. Herrick Hammond of Chicago, president of the American Institute of Architects, who issued a statement on the 1930 prospects through the institute's committee on public information here.

"Costs are lower today than they have been for several years, and those contemplating construction should be advised by the architect not to delay," according to Hammond. "The outlook for 1930 in the construction industry is difficult to forecast. However, in all probability, the first quarter of the new year will show an amount of building construction somewhat less than the corresponding quarter of 1929. This loss will, with reasonable certainty, be overcome and the total volume of construction for 1930 should be equal to, if not in excess of, 1929."

Reports from leaders of industry to the Advisory Council of Business established at the suggestion of President Hoover show, Hammond said, that most of the large corporations in the country have extensive programs calling for expansion in excess of that for 1929. These enlarged programs, he points out, will contribute largely toward an increase in the volume of new construction for 1930.

Hammond made public a report submitted to Secretary Lamont of the Department of Commerce outlining the co-operation available to President Hoover through the 65 chapters of the American Institute of Architects in all sections of the United States.

"The position of the architect and the exercise of his function with respect to building operations under modern conditions are of fundamental importance in the development of any program which is concerned with the construction industry," Hammond told Secretary Lamont.

"In 27 States of the Union no building can be erected unless a registered or licensed architect is engaged. Seventy per cent of the buildings in this country costing $75,000 and upwards are designed in offices of members of the American Institute of Architects."

PAIR HURT WHEN TRAIN HITS AUTOMOBILE NEAR BELLEVILLE

L. & N. Crew Lift Man From Wreckage in Crash at Ittner Brickyard Crossing.

Joseph Hendericks suffered a broken leg and a lacerated scalp when the automobile he was driving was struck by an east-bound Louisville & Nashville passenger train at 10:15 o'clock last night at the Ittner brickyard crossing near North Illinois street on the outskirts of Belleville. Miss Mary Lepka, who was riding with him, suffered bruises and a sprained back.

Hendericks was lifted from his wrecked automobile by trainmen and placed aboard the train. With Miss Lepka, he was taken to the L. & N. station in Belleville, where an ambulance removed them to a hospital. Hendericks lives at Birkner Station, near Belleville.

CRITICISES HOOVER'S FAILURE TO SPEAK MIND ON TARIFF

Jouett Shouse Contrasts Attitude With Debenture Attack in Louisville Address.

By the Associated Press.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Dec. 28.—Jouett Shouse, chairman of the Democratic National Executive Committee, in an address here tonight, criticised the failure of President Hoover to declare his position on "the outrageous schedules of the pending tariff act."

Speaking at a dinner commemorating the seventy-third anniversary of Woodrow Wilson's birth, Shouse said President Hoover "has refrained from giving his views on a great subject which has occupied the attention of Congress for some time, yet on two occasions he has not hesitated to repudiate the action of that body.

"On one occasion it was the debenture, and on the other the flexible provisions of the tariff."

In his review of the life of the former President, Shouse said Wilson "believed in the responsibility of leadership, and in that responsibility as a spokesman for the people."

OVERHEATED FURNACE CAUSES LACLEDE BRASS WORKS FIRE

An overheated furnace caused a fire at the Laclede Brass Works, 307-18 Cedar street, at midnight, entailing damage to the building and patterns on the first floor estimated at several thousand dollars. Two alarms were turned in, but the fire was under control within half an hour after its discovery by Joseph M. Hubeler, a a watchman.

Hubeler smelled smoke and found a pillar near the furnace in the basement ablaze. Unable to extinguish it, he turned in an alarm. The fire did not spread beyond the first floor of the two-story brick building.

We Train You FREE

It's selling—intensive selling—but you hardly think of your work as selling—it doesn't ask prospects to SPEND their money—

We are offering a most unique distinctive and flexible saving program.

Placing our savings bonds enables you to make a handsome profit while you are helping your prospects to financial independence—and they talk for you.

It's work in which you can become enthusiastic—and enthusiasm wins. Our references include leading banks of six states, in which we operate. We are growing; that means for you increased opportunity. We need high-class men—men who can make good money and who know what hard work will bring on a good proposition. We prefer men 25 to 45 with references—who want to climb and will work to do it, for the more work the greater the returns. Ask for Scott, 729 Paul Brown Bldg. Hours 8 to 5 and 7 to 9.

A MENTALLY BIG MAN.

A manufacturer, rated AAA1, operating nationally, has an opening for a man of successful selling experience; prefer one who has met and sold chief executives, although in the final analysis personality will be the determining factor.

As this division of our business is expanding rapidly, there are openings for men of executive ability, but only after a period of actual selling in the field.

This is not stocks, bonds, real estate, insurance or books—nor is it posters.

Do not investigate unless you feel confident that your services are worth $8000 per year or more.

We can use a man immediately in each of the following territories: Louisville, Kansas City, Kansas, Oklahoma, Texas and one in St. Louis.

We will grant you a personal interview if you are able to interest us over the telephone. Phone MR. F. C. SCHOEN on Monday for appointment Hotel Jefferson.

Chicago Station Enters Fight by Seattle Stations For 970 Kc. Wave

WCFL Requests Shift From 1280 — Alabama Station Asks for 50,000 Watts and Starts a New WAPI-KVOO Struggle — WAIU Wants to Use KFI's Channel Up to 10 P. M. St. Louis Time.

The struggle between radio stations for better channels and more power increases in intensity with every day. Recently, the Federal Radio Commission decided to promote KOMO, Seattle, Wash., to the 970kc. cleared channel used by KJR in the same city and to demote KJR to daytime operation on another wave. KOMO was given a permit to use 15,000 watts, which would mean that it should be turned in easily in St. Louis when the new transmitter was in operation. The change was scheduled for Dec. 15. Now KJR has gotten from the District Court of Appeals in Washington, D. C., an order restraining the commission from giving the 970 kc. channel to KOMO or moving KJR off from it. The court will decide which station should get the wave length.

The fight between the two Seattle stations over the 970 ks. wave is further complicated by WCFL, the Chicago Federation of Labor's station, which is asking to be shifted from 1280 kc. to 970 with full time. WCFL also asks for an increase in power from 1000 watts at night and 1500 daytime to 1500 watts at all times.

WAIU, Columbus, O., which operates on KFI's channel, 640 kc., until sundown on the Pacific Coast, now asks that it be permitted to use the wave length until 8 o'clock Pacific time, which would mean that it would be operating until 10 p. m. St. Louis time and that Mad-Western and Eastern listeners would never hear KFI until after 10 p. m. WAIU also has asked to be changed to full time on 610 kc. Since this application was filed, WJAY has been shifted from 620 to 610.

WAPI, Birmingham, Ala., is asking for 50,000 watts power and full time on the 1140 kc. cleared channel which it shares with KVOO, Tulsa, Ok. This application revives the fight between the Alabama and Oklahoma stations, which at one time resulted in KVOO's making a vain attempt to wrest away from W. K. Henderson the channel assigned to KWKH, Shreveport, La., and WWL, New Orleans.

KGBX, St. Joseph, Mo., has been changed from 1370 to 1310 kc. with unlimited time when WOQ is not operating and experimentally when WOQ is on the air.

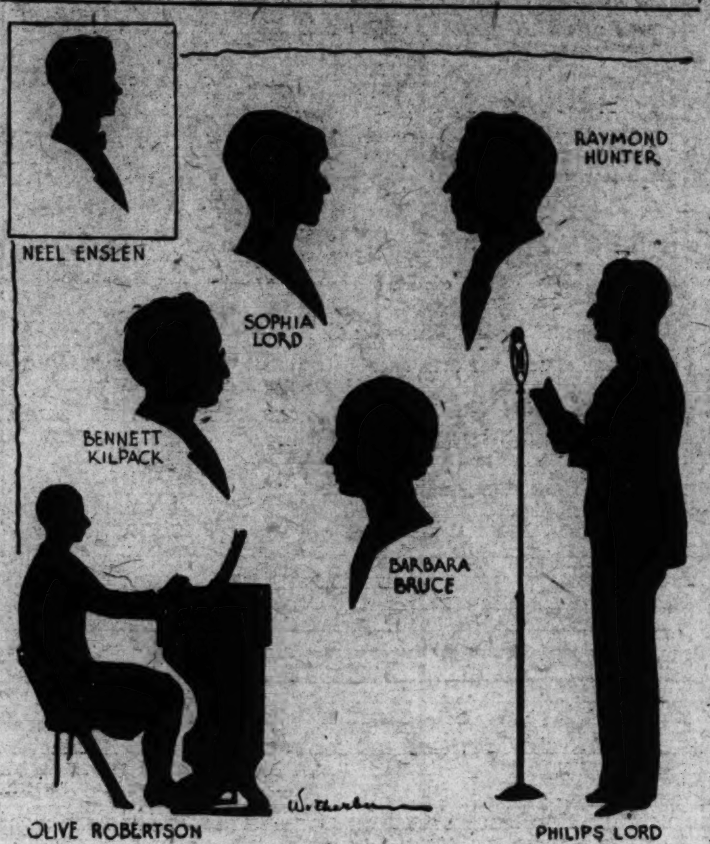
KFPY, Spokane, Wash., has been authorized to increase power from 500 to 1000 watts on 1340 kc.

Washington Quarters For Columbia Chain

The Columbia Broadcasting System has leased for its headquarters in Washington a large suite of offices in the new Shoreham Building. Plans for a studio are now being drawn. When the suite is completed, some of the most important broadcasts will be heard from the Shoreham studio, through WMAL.

They Play 'Sunday at Seth Parker's'



How Seth Parker Was 'Born'

Phillips H. Lord Really Is Loveable, Homely Radio Character He Created.

"SUNDAY AT SETH PARKER'S" is to continue as a religious broadcast for Phillips H. Lord, creator of the act, has been undecided whether to make it a comedy or a serious religious feature. Listeners have taken the matter out of the author's hands and decided the question. "Sunday Evening at Seth Parker's" has been nationally acclaimed as a religious program.

Churches have indorsed it, ministers hold it up as an example of religious simplicity, and from all sides come letters which plainly indicate that the radio audience regards "Seth" as a leading factor in the radio religion.

This weekly Sunday night feature is broadcast over WEAF, WHAS, WOW, WKY, WWJ, WHO, WGY, KOA, WEBC and other stations seldom tuned in by listeners in the Mid-West. It begins at 9:45 St. Louis time and continues for an hour.

Seth Parker is really Phillips H. Lord. Although Seth is around 70 years old and Lord is only 27, one readily understands and agrees with Lord's assertion that the character of Seth is himself. In Lord one finds the same qualities of gentle tolerance, quiet humor and country-bred philosophy which have endeared Seth to millions; and one may read into this fact what undoubtedly is one of the chief reasons for Seth's immense success: Lord is not play-acting when he broadcasts the part of Seth over the air—he's just being himself.

It's about two years since Phillips H. Lord arrived in New York, a country boy fresh from Jonesport, Me.—which really is on the map. He knew nothing of the ways of New York and hadn't a friend in the city. He followed the crowd from the station and found a small hotel, where he took a room for a week and began to look for a job. His ambition was to be a writer.

How He Got His Big Idea.

"I used to hope one of my stories would get lost in the mail, so that I could at least hope for a little while that it was being considered, but even that never happened," said Lord with a rueful smile. So he got a job in a candy factory and in the evenings kept on writing.

One evening he visited a new acquaintance. A radio set was turned on and he heard for the first time one of the programs of country life which were just beginning to become popular at that time. Lord didn't like the program; his reaction was one of intense resentment. Before it was finished he jumped into a taxi and raced to the radio station where the sketch was being presented.

"You have a wonderful idea there," he said to the author of the program when the troupe had come off the air, "but why burlesque it? Why show country people as fools, instead of showing that in back of their homely observations there is shrewdness and big heartedness. And why make the old country characters say 'Doesn't that please you?' when they should say, 'Don't that kind of tickle yer?' Why don't you show them as they really are?"

Success First Time on Air.

The author of the program was city bred; so were the actors who played the characters. They had acquired their ideas of country life and country people from what they had seen in city theaters. Lord soon realized that he was wasting his time in trying to convert them to his way of thinking.

The next evening he began looking for "real country folks" like himself, who had been reared in the country, were sympathetic toward it and were willing to follow his lead. Then he wrote a radio skit of country life and rehearsed it.

Two weeks later he took his little band to one of the smaller radio stations in New York and requested

New Allocation Of Stations Said To Be Certainty

Many Stations Complain That Broadcasting Is Spoiled — Court Halts KJR Change — Less Separation Advocated —Commissioner Saltzmann Key to the Situation.

A new allocation of station channels and power by the Federal Radio Commission is regarded in Washington as very much of a possibility, especially because of interference suffered by regional stations, several of which are assigned to each of a number of wave lengths.

The bill passed by Congress extending the administrative life of the commission also provided for a chief radio engineer and two assistants. The commission is seeking the best men available for these positions. In official radio circles in Washington, it is believed that one of the first tasks may be to draft a rearrangement of the broadcast lineup.

Recent changes on regional channels have increased interference throughout the country. The changes were made as the result of great pressure from certain sections for increases in broadcasting facilities. The commission could hardly avoid making the changes. WDOD, Chattanooga, on 1820 kc, is being ruined by WCFL, Chicago, recently assigned to that frequency. WCFL reports that it is being heterodyned within a few blocks from the station.

WTMJ, Milwaukee, on 620, is being hurt by WFLA-WSUN, on the same channel. WFLA-WSUN also is suffering.

WLAC and WTNT, Nashville, on 1490, are being ruined by WCKY, Covington, on 1480. WCKY also suffers.

WBT, Charlotte, on 1080, is being hurt by cross-talk from WTAM, Cleevland, on 1070. Numerous complaints have been received by the commission that the increase of WTAM to 50,000 watts has blotted out WBT in many sections.

WTIC and WBAL, Hartford and Baltimore, on 1060, are also complaining of cross-talk from WTAM.

This is only a very small percentage of the complaints that are reaching the commission.

It is impossible for anyone on the outside to appreciate the number and intensity of the complaints reaching the commission, mostly from broadcasters.

There is much talk in the Senate about investigating the assignments made by the Radio Commission. A number of Senators complain that their states have not received their fair share.

The whole business is headed toward a new reallocation all around.

Acting as counsel for WAPI, Birmingham; WBAL, Baltimore; WOC, Davenport, and WTIC, Hartford, Louis Caldwell has filed with the commission a motion to amend General Order No. 40 to provide 10 additional cleared channels.

Pointing out that additional service would be provided for listeners if WBAL, WTIC, WOC, and WAPI could operate full time instead of half-time, Caldwell suggested that the broadcast band be subdivided into two bands, the first from 550 to 1210 inclusive, the second, from 1217.5 kilocycles to 1502.5 kilocycles.

In the first band a 10 kilocycle separation would be maintained, and in the second band, the separation would be reduced to seven and one-half kilocycles. This would give 67 channels on a 10 kilocycles separation and 39 channels on a seven and one-half kilocycle separation, a total of 106 channels. The 67 10-kilocycle channels would include the six Canadian exclusive and 11 Canadian shared channels. The first band, therefore, would accommodate 50 cleared channels and 11 regional channels. In the second band, 33 would be regional channels and six would be local channels.

If the commission could, or would, put about 150 or 200 stations off the air, there would be a chance for 10 additional cleared channels. Unless and until the commission does this there is not the remotest possibility of an increase in cleared channels.

Engineers of the commission have already voiced disapproval of the plan to reduce the separation from 10 to seven and one-half kilocycles.

Agitation continues, in and out of the commission, for a decrease in cleared channels. A number of Senators have asked members of the commission to reduce the number of cleared channels.

The key man is Gen. Saltzman. Commissioners LaFount and Starbuck are opposed to a decrease in cleared channels. Commissioners Robinson and Sykes are in favor of a decrease. Saltzman's vote will decide the matter.

To one of his senatorial callers, Saltzman explained his point of view:

"The only satisfactory broadcasting at present is on the cleared channels. There is so much interference on the other channels that

A Florida Scene That Makes Winter Tour Delightful

Sidewalks Along Rural Highways Urged for Safety

Lives of Pedestrians Menaced and Driving Made Dangerous by Their Absence.

By HAMILTON M. WRIGHT.

The almost universal absence of sidewalks along rural roads, even in the vicinity of towns and cities, as well as along arterial highways, on which many people find it necessary to walk, has become a menace to the lives of pedestrians and a source of anxiety and danger to the motorist.

Members of the American Society for Municipal Improvements who have investigated this subject point out that the menace to the pedestrian becomes more formidable at night, when the uncertain lights and shadows, often even along fairly well-lighted roads, make it difficult for the driver to see the pedestrian until he is almost upon him, or to tell how many people are walking. The danger is increased when trees, poles or buildings through black shadows in the intervals of bright lamps. But the peril is not entirely confined to the pedestrian. Many a driver who finds, too late, that he is confronted with the alternative of running someone down or turning his car against a fence or building, will prefer to risk his own life rather than that of an innocent wayfarer.

The American Society for Municipal Improvements, at its last meeting, attempted to bring this situation to the official attention of municipal authorities everywhere in this country.

"It is almost universal in connection with town, county and state highways that the entire roadway which was formerly available for pedestrians is now taken up with more or less congested automobile traffic, with no sidewalk provisions, rendering the streets absolutely unsafe for pedestrians," said the preamble to a resolution of the society urging officials to take action.

The resolution itself put the convention on record as officially recognizing the importance of sidewalk provisions in connection with all public highways subjected to considerable automobile traffic; and the secretary was authorized to prepare and distribute an appropriate communication embodying the resolution to all members of the society, urging their activity, including bringing the matter to the attention of the public and officials in their home communities.

There is nothing that will so effectively call attention to this peril to pedestrians as a concrete example of a casualty to a pedestrian under circumstances which could be reproduced in many parts of the country. Such accidents have produced individual champions for better means of protection to walkers. Among them are Mr. and Mrs. George Copp Warren of Scituate, a town near Boston.

A recent case in which a driver going at high speed along a country road at night killed a woman whom he had not even seen is cited by Mrs. Warren, who is trying to interest officials of her State in constructing sidewalks along suburban highways.

Mr. and Mrs. Warren also include the angle of "common justice to the autoist" as a further reason for roadway sidewalks. Pointing out the blinding glare on

39-Mile Scenic Drive Laid Out in Kansas City District

Route Skirting Business Section, Passing Points of Interest.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Dec. 28.—The tourist's perplexing problem—how to see a city's outstanding sights in the shortest possible time—has been simplified here.

Thirty-nine miles of selected boulevards, comprising a two-hour tour, have been designated as a "scenic drive" and marked with signs that guide visitors to points of salient interest.

Kansas City, which boasts nearly 100 miles of boulevards, claims its scenic drive is the country's only such system especially designed for tourists' convenience. Various regions have marked routes through rural districts, but no other city is known to provide a similarly marked tour.

The drive is roughly loop shaped, making it possible for a stranger to enter at any point and include the complete route. It passes through Kersey Coates drive, overlooking the central industrial district; Cliff drive, Kansas City's exclusive country club residential sector and plaza, the William Rockhill Nelson properties and numerous parks.

A reproduction of a statue, "The Scout," which overlooks the whole city from a bluff, has been placed on each sign. "The Scout" is emblematic of a day when Kansas City was the country's westernmost outpost.

Except for a few blocks, the drive purposely avoids all downtown congestion. It skirts the business district.

State Employe Invents Device To Aid Parking

Auxiliary Wheels, Suspended From Front Axle, Turn Car in Small Space.

A device which may be installed on any automobile and which, it is said, will save time and space in parking, has been invented by R. W. Branson, an employe in the office of the State Auditor at Jefferson City, Mo.

It consists of a set of two small auxiliary wheels that are attached to the front axle and which are hinged so that they may be dropped to the ground through a control on the instrument board. When the small wheels are touching the ground, the driver puts the car in reverse and backs up from two to four inches, raising the front end of the car on the auxiliary wheels and lifting the front wheels of the car off the ground.

As soon as this operation is carried out, the steering gear automatically becomes attached to the auxiliary wheels and the driver may turn the car to either side by merely turning the steering wheel.

The device, according to Branson, will permit a machine to be parked in a considerably smaller space than may the ordinary car. The car so equipped may be turned all the way around in a much smaller space, and when parked at the curb it will be virtually impossible to move it, as the auxiliary wheels

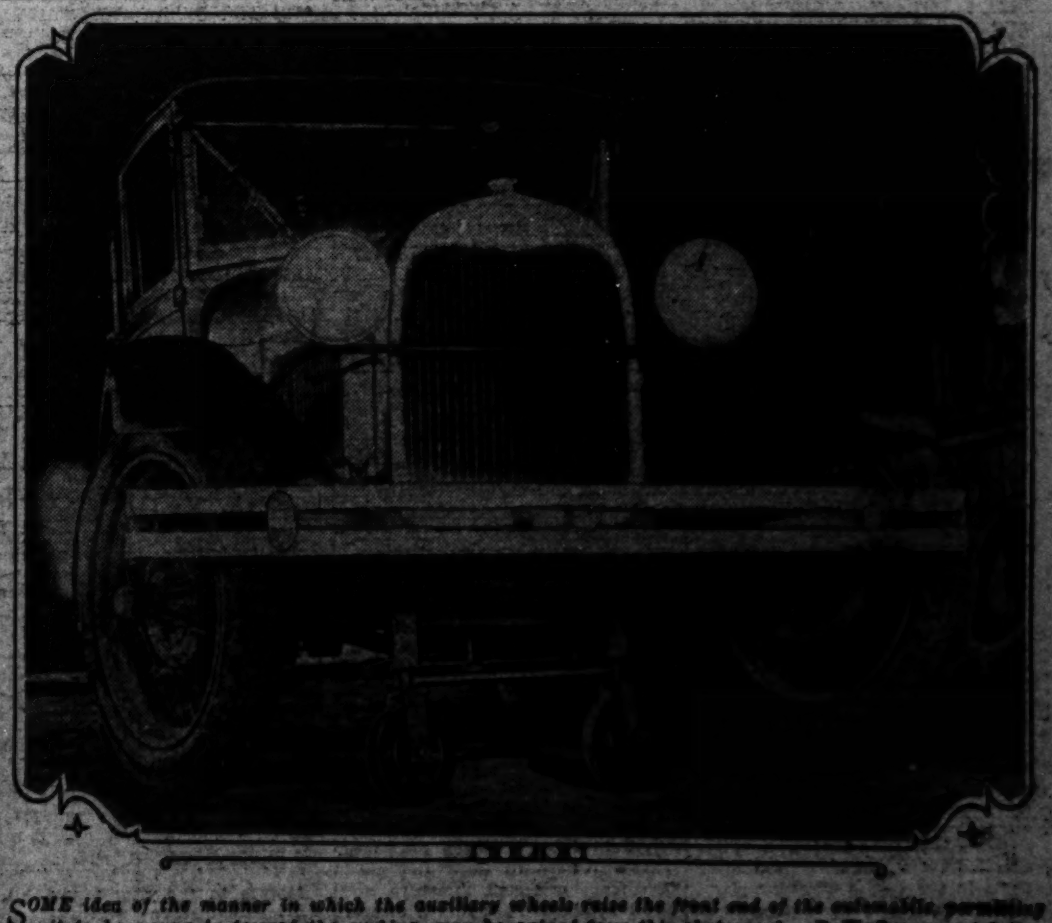
How the 'Fifth Wheel' Parking Device Operates



SOME idea of the manner in which the auxiliary wheels raise the front end of the automobile, permitting it to be swung to toward the curbing, may be gained from this photograph. R. W. Branson of Jefferson City, the inventor, says he has successfully demonstrated his device.

First Day of Motor Tour To Florida Is Described

St. Louis Woman Travels with Two Children and Puppy — Makes First Stop at Henderson, Ky., 250 Miles Distant — to Pass Through Tennessee on Second Day.

THE writer, a St. Louisan, has described her motor trip to Florida in a series of four articles. The first one, written at Henderson, Ky., and covering the first day of the journey, follows. The second will be published in this section next Sunday.

By HELEN KIRKSEY.

LIKE Ponce de Leon I am on my way to Florida to find the fountain of youth, only I have cylinders where he had sails, and I know the fountain is there. He was acting on mere gossip. Incidentally I want to be on hand to see what happens at Palm Beach and Miami to sunback dresses in this war between modes and manners. From the way I feel tonight, after the first day's run, I am sure that the very idea of the quest is rejuvenating. To anyone like you, who has not been down the Dixie Highway, it might seem that my thrills are in anticipation of the success of the search, but I have made the trip several times and I know that the going to Florida can be as interesting as Florida itself. With the first flurries of snow you know how everyone toys with the idea of perpetual sunshine and flowers—you are doing it yourself right now—and it takes only the winter resort number of the fashion magazines to make the palm [illegible], so you may as well prepare to surrender, and plan to motor down. I mean "gypsy" down—not like we "gypsy" east or north or west, where every driver that passes you going the same way incites you to show up his old bus, and you think you've just got to make Podunk by nine—but I mean drift through Dixie.

We left St. Louis this morning, the two children, Tom and Kay, and their dog, with me as the skipper. An early start on the first day always means getting up at dawn and rushing around until I am all out of tune for the trip, so we sailed away leisurely about 9 o'clock, and set our course eastward across Illinois for Vincennes, Ind. The road is paved and perfect, and it was many hours before our [illegible] enthusiasm began to wane. We sang lustily and at length—"John Brown's Body," done successfully, is good for miles and miles—we played road roulette by guessing at the last number of the next license plate we were to see. We tried even "hog calling" and in the great open spaces, and U. S. Route 50 through Illinois seemed a lot more picturesque than it really is. The prospect of crossing the Wabash River inspired another song, and we got to the end of the first verse and the old bridge we was in Vincennes. We didn't see "Alice"

Three New Nashes.

KENOSHA, Wis., Dec. 28. — Three new models of the "400" series for 1930 are announced by the Nash Motors Co. They are the five-passenger twin-ignition eight victoria, the single six roadster and the single six landaulet. Built on the long wheelbase, the victoria's rear seat offers limousine comfort for three passengers. Finished in ivory and ebony, the victoria adds a distinct note of stylish luxury to the line.

The new roadster is low, swift and graceful. It is built on the wheelbase of 114½ inches. The landaulet is big, roomy, impressive, distinguished.

All three are now in production here, it is stated.

Graham-Paige Glass.

ADOPTION of non-shattering glass in the windows, doors and windshields of all its cars, irrespective of price, is announced by the Graham-Paige Motors Corporation. The company is said to be the first to specify this type of glass as standard equipment in the medium and lower price classes.

The glass is of the laminated type, made up of two sheets of plate glass with a sheet of transparent flexible substance bonded between them to prevent the scattering of glass in the event it is broken. It is pointed out that there is no such thing as unbreakable glass. Laminated glass may be broken, but it does not scatter those sharp particles, pointed slivers and jagged pieces that cause painful, and often serious, injury, it is said.

Motor Bus Tax.

SPECIAL taxes imposed on common carrier motor busses in the United States during 1929 will exceed $25,000,000, an average of well over $500 each, according to a preliminary survey by the National Association of Motor Bus Operators, affiliated with the American Automobile Association.

This statement is based on the normal increase in both registration and taxation and takes into consideration the fact that 46,000 common carrier busses paid a special tax bill of some $22,000,000 in 1928, an average of slightly over $478 per bus.

Chrysler Breaks Record.

WITH the motor running constantly for 69 days, 2 hours and 3 minutes, a Chrysler "65" stock sedan has shattered all endurance records on the Avus Speedway track near Berlin by rolling up a total of 53,710 miles.

Details of this record—an accomplishment that has stirred European motor circles by its demonstration of the dependability and quality of American manufacture—have just reached the Chrysler Export Corporation. The long run which started on Sept. 25 was abruptly halted when the car turned over in a dense fog to avoid a collision. Although no serious damage was done, the Control Committee officially terminated the run the following day with the engine still running smoothly.

The Chrysler selected for this run was not new, already having approximately 4400 miles on the speedometer. It was built and assembled from standard production parts in the Berlin Chrysler plant, and the run was intended solely to prove that efficient transportation is available in cars of moderate price.

Plymouth's New Spark.

SEMI-AUTOMATIC spark advance has been adopted on the Plymouth car in spite of its higher cost, because Plymouth engineers feel that it will enable owners to take advantage of the performance that is designed into the car. It is useless to design a high-compression engine which is intended to obtain the maximum output from the fuel drawn into the combustion chamber, and then throw away the advantage of high compression by having the spark occur later than it should, they assert.

"Control of the spark should be in the hands of the driver," says H. E. Heath, Plymouth service manager. "Full automatic advance without any driver control, must necessarily be a compromise because no automatic system can be devised that will take care of all circumstances encountered by the driver."

Whippet on Long Run.

IN addition to the many impressive records established by the Whippet since its introduction three and one-half years ago, a cable from Sydney, Australia, announces a stock Whippet four has just completed a 43-day non-stop run, establishing a new world's endurance record for this Willys-Overland product.

In this run, the Whippet covered 15,030 miles with a fuel consumption of 31.6 miles per gallon. Oil consumption also was low, the cable stated.

Shutter Control.

TO avoid damage to radiator and engine, it is important to have the radiator shutter open at the proper temperature. Normally this will be anywhere from 120 to 140 degrees Fahrenheit.

If the shutter opens too soon, the engine will not warm up as it should and crankcase dilution will be increased. The choke will have to be used longer than it should be and quantities of raw gasoline will be drawn in, some of which will find its way down into the lubricating oil. The overrich mixture will also contribute to carbon formation.

Worse, however, is the shutter that opens too late. The shutter opens and the fan draws in an icy blast against the heated radiator and cylinder blocks. The sudden contraction of the metal might readily cause damage that will be costly to repair.

OUTSTANDING custom body designs mounted on standard Stutz and Blackhawk chassis will distinguish the Stutz and Blackhawk exhibit at the New York automobile show, announces Col. E. S. Gorrell, president of the Stutz Motor Car Co. These will include the finest coachwork of such companies as Weymann, LeBaron, Hibbard, Darrin, Derham, Brunn and Fleetwood, selected from a range of 46 body styles and imposed on chassis of 127½, 134½ and 145 inch wheelbase.

Walsh a Ford Dealer.

ANNOUNCEMENT is made of the appointment of the Walsh Motor Car Co. as an authorized Ford dealer, located at 5127-5133 Delmar boulevard. The company was organized by William D. Walsh in 1916 as a Ford dealer, withdrawing from business in 1925, at which time its franchise was taken over by the Bray-Hambuechen Motor Co. Walsh, of recent years, has been connected with the Missouri Portland Cement Co., severing his affiliation to reorganize the motor car company.

For Night Driving.

Motorists who use radiator glycerine antifreeze in their cooling systems find that it is often helpful to have a small bottle of the solution handy in the pocket of the car. Among the many uses found for the substance is that of making headlights more efficient during rainy weather. Each drop of water or particle of ice forming on the glass acts like a tiny lens, and the light rays are reflected in all directions. A few drops of glycerine applied to the headlight lens will help to keep the glass free from collected moisture and result in better light and a clearer view of the road.

Motor News From Detroit

By Fred Kingsbury.

DETROIT, Mich., Dec. 28.—With the arrival of Jan. 1, 1930, the full year's output of motor cars will have exercised 5,600,000 units, a new figure for the industry and a record that will be difficult to exceed, at least for the next year or two.

During the first 11 months of the year the total automobile production was 5,480,000 cars, a new high for 11 months. However, it is likely there will be a carrying over into the new year of quite a number of units. This is not serious, however, as it has been necessary to do this for practically every year since the motor car industry has been in existence.

A study of forthcoming conditions leads high executives of the industry to look for a replacement demand next year of 3,000,000 units and a new demand for about 2,000,000 cars, making a total of 5,000,000 for 1930.

Business leaders all over the world are keeping a close watch on the automotive industry due to the huge output of passenger cars and trucks, because the great activity during the first nine months of 1929 was responsible, in great measure, for the record breaking operations in the iron and steel industry. It is believed the trend of the automobile industry during the next month or so will indicate just what general business conditions are going to be.

All of the new lines of automobile are ready to be displayed at the New York Automobile Show. This will be the first time the general public has been given an opportunity to inspect them. Conspicuous on the list will be the new V-16, a new V-8 and seven or eight new straight eights. These will be brand new models from hood to spare tire.

With this great array of new cars, the automotive industry in Detroit is convinced that the public will readily respond to its offerings and that the various motor shows throughout the country will be the most interesting in the history of the industry.

There also will be a new four-cylinder car which will be displayed at a private showing for the trade in New York City. The manufacturers of this automobile claim for it that it will do 40 miles to the gallon of gasoline, run 1500 miles on a quart of oil, go 40,000 miles on a set of tires, run for a year on $55 for gas and oil. It will sell in the low price field.

Motors in the new automobiles are much more efficient and owners of these cars will be able to drive them at less cost, due to the latest developments in carburetion, lubrication and better metals. This has been proven over hundreds of thousands of miles of test driving when charts were kept showing performance and upkeep. These statements are not taken from what manufacturers say but were gleaned from study of charts, showing performance and upkeep.

Automobile men of the Detroit area speculating as to which industry—railroads or automobiles—have consumed the greatest amount of finished steel during the present year. In 1928 the automobile industry led but the percentage was very low. Increased sales of steel have been made to both industries during the present year, and it will be a close race.

Automobile parts manufacturers anticipate good business during 1930. Surveys made by this industry indicate there should be gains during 1930. Of course, many parts manufacturers have also entered the airplane parts manufacturing business in a large way and they are just beginning to reap benefits from the airplane replacement business.

The period of business depression in Detroit is at an end. Production of motor cars continues to gain at a rapid rate and employment figures are going up daily.

Motor manufacturers have not made any attempt to speed output of the new units but have been going slowly in order to be sure that everything is right before heavy production is attempted.

Some of the new cars are being shipped from Detroit this week, most of them going to the Pacific Coast states. The latter part of the week large shipments will start for points in the Eastern section of the United States.

Nearly all dealers in the country will be supplied with show cars immediately after the first of the year.

Penalize Motorists.

Legislation to penalize persons who operate motor vehicles after suspension of revocation of an operator's license was recommended recently by the Massachusetts State Department of Public Works. Under its recommendation, a person operating after suspension or revocation would be liable to a fine of $200 or imprisonment for 30 days for the first offense, and for subsequent offenses the maximum penalty would be imprisonment for one year.

Front-Drive Car Battles Through Huge Snow Drifts

C. E. Graves Drives Cord From Auburn, Ind., Fighting Fierce Blizzard.

C. E. "Buzz" Graves, head of the Auburn-Graves Motor Co., Inc., was returning to St. Louis from the Auburn factory at Auburn, Ind., in a new Cord front-drive car, when he was caught in the storm and blizzard which swept Illinois about 10 days ago. He spent the night of Tuesday, Dec. 17, at Effingham, Ill., and next morning, after phoning to his wife to meet him downtown for lunch, started out.

"Snow had fallen and the weather was getting much colder," Graves related. "We went along fine and got to Greenville, where we visited a friend. We put some anti-freeze on the windshield which was freezing so fast we could hardly keep in clear. Between Greenville and Highland, we came to a truck that had stalled and blocked a number of other cars. We made the mistake of trying to plow through the snowbank and pass the truck but as we had no chains, we got stalled, too. The snow kept getting deeper and the weather colder. Busses, trucks and passenger cars, stuck in the drifts were abandoned. Finally a farmer came along with a team and pulled us out. We drove into Highland and spent Wednesday night there, thinking that by morning the roads would be clear.

"But we found, on getting up, the roads were worse than ever. It was only 37 miles to St. Louis, and we wanted to get through, so we bought chains and put them on the front wheels. Even the police warned us against starting, but we disregarded the advice.

"We proceeded about two miles and came to the first big drift. Snow plows were having a hard time trying to clear a passage. It took us exactly an hour and a half to go less than five miles. Within a mile of St. Jacobs we hit an even deeper drift and had to buck the snow time and time again, backing up and plunging into it head on and with all the power applied.

"Finally we got through to St. Jacob and phoned the hotel in Highland not to save the room for us that night, as the manager said he would.

"It was a battle all the way into East St. Louis and we passed all kinds of vehicles that were hopelessly stalled."

Graves said that without his front-drive Cord he would never have gotten through. No other car maed it that day, he declared.

25,000 Stranded as Heavy Storm Sweeps Illinois Highways

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

BLOOMINGTON, Ill., Dec. 28.—More than 25,000 motorists were stranded on the highways of Illinois by the recent blizzard, which caused greater loss, actual suffering and annoyance than any previous storm since the concrete pavements were constructed.

The storm was widespread and blocked highways were reported in practically every county. The high winds created drifts that were impassable to all but the heaviest trucks, busses and tractors. Thousands abandoned their cars and sought shelter in farmhouses. Trains stopped along the highways and picked up many of the stranded or the suffering would have been much greater.

Many complaints were sent the State Highway Department relative to the manner in which the situation was met. Merchants who experienced loss in holiday receipts due to the inability of shoppers to break the blockade expressed the opinion that with more than $20,000,000 going into the State treasury annually in payment of vehicle licenses, some of this money might well be spent in purchasing equipment to clear the concrete when such storms occur.

Brackbill Appointed Truck Salesmanager Of Milstrand Motor

Milton B. Strauss, president of the Milstrand Motor Co., announces the appointment of C. H. Brackbill as salesmanager of the Dodge Brothers truck division of the Milstrand company, local distributers of Dodge Brothers motor vehicles.

C. H. Brackbill

Brackbill joined the local Dodge dealer organization in 1921, after having had many years of experience in Detroit, working through factories in different capacities, fitting himself for the position he now assumes.

Brackbill for the past two years has spent a great deal of his time contacting the larger fleet owners in St. Louis, and also has made a study of the transportation problems in and around this territory.

Upholstery to Match Slipper Ordered by Indian Potentate

One of the slippers of her highness the Maharini of Porbandar, has arrived in this country. Experts of two great industrial concerns are spending hours studying the delicate rose pink shade of the dainty bit of plush. When they have finished it will be matched exactly by the upholstery of a new car which is being built for her highness.

His highness, the Maharaja Sahib of Porbandar, who rules over one of the states which make up the great Bombay Province in India, told his royal consort that she might have a new car. She requested a Packard sedan limeousine and asked that it be made snowwhite in every detail except the upholstery which she wanted to be an exact duplicate of her favorite slippers in both color and material.

Through its distributer in Bombay and the Packard Export Corporation the Packard company received a formal order for the car with the painting and other specifications, except the upholstery. A paragraph had been inserted giving the information that upholstery specifications would be forthcoming later.

The mails from India brought the missing details of the order in the form of as dainty a slipper as ever graced feminine foot. Attached was a laconic note which read simply: "Upholstery for car ordered must exactly match attached slipper."

Color experts went to work immediately with fabric manufacturers in an effort to hit upon the material which would exactly match. One piece was found which had all the sheen, the exact delicate pink and the changing shadows and lights in the long nap of the cloth. The weave, however, was slightly different. In another the shade of pink was slightly deeper although the material was an exact duplicate.

Nowhere after days of search could there be found a material which satisfied the Packard experts. One of the big textile mills is weaving the cloth in a special loom as the final solution.

The finished car is to be shipped soon and with it will go the slipper.

Hints for Winter Drivers

A MARKED decrease in the reading of the oil pressure gauge in cold weather is a sure sign of excessive dilution of the oil. Always read the gauge, however, after the engine is thoroughly warmed up.

When changing a tire in winter, where the roads are slippery, always block the wheels before jacking up the car. This will be a safeguard against having the wheels slip.

If the choke mechanism is very stiff, so that it is difficult to pull out, there is good reason to be suspicious that it does not push in fully, a condition that may account for excessive consumption of gas.

Many drivers who realize that quick starting gas and avoidance of too many short runs with the car are effective in reducing the amount of crankcase dilution often forget that keeping the engine as warm as possible also helps keep diluent out of the crankcase.

It injures the clutch plates to stop so suddenly as to stall the engine.

Attaching chains to the spare after a puncture has forced a change of tires can be avoided by carrying the spare with chains already attached throughout the winter months.

When a valve is sticking it will help to run in second until the engine warms up, but the valve will pound down sooner if the driver gets into high gear as soon as possible.

Look out for the driver who seems to be leaning forward in the driving compartment. He's probably reaching for the hand brake, knowing that the service brakes are not equal to the demands upon them.

When the driving wheels have been spinning around in snow, the tire treads usually fill up so as to make them smooth and reduce traction to the vanishing point. It is a good plan in such cases to scrape the snow from the grooves and depressions in the tread.

The congealed lubricant that causes the transmission gears to whine a little after the car has been standing out in the cold, will warm up and thin out a little as the engine heats up. Heat from the engine blows back over the gearcase.

Plans Long Road.

Fred Shepherd, engineer for the Borough of Queens, in New York City, has conceived a plan for the construction of a highway 200 feet wide from the Atlantic Coast in Maine to the Pacific Coast in the State of Washington. The project would cost $900,000,000.

Accidents Increase.

As the result of a wave of accidents in Massachusetts, a new traffic code provides penalties not exceeding $20 for each offense. Fatalities in Bay State run 12 per cent ahead of last year.

I. J. Reuter.

Eddins for four and one-half years was vice president and general sales manager of Olds. He has been affiliated with General Motors since 1914, his association including a period with the Chevrolet division.

Reuter was appointed general Manager of the Olds Motor Works in 1925 and shortly afterwards was elected president. Prior to going with Olds, Reuter had been general manager of the Remy Electric Co., another General Motors division. During his management of the Olds company sales have increased more than 155 per cent from 1925 to 1929, and expansion has been rapid.

D. S. Eddins.

J. J. Carter, Olds factory manager, will accompany Reuter to Germany.

J. T. Collins was named to succeed Eddins as general sales manager. Collins, too, has been with General Motors since 1914, in a sales capacity.

New Erskine Will Be Introduced at New York Display

The official introduction of Studebaker's "dynamic" new Erskine will take place at the New York automobile show. One of the features of the new Erskine is that it has more power per pound of weight than any other car under $1000, engineers say.

Many improvements will be found on the Erskine, including a Burgess acoustic muffler which absorbs sound waves yet offers little or no resistance to the passage of exhaust gases. Loss of power, due to back pressure, is thus eliminated. The walls of the acoustic muffler are lined with steel wool which makes unnecessary the use of baffle plates found in the conventional muffler. Effective horsepower in the new Erskine is increased by the use of the improved muffler.

Another outstanding feature of the new car is the Lanchester vibration damper on the heavy drop-forged crankshaft. This feature of engine design is of European origin, and is seldom found on any but the highest-priced cars. It subdues motor vibration and contributes to smoothness. Smoothness is further enhanced by the engine being mounted in live rubber to minimize vibration to the body and frame.

Try to Measure Fatigue Caused By Automobiles

"Wabble Meter" Designed to Determine Effect on Nervous System.

Using the human body as a measuring stick, the Society of Automotive Engineers is attempting to measure the fatigue caused by an automobile ride and to predict therefrom the possible effects of the various types of spring suspension, shock absorber and other comfort-giving components. The experiments, which are being conducted by Dr. Fred A. Moss, head of the department of psychology of George Washington University, have been in progress, under the society's direction, for some time, but it is only recently that the results achieved have been, in the Doctor's opinion, worthy of continued study.

According to Dr. Moss, the changes in the human body are a good index of relative comfort. In other words, if the normal reactions are known before a test, in the case of any one individual or group of individuals, similar measurements made at the end of, say, 300 miles should show an appreciable difference. This difference, he claims, is a direct measure of comfort. He measures this in two ways, first, physical fatigue arrived at by ascertaining the amount of chemical change which has taken place in the body during a given period. In medical terms this is designated as a change in metabolism and measured by the oxygen content or volume of oyxgen required before and after the test.

Physical fatigue is also measured by determining the decrease in the carbon dioxide combining power of the blood and also by the increase in the number of white cells which increase as fatigue increases.

Nervous fatigue is measured in four ways. First, by causing the subject to stand on a "wabble meter" which measures the body sway or steadiness. Readings are taken both before and after the test, the theory being that steadiness decreases as fatigue increases. Dr. Dickinson of the Bureau of Standards has also devised another tubular form of steadiness indicator which has been found to give reasonably good results, also. The third method is a system of number checking, a thousand figures printed on a sheet are placed before the subject and it is ascertained how fast and how many of a particular figure, five for example, will be checked in a minute. In a case of mental fatigue there is a decrease in the ability of the subject to maintain his pre-test average. A fourth method of determining nervous condition is mental multiplication, the rate at which it can be done, before and after the ride.

In the main it may be said that all of these tests are in the process of being improved but enough information has already been obtained from the research experiments conducted by the Society of Automotive Engineers to warrant extensive work along this line. To the automobile manufacturer who is interested in increasing the comfort and luxury of his product these tests are expected to supply data of considerable value.

Predicts Radio Will Be Standard Auto Equipment in 5 Years

Installation Now Optional on Cars Selling at as Low as $625.

Within five years a majority of motor cars will be equipped with radio sets.

This prediction, coming from one of the foremost manufacturers of automobiles in connection with an announcement that hereafter his cars would be so equipped if the purchaser desired, has caused considerable speculation both within and without the industry. Of further interest is the fact that the auto-radio is invading lower-price realms.

The first cars to introduce this feature, as optional equipment, of course, were in the upper price classes. The break in the line came last summer when the maker of cars ranging from $1000 to $1800 announced that his company would install a radio set for any buyers who wished it. With the latest announcement, a radio set as optional equipment becomes available to buyers of cars priced as low as $625 and ranging up to approximately $3000.

In predicting that a majority of cars eventually will be radio equipped, the manufacturer means the majority of makes of cars and not of the total number of cars sold.

Where price is the largest factor governing both the seller's and buyer's course of action, it is questioned that radio equipment will become especially significant as an added feature. However, this by no means, is true in all quarters of the industry. Some think that even in the lowest price tiers the company which offers radio set equipment will find a surprisingly large number of buyers.

Radio for motor cars, in its present state, is only approximately a year old. In the time intervening since the introduction of a receiver that could be built into an automobile and which would operate without interference by the engine ignition system, five manufacturers have adopted it as a special feature.

two sets of automobile headlights meeting in passing on the roadway is a great menace for the pedestrian caught in between, they urge that officials during 1930 at least start the movement with the construction of footwalks even if on only one side of highways in fairly well inhabited districts. It is believed that the encouragement thus given to the added safety and convenience of pedestrians will demonstrate its practicability.

Many people who enjoy walking are afraid to venture upon the highways in this age of congested auto traffic. Mrs. Warren said that she "has not dared set foot upon public highway, because there is no sidewalk provision for use of the pedestrian, and walking even in broad daylight is so unsafe that he or she should not try it who is not prepared to jump into the grass and brush at the edges of the roadway every time a speed-mad "honk-honk" car is about to pass."

Mr. Warren calls attention to the fact that in Massachusetts and doubtless in some other states existing laws inhibit action to remove the peril:

"In July, 1928, this general lack of sidewalk provision was forcefully brought to the attention of William F. Williams, then Commissioner of Public Works, in charge of all Massachusetts highways. He replied:

" 'The reason for this situation is a requirement of the law, which specifically states that the department shall construct and maintain only such portion of the State highway as lies between lines of the sidewalk nearest to the center of the way. This necessity grows more imperative as the number of automobiles increases. It certainly is a serious matter, and I will see if there is anything further we can do to improve the situation.

" 'Presumably in many if not most cases, the town budgets are not and can hardly be made sufficient to construct and maintain sidewalks on the highways appropriated by the State for the use of automobilists. Why should the towns be put to this expense of building a sidewalk to meet State highway traffic conditions?' "

In nearly all other states there are similar difficulties to overcome, but those who are endeavoring to call attention to need of better protection for pedestrians, plan to meet obstacles successfully and initiate the improvements as soon as possible

Venerable 1910 Model Displayed By Dealer Here

There is a vast amount of difference between the model 14-B Buick sold around Christmas time in 1910 and the sleek-looking 1930 buicks that will be delivered as Christmas presents this year.

The South Side Buick Auto Co., 3654 South Grand boulevard, is showing one of these venerable Buicks at their place of business.

This car was originally a "runabout," the popular forerunner of the present-day roadster. At some time, a past owner fitted the car with an additional seat—rather different from the present-day rumble seat.

European Builders Jealous of Export Gains From America

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 28.—Combined action on the part of European motor car manufacturers to limit the progress of American-made automobiles in export markets, rumblings of which are heard from time to time in official and unofficial circles, are not causing deep concern here. Virtually every European motor car display has found continental manufacturers with their heads together discussing the tide of popularity of American cars and what may be done to combat it.

Among qualified observers here it is felt that all hope of an international agreement to limit American operations in the foreign market has been abandoned abroad. As a mater of fact, there is reported to be decided doubt that even the slightest obstacle can be put in the path of American penetration.

The explanation offered is a purely economic one that American car makers are offering values with which others have difficulty in competing and that until competition is recognized to revolve entirely about this factor, car exports from the United States will continue to expand. The point becomes doubly interesting when it is realized that the American industry confidently counts upon disposing of 1,000,000 cars abroad in 1930.

The clearance of the front axle is not affected by the device, which is bolted to the axle from the rear and is held in a position at an equal distance from the ground.

The wheels are operated from the dash by a cable or chain, the chain having been adopted by Branson as being the more practical.

A further advantage cited by Branson is that in changing front tires the fifth wheel may be dropped, the front end of the car raised and the tire changed without recourse to a jack.

Branson has applied for a patent and, he says, has been assured that one will be issued.

With his son, C. Dart Branson, he has utilized his spare moments for three years working on the invention.

Changes in Rules Revive Interest In 500-Mile Race

To Date 50 Persons Have Said They Will Enter Cars; 40 Can Start.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Dec. 28.—Changes in rules for the 500-mile race at the Speedway here next May have caused a general revival in the sport that each year draws the largest crowd of spectators in America.

With two men riding each car instead of one; with an elasticity of requirements which will bring a wide variety of shapes, sizes and models to the starting line, more cars already are being built for the race than can be permitted to start.

The Speedway management is responsible for the statement that no less than 50 race enthusiasts have announced that they have cars under construction for next May's classic.

Only 40 cars are permitted to start the 500-mile race, a car for each 330 feet of the two and one-half-mile brick and concrete oval, according to the rules of the American Automobile Association, the governing body of the speed sport under which the Indianapolis race is conducted.

This means that the Indianapolis plant will be infested with embryo speed champions from the first day of spring until the day of the race, hopeful engineers who will be evolving mechanical contrivances designed to break all existing records.

Need Lubricating.

Transmission locks occasionally stick fast. It is likely to be a little grease that has work up from the transmission. A light oil is one remedy.

President of China Uses Armored Car When Taking Field

Specially Equipped Packard Sedan Is Bullet Proof; Carries Machine Gunners.

When President Chiang Kai-Shek of China takes the field in the revolution which has broken out in his country, he travels in a special Packard sedan recently delivered to him.

The car is made with heavy armor plate and bullet proof glass and provisions are made for armed guards on the running boards and in special seats placed at the back.

Two soldiers stand on the running boards, holding themselves in place with handles fastened to the roof. Each is provided with a sub-machine gun. Seats for riflemen are fastened to each side of the frame of the car at the rear. Stop, backing and rear warning lights together with the rear license plate bracket were moved to a point just under the rear window to make room for the seat on the left side.

His present car is one of several Packards which have been bought by President Kai-Shek. When his first was delivered at Nanking it was found that there was no street in the city wide enough to let a motor car pass. The army was pressed into service and a wide street was cut across the city to President Kai-Shek's home, houses, business buildings and everything else in the way being torn down.

Coats for Motoring

IT REALLY doesn't make a bit of difference any more what the weather chances to be just so it isn't 40 below zero and you have suitable clothes. For those of you who persist in riding about the country during the winter months in an open car, I would suggest a fur lined coat or a heavy fur coat —and you know the French wear even little pink woolen things under their clothes to give additional warmth. The coat at the left has a smart stand-up collar of dark grey krimmer and there is a band of it around the edge of the cape. The cape itself buttton down the front and reaches just to the elbows, giving a very jaunty and military look to the coat. The material is bright blue woolen with a diagonal weave. The figure perched on the back of the car is wearing one of those wooly coats that look like beaver but really aren't. I simply love them and they are so becoming to the younger generation. It has a wide turned up collar and deep cuffs. It is lined with bright green flannel to match the hat and there is a wide leather belt and buttons.

GRAHAM PAIGE

The Grahams will offer motor car buyers complete protection of shatter-proof plate glass

On and after January 1, 1930, all cars built by the three Graham brothers will be advanced in price, but at the same time motor car buyers will be offered the complete protection of shatter-proof laminated plate glass, in windows and doors as well as windshields.

The motor car industry and the motor car buying public have long recognized the danger of glass that will shatter and splinter.

It is admitted that, in due time, all motor cars must offer the complete protection of shatter-proof safety glass.

Heretofore, the larger motoring public, by force of circumstances, has had to shut its eyes to the constant hazard and danger of broken and flying glass.

Before this, shatter-proof glass could only be had as extra equipment at almost prohibitive cost for the individual car; or in cars of the highest price ranges.

Now, the Grahams have solved the problem of cost, with the cooperation of their distributors and dealers.

The shatter-proof safety plate glass to be used in all cars built by the Grahams is proof against shattering under impact, and while it may be broken by shock or the force of a flying missile, it will not shoot dangerous sharp particles and pointed slivers through the interior of the car.

It joins the clear vision and the strength of high quality plate glass to the toughness of the non-brittle bonding sheet between the two plates of glass, and is one of the most perfect examples of permanent lamination which the glass industry has been able to evolve.

The Grahams and their distributors and dealers are happy to be able to offer to the public an invaluable protection which will probably not be generally available for many months to come.

Lois Bennett Signed for New Philco Programs

Soprano to Have Chief Roles in Series Over Columbia Chain Thursday Nights.

There will be a new feminine "lead" in the cast when the new Philco series over the Columbian chain, supplanting the Philco Theater of Memories, goes on the air at 9 o'clock Thursday nights, beginning Jan. 9.

Lois Bennett has been engaged to sing the principal roles, which hitherto have been taken in Philco broadcasts by Jessica Dragonette. John Barclay, a baritone soloist for the Columbia chain and widely known because of appearances with the leading symphony orchestras, is to sing with her in the first of the new broadcasts, which will feature a radio version of Jerome Kern's one-act opera, "Lamplight." Dan Gridley, tenor, one of the more popular Columbia chain singers, will sing opposite Miss Bennett in "Lamplight." William Artz, conductor of the Waldorf-Astoria rose room orchestra, and so known to most listeners, will direct the Philco orchestra. Henry M. Neely will continue as "The Old Stager."

Miss Bennett for two years and a half has been starred in the Winthrop Ames revivals of Gilbert and Sullivan operettas. She was born in Houston, Tex., and has been singing in public since she was 5 years old. She made her real debut with the Brahms Quartet, and soon thereafter was signed by Florenz Ziegfeld. Later she signed a long-term contract with Winthrop Ames, which terminated only last June.

Kern wrote his little opera for a Lambs Club gambol several years ago. The music, said to be often exquisite, is virtually unknown to the public.

Symphony Concert Over WLW Tonight

WBBM reports that Pat Flanagan, its sports editor, was "slugged" during the fight between Art (the Great) Shires and George Trafton when he asked ringside spectators to tone down their language. One spectator hit Flanagan so hard in the left eye that a bone was broken and the announcer was unable to broadcast for several days. The owners of WBBM insisted that Flanagan swear out a warrant for his assailant's arrest, on the ground that he was only doing his manifest duty in trying to prevent foul language from going out on the air.

Sunday at Seth Parker's To Be Religious Program

a hearing. Luck was with him, for it happened that there was a vacant half hour at that station that very evening, and nothing yet in sight with which to fill it. Accordingly, the little troup was ushered into the studio before the microphone; Lord took his stand before them, and they went on the air. Nobody told Lord what to do; he wasn't even sure just how close he was supposed to get to the microphone.

However, Lord called upon his own Yankee resourcefulness and the program went through without a slip. When the papers came out next day, even the harshest of critics said that this new feature on the little station was worthy of note.

Then the NBC Takes Notice.

Thereafter the program ran every week, and after a time was taken to a larger station. Its popularity grew by leaps and bounds, and after a while Lord decided that he would send the scripts to distant stations, tell them how to put the programs on and let them present it. He started charging for this service, a little at first, more later on. Soon Seth Parker's Old Fashioned Singing School was being heard in every part of the country, and on every station it was called an outstanding program.

Encouraged by this success, Lord gave up his job in the candy factory, took what little money he had saved and set up an office in New York, where he did nothing but write about Seth and the other good folk of Jonesport.

It was not long before NBC heard of the way Seth Parker's popularity was growing, and asked Lord for the rights to the Singing School. Lord replied that while he had no contracts with anyone, he felt under moral obligations to the small stations which were using his scripts, as they had given him his start.

But he told the NBC that he had in mind another program to be called "Sunday at Seth Parker's," in which the old hymns would be sung and the friendly spirit of the folks of Jonesport displayed. He explained his idea in detail, and the NBC officials expressed themselves as convinced of its merit, but they seemed a bit dubious as to just how such a program would be received. It was the general opinion that to present a religious program with an element of humor in it might be a rather dangerous thing.

However, a trial program was agreed upon to be presented over WEAF and associated stations—and "Sunday at Seth Parker's" has been going over the NBC network ever since, to the accompaniment of glowing praise from members of all sects and creeds, in fact.

Says Old Songs Are the Best.

Lord's troupe is comprised of 11 members. Three or four of them have come up with him from the original station. They were carefully chosen and are well suited to their roles, making no attempt to burlesque their parts, but presenting them simply and naturally. Lord believes that the old songs are the best songs.

"Haven't you ever noticed," he asks, "that no matter how beautiful a song may be, you can't enjoy it to the full the first time you hear it? Or even the second and third times? Stop and think a moment. Aren't your favorite songs old songs? And the things that make those songs dear to us are the memories connected with them—memories of the places where we heard them sung and of the people who sang them."

Seth Parker is not a religious character in the ordinary sense of that term, according to Lord. He is just a man who loves his God and his neighbor.

As an example, in one program Lizzie asks "Who are Christians?"

Seth Parker replies: "Well, Lizzie, if a feller got up in the morning with neuralgia in the back and rheumatiz in the legs and the biscuits didn't sot well on his stomach, and it wuz rainin', and he had to climb in under the hencoop and mosquitoes was bitin' him, an I come along and seen his feet stickin' out and I say, 'Howdy, Mister!' and if he sings out, 'Howdy! Nice day, ain't it? Then I wouldn't have to see the rest of him to know he was a Christian. An' if he was to ask me to go to church with him next day I'd go, and I wouldn't ask what species he belonged to, neither."

Phillips H. Lord is a refutation of the old belief that ministers sons always turn their backs upon religion. His father is a minister in Meriden, Conn. But it is perhaps to his grandfather that Lord owes much of his sense of drama, as well as other qualities valuable to him in his portrayal of the citizens of Jonesport. In fact, he rather intimated that, although he feels that Seth is himself, he patterns many of Seth's quaint expressions and much of his philosophy after memories of his grandfather, who died some eight years ago.

There is still a faint Yankee twang in Lord's own voice. It seems to go with Lord's personality; with the direct gaze from his hazel eyes with his quiet and sincere manner and the air of unselfconsciousness which is one of his chief attractions. The longer one talks with him the more one comes to realize that Phillips H. Lord is right in his assertion that he himself is Seth Parker. He really is.

First Broadcast in New Series Scheduled for 9 O'Clock Tomorrow Night.

The Whittal Anglo-Persians orchestra is to return to KSD at 9 o'clock tomorrow night after a long period of broadcasting over WJZ and other stations in the NBC Blue network. In addition to KSD, the following Midwest stations are scheduled to carry this program: WWJ, WSAI, WOC, WOW and WDAF.

This program series, one of the oldest in radio, is now in its fifth year on the air. In the early days of chain programs it was one of KSD'S most popular features. It will continue to feature a large orchestra directed by Louis Katzman. But the continuity will be changed.

A "Master Weaver" will tell of the sights as he is carried on the mythical magic carpet over the lands of the world. Each program will be devoted to a country, and Katzman will arrange a musical setting.

In the first of the new programs the Anglo-Persians will float over Worcester, Mass., and vicinity. The Master Weaver will point out the grounds where Prof. Goddard is building a rocket destined for an attempted trip to Mars, Lake Quinsigomond where the early Harvard-Yale boat races were held, and the scene of the Worcester music festivals which have heard the voice of Jenny Lind and many other famous artists.

KYW Testing 50,000 Watt Radio Station

Power Being Held to 3500 to 5000 Watts in Trials After Midnight.

The new 50,000-watt transmitter that has been erected near Chicago for KYW is being used experimentally mornings, beginning about midnight. However, its old 10,000-watt transmitter on the Congress Hotel in Chicago is being used for its regular broadcasting. KYW is on 1020 kilocycles.

The superpower transmitter is being held down to 3500 to 5000 watts, as the station is licensed to use only 10,000, for all that the new plant has been so constructed that it can be stepped up to at least 50,000 watts.

Regular broadcasting with the new transmitter, which is located 22 miles west and five miles north of Chicago, has been tentatively scheduled to begin Jan. 17.

The operator has complete control of the new plant. A push button puts into operation a water cooling system, an enormous filament generator, bias machines for grid bias supply to many types and sizes of tubes and two rectifier systems.

From the time this push button is touched off until the station is closed, a red light glows brightly on the panel, indicating that the 400,000-watt capacity three-phase, full wave rectifier, which makes use of the new type of hot cathode mercury vapor tubes, is doing its work of supplying plate voltage to the 50,000-watt stage.

What's New In Radio Industry

Majestic Distributers Reported to Have Ordered 1,300,000 Sets for 1930—Grigsby-Grunow Co. to Make Refrigerator—Capt. Sparks Notes That Radio in a Few Years Has Progressed as Far as Motor Cars Did in Nearly 20—Crosley Says Home Television Is Far Distant—General Motors Receivers for Autos Use Two Shield Grid Tubes.

ORDERS for 1,300,000 Majestic receivers in 1930 have been received from distributers by the Grigsby-Grunow Co., according to the Chicago Daily News. When the company held a four-day convention of its jobbers and district representatives recently, says the News, attention by the public was avoided while the distributers piled up a record total of orders for sets.

"When we resume operations on Dec. 26," William C. Grunow, vice president of the company, is quoted as saying, "we will start manufacturing 4000 sets a day. We estimate our business for the fiscal year ending May 31 will reach approximately $70,000,000.

"After a thorough survey extending over many months, the Grigsby-Grunow Co., early in the year, will begin the manufacture of an electric refrigerator. I think there is an almost unlimited field for a refrigerator which can be sold at such a price that the average home owner can afford to pay."

Details of General Motors Sets for Motor Cars.

Two shield grid stages, a 112 detector stage and two resistance coupled audio stages with a 27 type and a 112 type output tube are used in the General Motors radio receiver for automobiles. The set uses three B batteries, three C batteries and A current from the car battery. The speaker is of the magnetic type. The controls are on the dash.

An automatic volume control solves the problem of increased or decreased strength of reception as a car approaches or recedes from the station tuned in.

Interference from the car's engine and electric system is prevented by the use of condensers around the starter and generator and resistance units in each high tension lead, including leads to coil and spark plugs.

The Fuchs Appliance Co., distributer, is advised that the General Motors automobile receivers are now being made in the Day-Fan plant at Dayton, O., and are available for two of the more expensive makes of General Motors cars.

Inside Aerial Developed by St. Louisans.

A new aerial for inside installations, called the "Stiktape," is being made and marketed by Sampson Industries, Inc., organized by Julian and Jack Sampson of Sampson Brothers, well-known radio dealers in St. Louis. The aerial comes in a roll. It consists of a heavy film of alloy which is noncorrosive and very sensitive to radio waves. The back of the film tape is coated with adhesive rubber so that it can be strung along a wall or ceiling or on molding. It can be hidden behind picture-moulding or under a carpet or rug.

"ONE of the wonders of the radio industry, often lost to sight when we talk of the wonders of reception, is that it took radio only a few years to reach the point of trouble-free mechanical development that required nearly 20 years in the automotive industry," said Capt. William Sparks, president of the Sparton Radio organization, in a recent talk to distributers.

"Turn back to 1921 and '22. How often were we invited to the home of a friend to hear his new 'wireless' and how often did we arrive to find 'something wrong, I'll have to take it apart again.' It was like taking a ride in one of the first automobiles. Maybe we rode back and maybe we walked.

"Today you turn on your radio just as confidently as you do your electric light, and it is just as certain to respond. It wasn't until along about 1920 that the automobile reached this point of certainty. Even at that time many persons were still 'jacking up' their cars for the winter.

"But the nearer to perfection performance has become in both radio and the automobile, the more important it is that what little service is required be given instantly and intelligently. Reception must not be interrupted—it has become too much a part of our lives."

Crosley Sees No Prospect Soon of Home Television.

There is no prospect that television can supercede radio, says Powel Crosley Jr., president of the Crosley Radio Corporation.

"A few persons who are ready to discard their radio receivers and start seeing pictures in the home would seem to be a bit previous," Crosley remarks. "Until further discoveries are made, there is no indication that television for the home will be commercially possible. When it does come, if it comes by radio, it will be over a second and separate receiver, probably a short wave instrument."

Non-Regenerative Short-Wave Set Developed.

A short-wave receiver with non-regenerative detector has been developed by the engineering staff of the Jenkins Television Corporation, Jersey City, for radiovision. It is A. C. type, and has one stage of tuned screen-grid r. f. amplification, followed by a band pass filter. This feeds a 27-type non-regenerative power detector, which, in turn, feeds a two-stage resistance-coupled amplifier with 224 screen-grid tubes. The final stage is a 45-type tube. Its range is 100 to 150 meters, or covering television wave length assignments. Due to a special resistance network in the audio-frequency amplifier, it is said to amplify uniformly over a range of 15 to 30,000 cycles. The receiver is intentionally less sensitive than is usually the case, to reduce the background noise to a minimum.

Ceco to Develop Circuits as Well as Make Tubes.

Ernest Kauer, president of the Ceco Manufacturing Co., Providence, R. I., announces that work is to start immediately on a research equipment installation on an entire floor of a new four-story building immediately adjacent to the tube-production plant. An expenditure of $200,000 is scheduled. "We are going a step beyond any research hitherto followed by any radio enterprise which limits its production activities to tube-manufacture," Kauer said. "We not only intend to develop new tube capabilities; we also will apply them, working out efficient circuits for their use." Kauer said that Ceco had no intention of going into set manufacturing.

At St. Louis Airfields

THE endurance flight record of 420 hours, 21 minutes established by Dale Jackson and Forrest O'Brine in the St. Louis Robin is among the outstanding aeronautical achievements of 1929.

The endurance feat is listed along with the new speed record of 357 miles an hour, set by Squadron Leader Orlebar of the British Air Force, the cross-continent flights of Capt. Hawks, and other notable achievements. The endurance record is so far beyond previous records that it should stand for some time.

$3,249,000 Worth of Robins.

The Curtiss-Robertson Airplane Manufacturing Co. produced 562 Robin planes valued at $3,249,000 during 1929.

Production was about equally divided between ships with OX engines and those with Challenger and Wright engines. Altogether 286 Challenger and Wright engined Robins, selling at $7500 each, were built. The OX-engined Robins, the retail price of which is $4000, numbered 276. Of the total number of planes produced, 516 were delivered to distributors or individuals.

In addition to the standard Robin, the Curtiss-Robertson Co. will produce a de luxe Robin and a four-place Robin during 1930. The de luxe ship is a refined standard model, while the four-place plane has two sets of side-by-side seats, with dual control and automatic starter. The four-place ship is wider than the standard model and affords more comfort and visibility to pilot and passengers. The plane will sell at $8250 retail.

Christmas Dinner for Students.

More than 150 students of Parks Air College who were unable to go to their homes for the holidays, were entertained at dinner Christmas day by Oliver L. Parks, general manager of the flying school. The regulation turkey and accessories were served and a St. Louis orchestra supplied dance music and Christmas tunes.

Many students of the Universal Flying School took advantage of the holiday rates over Universal Airlines to go to their homes. Those who remained at Lambert-St. Louis Field ate their Christmas dinner at the students' club.

At the Von Hoffmann School classes were suspended for three days and those students qualified to do so were permitted to make pleasure flights. The holidays did not interrupt enrollments, however, four students registering the day after Christmas and two on Friday.

Testing Runway Surfaces.

The experimental runway at Lambert-St. Louis Field, constructed of various mixtures of oil, rock and soil, has withstood the rigors of snow and frost to date. The runway was laid in six strips and the section giving the best wear will be adopted permanently.

Peter J. Brady, chairman of the New York City Airport Commission, who stopped at Lambert Field Thursday en route to California with Lieut. James Doolittle, requested information concerning the experimental trip, stating that runway surfacing is still a problem in airport construction.

Ralph Damon Promoted.

Ralph Damon, production manager for the Curtiss-Robertson Airplane Manufacturing Co., since the building of Robin planes was started here 18 months ago, has been appointed assistant to J. A. B. Smith, executive vice president of the Curtiss-Wright Corporation, with headquarters at New York. Damon will take over his new duties Jan. 2.

By Plane for Railway Fare.

Following in part the lead of Southwest Air Fast Express, the Universal Aviation Corporation Thursday announced a commercial travelers' rate over its lines at the cost of railroad transportation with Pullman.

The special rate is available to traveling salesmen and other business representatives, who may buy scrip books containing $250 worth of mileage. The rate was established, according to Halsey Dunwoody, executive vice president of Universal, to meet a demand by commercial travelers for a lower fare. The reduced fare is not available to the public generally, as is the case with Southwest Air Fast Express, which announced a rate of five cents a mile effective Jan. 1.

For an Airmen's Union.

"Red" Jackson, endurance flight champion, and L. H. Atkinson, formerly with Universal Airlines, are attempting to form a union of pilots, mechanics, and aircraft workers, chartered under the American Federation of Labor.

A circular letter has been sent to 140,000 persons in the aviation industry seeking approval of the proposal, and an organization meeting will be held here next month, Jackson said. Several employers are not favorably disposed toward the project, saying that in many instances collective bargaining with regard to wages would be unfair to individuals.

Lindbergh to Stop Here.

Col. Lindbergh is scheduled to visit St. Louis briefly tomorrow or Tuesday. He is making a tour of inspection of the T. A. T. route in his capacity as chairman of the Technical Committee of the air line.

Further Demonstration Tour.

Jack McMillan, flying representative of the St. Louis Aircraft Corporation, returned to Lambert-St. Louis Field last week following a demonstration tour through Missouri, Kansas and Oklahoma in a Cardinal monoplane. McMillan reports bright prospects for airplane sales in the territory visited and made contract with prospective Cardinal dealers.

Peruvian Student at Parks.

Edward Brandes of Huancayo, Peru, was among the students enrolled at Parks Air College Christmas week.

Air Ticket Office.

Southwest Air Fast Express has opened a city ticket office on the ground floor of Hotel Jefferson. The company is anticipating a volume of business with the inauguration of the five-cent-a-mile passenger rate next Wednesday.

Flies to California.

Carl Batts, manager of the local unit of the Curtiss-Wright Flying Service, departed over the T. A. T. route Monday to spend Christmas with relatives in California. Maj. C. Ray Wassall is temporarily in charge of Curtiss-Wright activities during Batts' absence.

Skiplane to Be Tested.

A Robin fitted with skis for test flights at Lambert-St. Louis Field during the recent snow, but the snow turned to slush before the ship was ready. Maj. Robertson is looking forward to another snow storm, having been informed by Canadian flyers that landing and taking off with skis is great sport.

Visitors at Lambert Field.

Visitors to Lambert-St. Louis Field during the week included: Peter J. Brady, chairman of the New York City Airport Commission, flying with Lieut. James Doolittle; V. S. MacLaren, Newark, N. J.; A. C. Brown, Atlanta, Ga.; A. L. Mayer, Glenview, Ill.; Erik Hofman, Indianapolis, Ind.; R. H. Lees Jr., Kansas City, Mo.; Martin Leedener, Los Angeles, Cal.; George Moore, Wessington Springs, S. D.; T. Beal Pays a Visit.

Billy Beal, a former instructor at Parks Air College, was a visitor at Parks Airport on Christmas eve, flying from Detroit in a Lockheed-Vega monoplane.

Spot Landing Contest.

Advanced students of the Universal Flying School have been holding spot landing contests at Lambert Field. The pilot landing his plane closest to a given mark wins.

Dinner for W. A. Mankey.

W. A. Mankey, recently promoted from chief engineer for the Ryan Aircraft Corporation, to the main engineering office of the Detroit Aircraft Corporation, received a testimonial dinner from the executive staff of the Ryan Co. at Ferguson Country Club last Monday. Carl Beed, formerly assistant to Mankey, has been appointed his successor.

Parks Air College Opens Course for Master Mechanics

Announcement of a new master engine mechanics' training course is made by Oliver L. Parks, vice president and general manager of Parks Air College, Inc. The course, of three months' duration, is to be open only to graduates of the Parks School for Airplane and Engine Mechanics and to licensed mechanics.

It includes intensive training in the use of shop equipment and the servicing of airplane powerplants in everyday use on the flying field. The course is designed to turn out highly specialized engine mechanics and will fit its graduates for immediate service on the flying line.

It was inaugurated in response to a demand for the course by Parks students who intend to enter the employment of the Detroit Aircraft Corporation, of which Parks Air College is a division. The Detroit Aircraft Corporation has adopted a policy of drawing its pilots and mechanics from the ranks of Parks Air College graduates.

Monument to Speeders.

Daytona Beach, Fla., is contemplating the erection of a monument on which will appear the names of all the automobile race drivers who set speed marks on the Daytona track.

Sudden Stopping Imposes Heavy Strain on Brakes

How long would your present automobile last if you installed a 350-horsepower engine in the chassis and drove it wide open?

There isn't a motorist in the world who would impose such a load on an ordinary chassis, because every driver knows that no standard automobile could withstand the terrific stresses imposed by so powerful an engine.

Nevertheless many motorists habitually impose equal stresses on their cars without realizing it, a fact brought out by Sol W. Gross of the Gross Motor Co., Graham-Paige distributer here, in a discussion of brakes and braking.

"Few persons realize how much energy must be dissipated to stop a car," Gross said. "Motor-wise drivers who know that it requires tremendous horsepower to give rapid acceleration never seem to think of braking in similar terms.

"With hydraulic four-wheel brakes, such as used in all of our cars, a car running at any speed can be brought to a dead stop in one-fifth the time that it takes to attain that speed.

"Some drivers who would not expect a standard chassis to stand up with a 350-horsepower engine make it a practice to use the brakes to their full power for every stop. That is, they maintain speed to the last possible moment, even when they know long in advance that they must come to a standstill, and then bring the car to a sudden halt.

"Drivers should use their brakes moderately for all service stops. When they see a red light a block ahead, they should let the car slow down gradually, bringing it to a stand-still finally with gentle brake pressure.

"This practice, if followed regularly, not only saves the tires and brake linings, but guards the whole chassis from undue stresses."

but it is the same "Old Vincennes," and Tom, the history hound, reminded us, or told us, as the case might be, that Vincennes was founded in 1702 and was the capital of Inidiana Territory. We turned south on U. S. 41 at Vincennes to Evansville, Ind. And now, here we are in Henderson, after taking the shortest cut through Evansville, which in itself was a novelty. Only recently has that city been route-marked well enough to get a tourist through without querying his way.

We crossed the Ohio River a few miles below Evansville on a ferry, the "Tom Push," an unpretentious looking, but thoroughly efficient contraption, and drove off the boat into the main street of Henderson. This hotel is entirely satisfactory, as comfortable as a large city's best, and more accessible. Our dog is with us in our rooms, which is real testimony of Southern hospitality, and so it will be all of the way. Not only is the tourist welcome in the South, but if you choose to travel with a dog, who is the hotel clerk to question your taste?

There is another way to ferry over from Evansville, but it is not the most used route and means driving several miles from the ferry landing to Henderson. However, the other road has a feature that interested me the time I lost my way in Evansville, and crossed on the other ferry. There is a flourishing race track on the north side of the river, which to all appearances is Indiana, where the horses run under Kentucky laws. It seems that the river took some of Kentucky's soil and put it on the other side but Kentucky identified it, probably by the color of the grass, and claimed it. As a matter of fact you are in, if not on, Kentucky as soon as you board the boat on the Indiana side. So you see you can't believe all the maps say for here is Kentucky not only reaching across the Ohio but actually shouldering Indiana away from the water front.

In making preparations for this trip, one should go into the thing with a light heart and very little baggage. It does not take a really stout heart for women to make the trip alone, but one can reduce the effort by simplifying the matter of clothes. Regardless of the size of your car and how much baggage you may be able to stow in it, be sure that each member of your party has a small overnight bag, so that you do not have much loading and unloading every day. While I have never had anything in my car disturbed in a public garage, the car must be left unlocked and the garage is not responsible, so I always try to make my stops where the car can be parked in front of the hotel for the night, and locked with the baggage in it. This is one of the advantages of small cities over large ones.

We have done 250 miles today, a short day, paved roads and not an uncertain moment. The early dusk this time of the year cuts down the mileage because we never stay on the road after dark; but that means we can have early dinner and, just for recreation, go for a little ride!

I'll write tomorrow night from somewhere in Tennessee, and each night we are on the trip. When you get ready to start on a trip, all young need is a song in your heart and the ability to change a tire, and you can't help having a wonderful time.

ACTIVITIES OF BOY SCOUTS

SWIMMING CLASSES WILL START JAN. 9

Instruction Will Be Given Thursday Evening at Beaumont and Roosevelt High Schools.

Instruction in classes in swimming for Boy Scouts working to pass tests in that subject during the Achievement Roundup being conducted by the St. Louis Boy Scout Council, will be started Jan. 9 at the Beaumont and Roosevelt High School pools, according to William Puffer, educational director of the council. The classes will meet every Thursday evening until the close of the roundup the latter part of February.

Instruction, which will be given by the swimming directors of the pools, will start promptly at 7:30 o'clock. Scouts appearing after that time will be denied admission that evening, while no scout may enter the pool unless he has brought his own soap and towel. The only other requirement is that the scout shas not as yet taken his swimming test.

Other swimming instruction, Puffer said, may be given at the Downtown Y. M. C. A. between 3 and 4 o'clock on Saturday afternoon when the swimming directors are able to devote the time, it being necessary for the scout to notify the swimming directors the Wednesday preceding the Saturday instruction is wished. In this case also instruction will be limited to scouts who have not passed the first-class requirement.

In addition to instruction, first class swimming tests also will be given during these periods, the same requirements applying to the test-passing. Tests also will be given at the North Side Y. M. C. A. on Saturday afternoons from 3:30 to 4:30 o'clock, and at the Carondelet Y. M. C. A. on Saturday afternoons from 3 to 4 o'clock. In both cases scouts must notify the swimming directors of their wish to pass the test the preceding Wednesday, and must bring their own soap and towels. No instruction will be given at the two latter places.

The swimming instruction periods are part of a series being carried on by the local council to cover most of the tests in the scout rank-advancement requirements. Among the other classes this month will be four in First Aid, at the Sherman Park Field House, Missouri School for the Blind, Union Avenue Christian Church, and First National Bank, Webster Groves, all on Jan. 4, signalling, at the same places, Jan. 18; map-making and fire-building, Jan. 11, old Tourist Camp, Forest Park; and nature study and judging, Rose Fanning, Clark, Farragut, and Webster Groves High Schools, Jan. 14.

Troop Notes

North District.

Plans for a hike to the Chain of Rocks were discussed at the meeting of Troop 83 at St. Paul's Presbyterian Church last week, after a tentative program had been announced by Scoutmaster Schroeder. The hike is being held in connection with the achievement roundup being conducted by the local Boy Scout Council. Many tests have been passed by scouts of this troop during the last week, five Tenderfoot scouts passing to second class rank and one recruit successfully completing all his Tenderfoot requirements.

West District.

An investiture ceremony to formally take a new recruit into the troop was conducted by Troop 2 of the Pilgrim Congregational Church at the meeting a week ago Friday evening. Fifteen parents of the scouts witnessed the ceremony.

The Commanche patrol won first place in a contest in the making of fire with flint and steel conducted by Troop 30 at the Y. M. H. A. a week ago Thursday evening. The Commanches in winning averaged nearly 90 points a scout. The Navajo patrol took second place in the contest, while the Sioux were third. The Sioux won inspection for the evening. The troop paper, the "Squanto," was distributed at the meeting and games were played.

Each of the patrols held at least one meeting last week in preparation for a museum inter-patrol contest, which will last until Dec. 2 of next year. During the contest ribbons will be awarded for collections and arrangement, five points being scored for each blue ribbon, three for each red, and one for each white.

The elements of map-making were demonstrated to Troop 90, of Temple Shaare Emeth, by Junior Assistant Scoutmaster Morton Pareira at the last meeting of the troop. Following his talk Pareira took the troop through drills in both map-making and the Morse code. The troop is planning a party, to which parents of the scouts will be invited, at the Harvard School gymnasium the night of Jan. 15. A resolution of welcome has been sent by the troop to the Girl Scout troop just organized at the Temple Shaare Emeth.

The scouts of Troop 26 of the Delmar Baptist Church, played Santa Claus to 26 boys at the Missouri Baptist Orphans' Home last week. A collection of two or three gifts for each boy was made by the scouts, and distributed at the home by Scoutmaster Carleton and a committee of scouts Christmas morning.

Suburban District.

Two pup tents were presented to the Silver Fox patrol of Troop Webster Groves 3 at a recent meeting of the troop, as an award for winning an inter-patrol contest the troop has been conducting. Webster Groves 3 meets at Hagerty Memorial Church. At the same meeting each of the four patrol leaders was presented with a Patrol Leaders' Handbook and a patrol record book. Review was won by the Moose patrol, while a contest in Scout's Pace, run over a two-mile course, was taken by the Silver Foxes. Field Executive M. N. Leavitt was a visitor. The troop is planning to present Scoutmaster Nicholson, who assumed his office Dec. 13, with a photograph of the entire group in uniform. The troop succeeded in roping four mavericks during the last two weeks: Owen Thompson, Robert Field, Lyoel Peters, and Earl Bower. Senior Patrol Leader Carl Bayes was in charge of a Christmas Lighting Contest entry by the troop.

An open meeting, to celebrate the acquisition of new headquarters in the Overland School, will be held by Troop Overland 1 Friday evening. The troop has been meeting at the old school. An invitation has been issued to all parents and friends to attend the house warming.

ILLUSTRATES FAIRY STORY WITH PAPER CUTOUT FIGURES

Flashing scissors in the agile left hand of Miss Marion Rombauer, director of art at the John Burroughs School, provided entertainment for 150 children and 100 adults at the Art Museum yesterday afternoon, as Miss Rombauer constructed paper cutout figures to accompany the telling of a fairy story. The entertainment was a special Christmas party arranged for the regular Saturday afternoon story hour.

Using only large sheets of colored paper, scissors and a pastepot, Miss Rombauer, with the aid of an assistant, made figures of a boy and girl, and dressed them completely in cutout clothing, all without the aid of any preliminary sketches or guide-lines. The major portion of the hour was devoted to the telling of a fairy-tale entitled "The Love of Three Oranges." Two large posters, already prepared, depicted scenes illustrating various episodes of the story. These posters and two large cutout friezes of circus-life and a scene on the Italian Riviera emphasized, mass effect, action and variety of colors. All were made without sketches.

Miss Rombauer, who lives at 5142 Waterman avenue studied at Vassar College and in Europe. This year is her first at the John Burroughs School.

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti, Dec. 28.—The commandant of the Nacional Garde returned today from a six-day, 500-mile inspection tour of the military departments of the West and North and reported the country people were concerned only over the low price of coffee and the scarcity of rain. He found little interest in politics, but residents of the towns were somewhat exercised over the taxation of tobacco and alcohol.

The BIG CITY of the FUTURE

Hugh Ferriss, Noted Architect and Former St. Louisan, Foretells the Architectural Trend of the Skyscraper.

BUILDINGS AND BUILDING GROUPS IN A FANCIFUL CITY OF THE FUTURE.

By a Member of the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine Staff

THE business of prophecy is never more hazardous perhaps than when it undertakes to say what something is going to look like half a century hence. Hugh Ferriss, the noted illustrator and architectural artist, who, incidentally, is a former St. Louisan, takes full cognizance of that fact in his profusely-illustrated volume, "The Metropolis of Tomorrow," just issued from the publishing house of Ives Washburn, New York. Accordingly, he disclaims any assumption of the prophet's robe. However, he points out, the author should not be charged with waywardness if he seeks to discover some of the trends which underlie the vast miscellany of contemporary building and endeavors to foresee (in drawings) where these trends may possibly, or even probably, lead.

That is what Mr. Ferriss tries to do, and it can hardly be denied that he is eminently fitted to offer speculations which are a bit more trustworthy than mere personal phantasy. That is, he is equipped to do so if anybody is. For the last 15 years it has been his daily task to work as consulting designer on the typical buildings which contemporary architectural firms are erecting day by day in the larger cities. From this experience he has chosen, as his cues, those tendencies which seem to him best to promise the ultimate embodiment, in structural form, of certain human values.

His collection of sketches, which, he explains, he has made in leisure moments during the last 15 years, falls into three main sections. In the first are pictured some of the more significant structures which already exist. The second is given over chiefly to study of principal trends. The third brings together certain of these influences in a glimpse of an imaginary metropolis.

"The most formidable restraint," writes the author, "yet placed upon the rank growth of American building is, without doubt, the zoning laws which, from their experimental beginnings something over 10 years ago, have already been adopted in more than 300 American municipalities.

"Reference is here made especially to those provisions of the law which pertain to the height and volume of buildings. Before acceptance of the zoning principle, an owner could without let or hindrance build on his own property to any height, and in any volume, that he desired. But with continually increasing dimensions it became apparent that the large structure could no longer be regarded as an isolated instance; it was definitely affecting adjoining buildings, the neighborhood and even the city as a whole. It became increasingly evident that the large project was a concern not only of an individual, but of the community, and that some form of restriction must be adopted."

The drawings which appear across the bottom of this page are reproduced as illustrating the effects which the zoning principle has worked, and will continue to work, in large buildings throughout the country, the law being directed toward securing an increase in public safety, convenience, efficiency and health. The drawing at the left is, briefly, a representation of the maximum mass which, under the zoning law, it would be permissible to build over an entire city block, on the assumption that the block is 200 by 600 feet. The building rises vertically on its lot lines only so far as is allowed by law. Above this height it slopes inward at specified angles. A tower rises, as is permitted, to an unlimited height, being in area not over one-fourth the area of the property.

"It must be understood," Mr. Ferriss points out, "that the mass thus delineated is not an architect's design; it is simply a form which results from legal specifications. It is a shape which the law puts into the architect's hands. He can add nothing to it; but he can vary it in detail as he wishes."

Given the form shown at the left, the architect's first step, writes the author, is to cut into the mass to admit light to the interior. He, therefore, cuts out such portions—"light courts"—as would admit natural light throughout. He finds remaining the form which is shown in the second picture. But even with this done, he is still far from an acceptable form for a building. Those great slopes are unthinkable, even though structures with sloping exterior walls have actually been built. The architect, therefore, cuts into them again, this time translating them into the rectangular forms which will provide more conventional interior spaces and which can be more economically constructed in steel.

"At the same time," continues Mr. Ferriss, "the architect gives consideration to the tower. Legally, it could have risen to any height; as far as engineering limitations are concerned, it

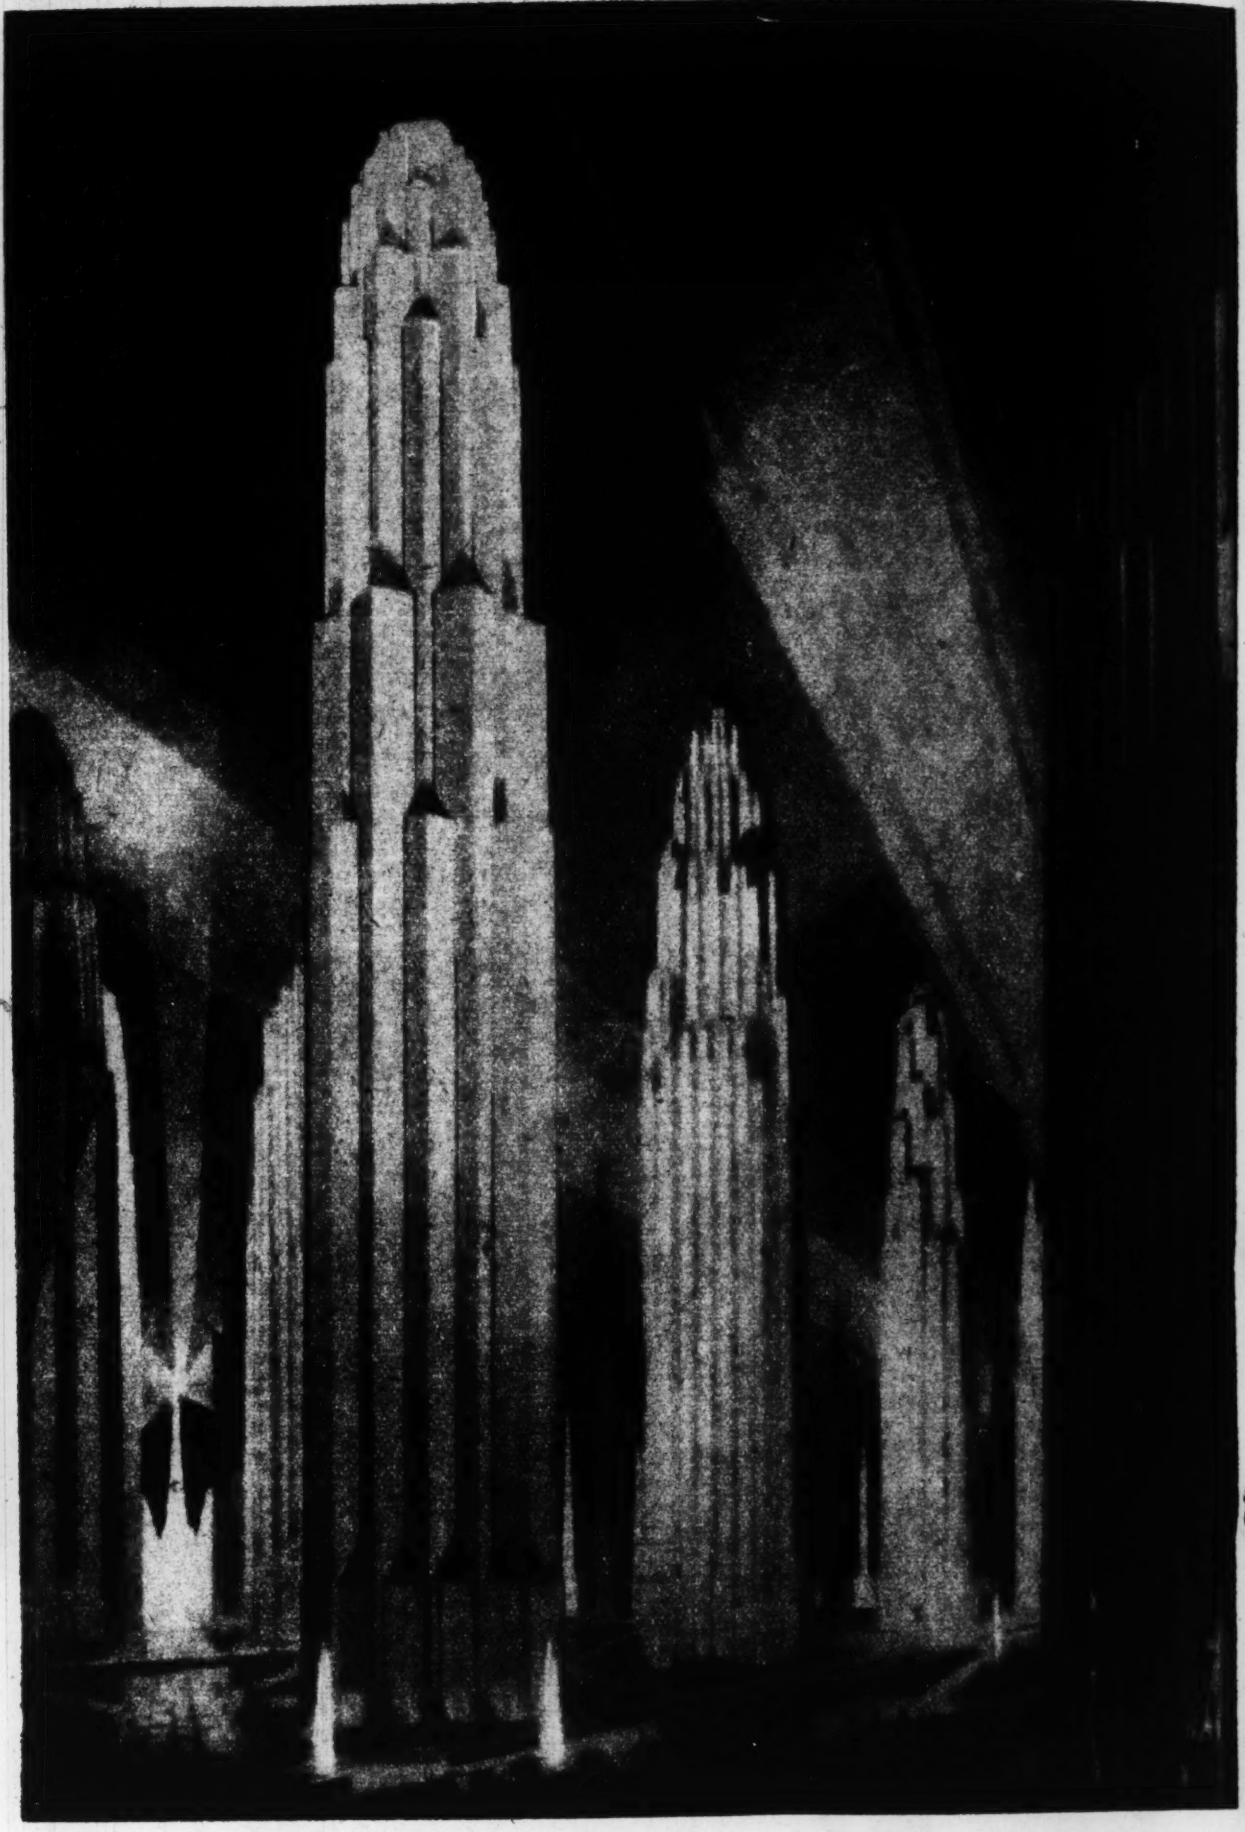
Vista through a 2-block building—such a building already exists in the Grand Central Terminal, New York, but Mr. Ferriss believes that future developments will bring many such.



Verticals on wide avenues—which may result from the great consideration being given the problem of how to handle the traffic created by the skyscraper. With narrow buildings, such as these, great spaces could be clear on the ground.

could rise considerably higher than any structure now standing. With consideration for the financial aspects of the case—as well as for the other principles which evoked the zoning law—the tower is tentatively limited to 1000 feet."

Thus, in consequence of translating slopes into rectangular steps and thus limiting the tower, the mass assumes the form depicted in the third drawing. But further revisions are obviously necessary. There are found to be too many steps. These steps, because of their number and their comparatively small area, would be too expensive and, besides, they would be useless. The upper ones are too small, for when spaces had been set aside for elevators nothing would be left. Anyway, not enough rentable space would be left to justify the expense of building. The architect's problem then is to get rid of as many steps as possible and at the same time preserve the general sloping effect. The result is pictured in the fourth drawing. It is the mass that remains after the undesirable parts have been eliminated. This is not intended as a finished or habitable building, the author reminds us, but it may be taken as a basic form for large buildings which conform with the zoning law.

UNDER this type of zoning law, Ferriss goes on to point out, the tendency of architecture must continue to be toward the set-back building. It is the only means by which buildings can be pushed higher and higher as ground becomes scarce and more and more valuable in downtown business districts. The future city, therefore, seems destined to be a city of towers. And instead of an assortment of unrelated individual towers, the author explains, a definite species of tower buildings seems to be appearing. The tower building, he believes, will continue to dominate the architectural scene. And not alone will the tower design be confined to office buildings. Present trends indicate the tower form will extend also to the factory, the university and the church. The four drawings reproduced on the preceding page embody certain dominant characteristics which he believes will be found in the religious structure of the future, the technology building, the hall of learning and the industrial arts plant.

Discussing the drawing of the technology center which appears at the top and in the center of page one, Mr. Ferriss explains that particular effort is made to show the relation of the tower to the street.

"The ground level," he writes, "is given over to wheel traffic; parking is all beneath the buildings. The avenue has also a lower level, in the center, which is used by express wheel traffic. We glimpse through the openings in the retaining wall of this lower level the right of way of the subway rail traffic.

"In the design of this building, by the way, one may note an emphasis on the horizontal lines, rather than the vertical lines, of the steel grill. It may be questioned whether designers can logically emphasize either when both are essential in this system of construction. The horizontal emphasis, at least, recognizes and makes permanent the appearance which, in actuality, the steel building itself always exhibits before the exterior walls have been added. . . . In this particular building, the vertical members contain the elevator shafts and fire stairs."

At the upper left of page one is depicted the church of the future, which presupposes more harmony among sects than has thus far been achieved.

"In the city, which is momentarily before us," Ferriss writes, "the many and varied religious denominations have achieved—for that moment—a state of complete harmony; the building now in view is none other than the seat of their combined and co-ordinated activities.

"Expressive of modern tendencies, this structure soars to great altitudes; if it has, at the same time, a slightly medieval cast, this is perhaps not altogether inexpressive of the institution which it domiciles.

"Even in the sharp perspective of the present view, one may surmise the presence of three outstanding towers—the two lesser being toward either end of the mass and the lofty central tower rising between. These stand, respectively, for the cardinal functions of this Christian host; one of the flanking towers houses the executive offices of the various Faiths; the other is more especially dedicated to their aspirational activities, or Hopes; in the third, which is the greatest of these, abide the Charities."

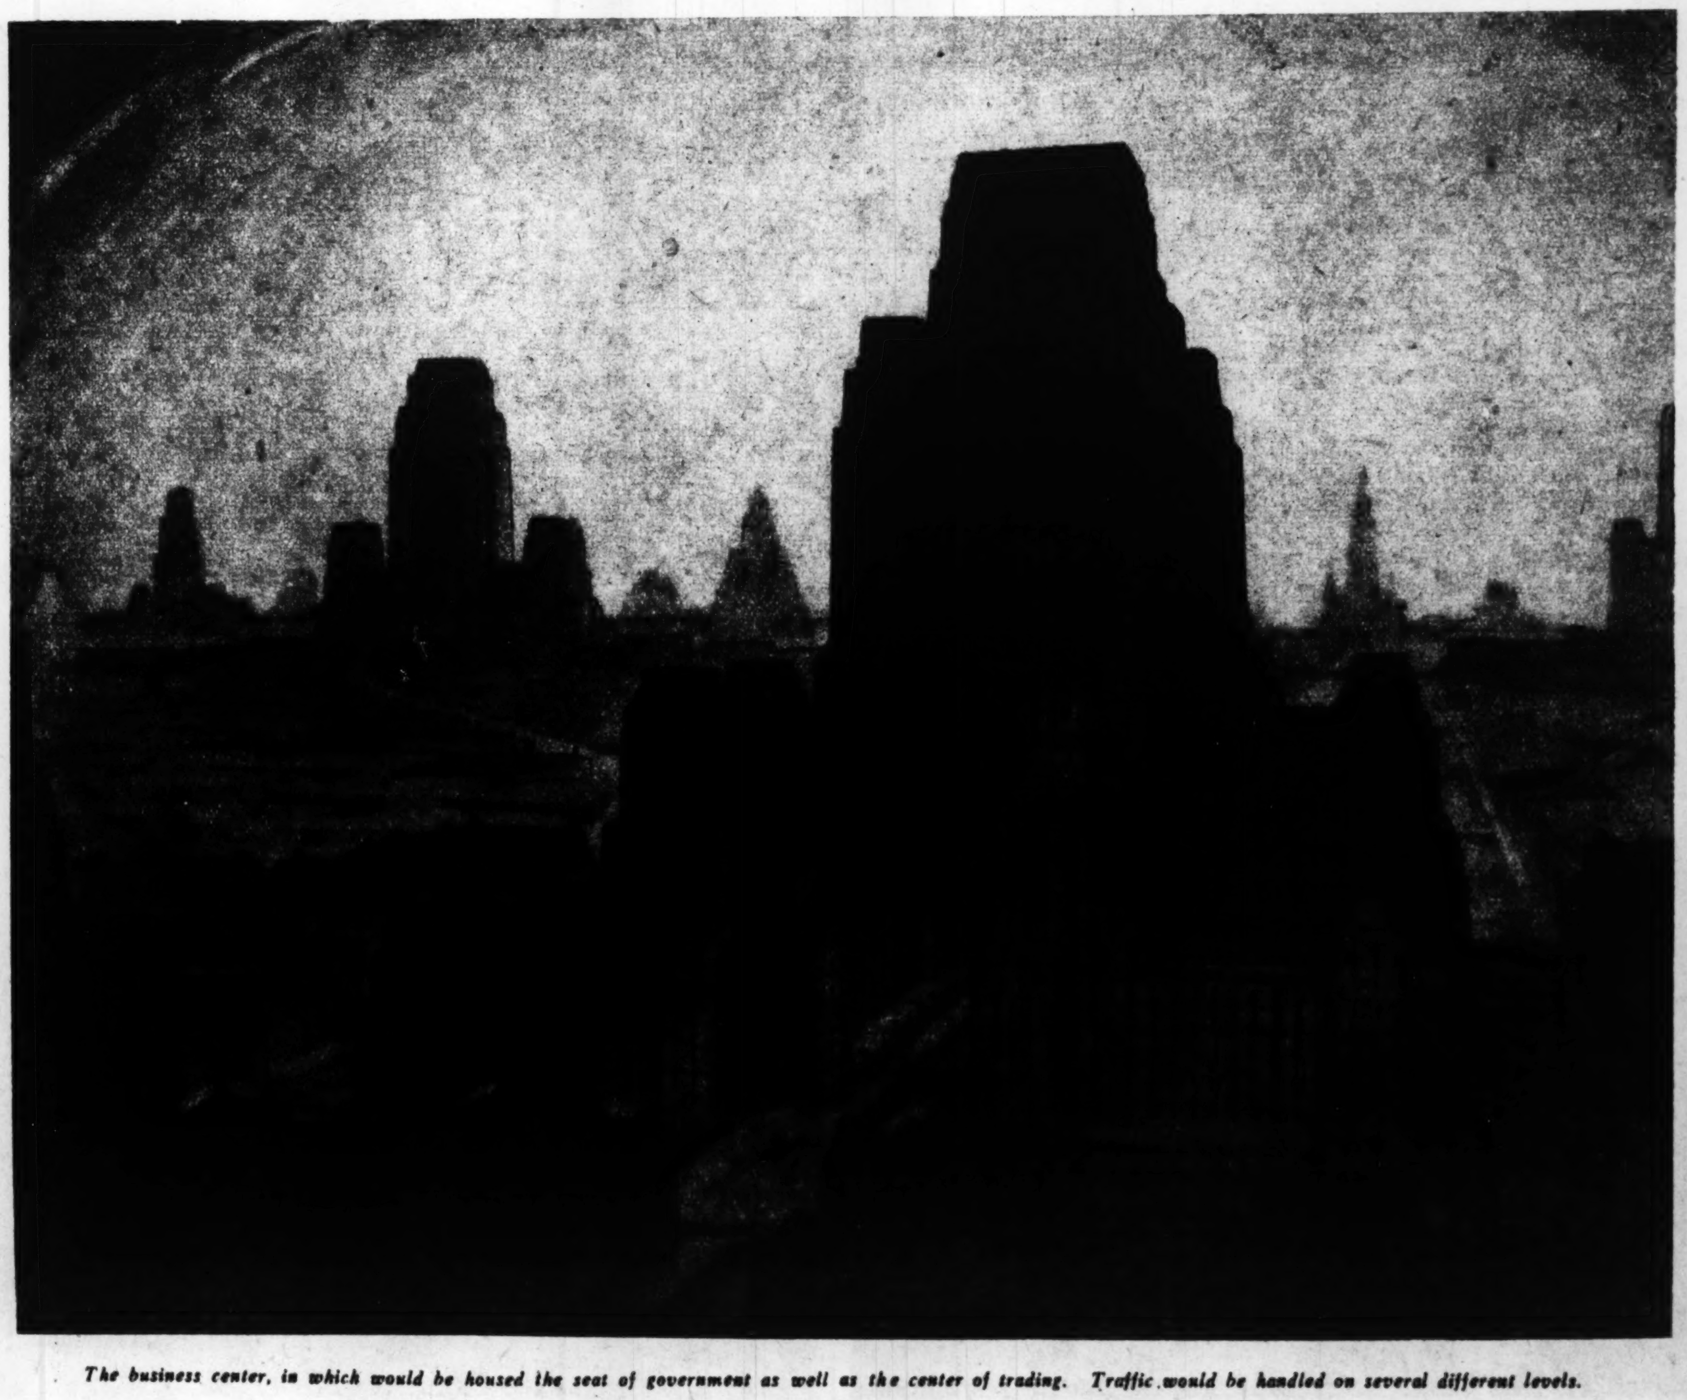
THE hall of philosophy depicted at the upper right on the first page is a far cry from the traditional college group plan, with structures ranging around a quadrangle. The author says of his visualization:

"Where art and science meet—that is to say, where these civic zones contact with one another—there stands a tower about which are gathered the colleges of arts and sciences.

"Since this tower seems to stand somewhat apart, let us give a moment to examining the particular elements of its design.

"In plan, it seems to show, at all levels, variations of a nine-pointed star—in other words, of three superimposed triangles. Being planned, basically, on the equilateral triangle, the shaft rises—or, so to speak, grows—in what seem definite stages. For example, the vertical dimension from the top of the base up to the point where the vertical members break for the first time appears to bear a ratio to the dimension between this break and the break next above it, as well as to the total vertical dimension above the latter break. These three dimensions are to each other as three, one and three. . . .

"The real significance, if any, of a tower having, so to speak, a threefold plan and a sevenfold ascension, is obscure. And it is perhaps optimistic to say that here a number of separate parts aspire to be as one. In any case, this is the Center of Philosophy."



The business center, in which would be housed the seat of government as well as the center of trading. Traffic would be handled on several different levels.

Soon after the baby was born she confessed the truth. That is why she is now locked up in a musty cell of the county jail awaiting trial. But she must tell the story again in court and try to convince the jury that lies, gossip and bootleg liquor were to blame for the deed, and not she. It's going to be a fight for her life, and all the country folk for miles around will come to hear it. They always come to court when big murder trials are on the docket.

Probably she will take the baby into court with her. That is usually a good move for the defense in such cases. It gives the lawyers a chance to plead: "Don't take the mother away from this poor, little, helpless babe." Juries respond to that sort of thing. They get to sniffling, and when juries can be made to sniffle the case is as good as won.

Mrs. Drew's father will be there, too. G. T. Gunter is his name. He is 56 years old and lives at New Albany, Mississippi. He is out of prison now. Governor Bilbo pardoned him a short time ago, when Mrs. Drew confessed that he hadn't really murdered her husband at all, but that she herself had crept to the sleeping man's bedside one night and fired a bullet through his heart with a .45-caliber revolver. She did that, she said, because she was an expectant mother and he had been treating her badly—drinking, threatening her and running off to a picnic with another woman, leaving her at home to do the work in the fields. She had shot him as she would have shot a dangerous animal, she said, and had knelt there by his body and prayed for his life.

OF COURSE, she shouldn't have dragged her father into it. She admits that now. But in her desperation she had to blame somebody. She was going to have another baby soon and she couldn't go to prison until that was over. So she taught her 8-year-old daughter, Dorothy Lou[illegible], to tell the officers that, "I saw granddaddy fire the shot." And the officers, thinking it quite natural that an 8-year-old child would describe a murder with such words as "fire the shot," went after the grandfather. Knowing very well that his daughter had murdered her husband, Gunter kept his lips sealed and pleaded guilty. To make a fight, he knew, would result only in disclosing his daughter as the murderer. Hurt but self-sacrificing, he accepted his sentence and went to the penitentiary prepared to spend the rest of his life there.

Indeed, he might have ended his days behind the walls, had not remorse weighed so heavily upon the guilty daughter. The thought of her father, innocent but willing to suffer for her, laboring in the prison shops, herded with bank robbers and killers into steel-barred cells at night, refused to be banished from her mind. After the baby was born she resolved to tell it all. So she wrote her confession. And, of all things, she wrote it in verse! The morbid state of mind from which she suffered is indicated by the following contribution:

DEATH BALLAD.

Down in a lonely graveyard,
Where the flowers bloom and fade,
There lies my darling sleeping
In a cold and silent grave.

He died not broken-hearted
Nor by a disease he fell,
But in an instant parted
From the ones he loved so well.

Down on my knees before him
I pleaded for his life.
But deep into his bosom
Had plunged a forty-five.

But, O how sad the ending,
To sit beside my dear,
For I have often told him,
"My darling, don't you fear."

Then he said, "No, my darling,
Your words can never be,
For soon I will be sleeping
In hell, away from thee.

"But listen to me, wife,
Come closely while I tell,
When I am gone, please don't forget me—
The one who loves you well.

"I know I've been a rambler,
I know I've done you wrong,
But don't forget me, darling,
Whenever you sing this song.

"I want you to work for Jesus,
And work both night and day,
For He will gladly help you
And surely lead the way.

"For he is kind and gentle
And loves us all, you know.
He will help you, darling,
His light to others show.

"I know I've lived a sinful life,
While in this world I've been;
I'd sure live a different life
If I could live again.

"But it's too late, my darling,
My soul is lost in sin,
For I have wandered far from God—
A sinner I have been.

"The time has come, my darling,
When you and I must part,
The bullet of that forty-five
Has surely plunged my heart.

"But kiss our little children
And tell them I have gone.
Don't let them follow in my footsteps,
For I have led them wrong."

Having spent hours drafting this rambling and lachrymose dirge, with its macabre emphasis on "lonely graveyards," last words, sinful wanderings and "cold and silent tombs," she took it to the Sheriff herself. Then, setting aside literary forms, she told him what had happened, which was what she hadn't told him in the versified confession.

"I KILLED him on July 26, between 7:30 and 8 o'clock in the evening," she related. "That was on a Friday. The day before he had gone to a picnic—with that woman, I think—and did not come home Thursday night. All of Thursday I worked hard in the field. When he came home Friday he was drunk. I hid two shotguns, but he got the pistol and tried to kill me. I got away from him.

"Late Friday afternoon my mother and sister and I were on the front porch. My husband and Dorothy were asleep in one room and my father in another. I slipped into my husband's room, got the pistol, placed it to his heart and pulled the trigger. He died without saying a word. It was that woman," she added, "that woman and liquor and gossip—lies. That's what made me do it."

After the murder, she related, she decided to let her father take the blame—for a little while, at least, until her baby was born and she was strong enough to face the charge and the baby was old enough to be taken to jail with her.

"We were happy for four years," she related. "My husband had a good job as a railroad section foreman. He was good to us. Then our trouble started as a result of malicious gossip—a lie that another woman told my husband.

"THIS woman," she continued, "started to break up our home because she was in love with my husband. She started while her own husband was living. After he died she was worse than ever. She told my husband I was untrue to him.

"That started him to drinking hard. When he was sober he was good to us. But when he got drunk that awful lie would pop into his mind and he would try to kill me. Many a time I had to run for my life. Because of his drinking he lost his job. We were forced to live at the home of my brother-in-law, just across the State line from Grand Junction, Tennessee.

"So things went from bad to worse. My life was in constant danger when he was drunk. Then, too, I was expecting to become a mother at any time. I had worried so much during the day that I killed him hardly knowing what I was doing."

Today she seems to feel somewhat better about the whole miserable affair. The first dread and horror of the crime has passed and she sits in her cell and cuddles her child. The baby, little disturbed by the fact that it is starting life behind jail bars, coos and kicks. The three other Drew children are living with Mrs. Drew's father at New Albany. Often the grandfather takes the children to the jail to see their mother.

Gunter bears no malice toward his daughter now for causing him to spend several months in prison, nor against the granddaughter whose story sent him there. He says she was merely trying to help her mother.

The trial will come up in February. Mrs. Drew says she will be glad to have it over with, but she hopes they won't hang her. She wants to live for her children. As for herself, she doesn't care. Her life is shattered at 25.

How Winifred Sackville Stoner Jr. Found Her First Husband—Whom She Had Thought Dead—Very Much Alive.

NEW YORK.

WINIFRED SACKVILLE STONER has brought suit against her first husband, Count Philippe Clinton de Bruche, whom for seven years she has believed dead, for annulment of their marriage, charging that he is a criminal and a "fake nobleman" instead of the poet and scion of an old French family he claimed to be.

Her second marriage, contracted in the belief that she was a widow, ended in the divorce courts two years ago.

Thus the young woman who before she was 12 was known throughout the country and in every court of Europe as the "wonder child" of the age, an infant prodigy, an ideal illustration of what intelligent and well-directed upbringing can do with a child, again has given evidence of her inability to manage her own life successfully.

From the day that Winifred was born, on August 19, 1902, her mother, who had very decided ideas on the training and development of young children, set to work to prove, by means of her own small daughter, the practicability of her theories. An idea of her success can be gleaned by a summary of the child's accomplishments:

At six weeks she could sit up alone.

At six months she could talk and knew colors.

At a year she could converse in polysyllables.

At sixteen months she could read.

At three years she used a typewriter, could spell and play simple airs on the piano.

At four she learned the Latin declensions and conjugations and received a diploma in Esperanto.

At five she spoke eight languages, wrote stories and poems for newspapers and learned the waltz, two-step and three-step.

At seven she learned the outlines of Greek, Roman and Scandinavian mythology.

At nine she passed the college entrance examination of a Western university.

At twelve she was ready for postgraduate work and was teaching Esperanto in the Carnegie Institute in Pittsburg, her native city.

IN ADDITION to these achievements she was an expert chess player, could swim, ride, row, fence, skate, box and play tennis with proficiency, cook, crochet, knit and sew, draw her own illustrations to the books she wrote and play five musical instruments.

No wonder that educators in every part of the country were amazed when they questioned this girl. No wonder that in the courts of Europe they listened spellbound as she discussed weighty subjects in the language of the country; or that countless parents, listening to Mrs. Stoner on the lecture platform, and seeing with their own eyes the wonders she had wrought, crowded up to her to learn how they could make of their own children such well-informed, well-rounded and healthy persons.

For the physical well-being of Winifred was never for an instant sacrificed to mental prowess. Everything that she learned was by means of a game, or administered in some stimulating fashion, so that it never became wearisome or a strain. When she was in her cradle her mother rocked her to sleep to the rhythms of the opening lines of Virgil's Aeneid. Soon the infant learned them. Weights and measures were learned by playing at storekeeper with her dolls. She learned observation by trying to see how many objects in a shop window she could remember after she had passed by.

"A BABY may be given its first lessons at the age of six weeks," said Dr. Stoner once, when asked to outline the methods by which she achieved such marvels with Winifred. "Every intelligent child, if rightly taught, can do the things that Winifred has done. She is not a genius, merely a little girl who has developed as I believe nature intended all children should develop. Surround your baby with the finest and most beautiful specimens of art which you can procure. Hang the walls of his room with brightly-colored reproductions of famous paintings and have near a few plaster copies of good sculpture. While he is still in long dresses take him around the room in your arms and describe the pictures and statues to him in simple, well-chosen English. He will understand more than you think and will amaze you with his artistic appreciation a little later."

Dr. Stoner, throughout her lecture work, and in the last few years when she and Winifred have been searching the world over for promising material to be trained as Winifred was trained, always maintained that the child had no more than normal intelligence, but was simply the result of the right sort of training. Winifred herself said, after her second marriage: "I've never been a genius—a prodigy perhaps. A genius does one thing with great fire, but he may be completely deficient in some other branch of learning. I am proficient in all branches. That is the difference between genius and learning. But if every normal child had been given the advantages I had, he could become what I am."

At twelve, when she appeared with her mother on lecture platforms, Winifred was almost as tall as Winifred senior, weighed 129 pounds, and, with her glowing, rosy cheeks and bright eyes, was the picture of health and animation. This physique and attractive vitality has always remained with her; when she married, at seventeen, she was called as beautiful as she was learned. Though completely poised and lacking in self-consciousness, she was always natural, gay and unaffected, entirely devoid of the priggishness which so often characterizes the infant prodigy.

Facing the world at 16 with the intellect of a woman of 35, Winifred Stoner Jr. stood on a peak which few men would dare storm. Who could hope to make happy a creature with the background of a woman of the world and the romantic ideals of an adolescent? Who would satisfy a girl who had always been held before the world as a model of perfection?

When the gallant knight finally appeared, in the person of Count Phillipe de Bruche, and she eloped with him to Greenwich, Connecticut, the world voiced approval. He was hailed as the ideal match for her, wealthy scion of a noble family, cultured, accomplished, a composer and poet. He was just 14 years her senior.

"I fell in love with him because he could do almost everything just a little bit better than I could. He was the first man who could outride, outswim, outdistance me in everything I tried. After I had seen him for a time I knew I had met my god of love. To love a man you must respect him. I could respect him, and I loved him, fully and completely."

In these words Winifred herself summed up her feeling for her first husband. How long that feeling lasted is difficult to say. The world heard, only a year after the marriage, that it had been cut short abruptly by the Count's death in a motor accident in Mexico. That there had been trouble was unsuspected until suit for annulment of this marriage was brought in New York the other day. Then the papers revealed that Winifred charged her Count with being no Count at all, and, worse, with being a criminal.

For seven years she believed him dead. Then, one day recently, hurrying to the lobby of the Hotel Ansonia in response to a telephone call, she saw him, leaning against a pillar, unmistakably alive and flourishing. The annulment suit followed.

In the meantime, still searching for happiness, she had married again—again a man past his first youth, and again in an unannounced trip to Greenwich. Louis Hyman, the 48-year-old sportsman who was her second choice, was introduced to her by Ambassador Gerard. She described their meeting in these terms:

"We were riding in Central Park. I saw coming toward me a rider who was born to the saddle. Here was another man who could do something better than I could. You have no idea what a sensation that gives me. The greatest thing for a man to possess, in my mind, was superiority in something in my own line. I could love a man who could beat me at my own game."

AGAIN Winifred's high intellectual attainments and remarkable development failed to serve her. After two years of disappointment she charged him with infidelity and won a divorce from him, refusing to accept alimony because, she declared, she was well able to earn her own living. Almost immediately she sailed for France, to undertake a study of divorce.

Before sailing, out of the bitter depths of her disillusioning experiences, she declared that if she ever married again it would be a man who would fight for her, a caveman, and described the potential lover as follows:

"He must be good-looking. He must not necessarily be literary. He must be a man who is brave. I am tired of being the superior female. I'm tired of men who know more than I do. I want a young caveman lover, who will sweep me off my feet and make me forget I am years and years older by experience than he. My ideal man must have some money. I love beauty and cannot be happy without it. I want a man to fight for me—to defend me—like any other sweetheart."

From Paris came persistent rumors linking Winifred's name with that of Bainbridge Colby, Secretary of State under President Wilson, and a lifelong friend of the Stoners. He was at that time in Paris, while his wife, Nathalie Colby, a well-known novelist, was attempting to get a divorce from him. Denials of this romance came both from Winifred, who declared she looked on Colby only as a childhood friend, and from her mother, who pointed to the fact that he was still legally married.

Back in America the Stoners, mother and daughter, devoted themselves to an "intensive hunt for youthful geniuses," which they conducted in various parts of the country. However, the mismanagement which always characterized the private life of Winifred the younger soon came into play again. Drawn together by their mutual interest in psychoanalysis, she and Robert Loeb, wealthy young banker connected with the world-famous banking house of Kuhn, Loeb & Co., had struck up a close friendship, which lasted over a year. Loeb was married and had two children. Their relation, Winifred declared, was purely platonic. However, according to her allegations, he gave her a diamond and ruby bracelet for her birthday, which she turned back to him a few months later to have repaired. Shortly thereafter she met him in the fashionable Sherry-Netherlands Hotel, in the company of Mrs. Russell T. Kirby, a young society matron. Winifred publicly accused Mrs. Kirby of wearing her bracelet, and demanded its return. A scene ensued, in the course of which, she declared, Loeb struck her, repeating his blows in a taxicab and on a street corner.

As a result of this brawl, Winifred haled her erstwhile friend into court, but she was held to have no case against him, and he was freed.

The former prodigy's last appearance in the public eye, before her recent suit gave a startled New York its first inkling that her first husband was not dead, after all, was on the eve of her sailing for Europe last spring. Just before the Majestic was due to sail a deputy sheriff appeared on board, armed with a writ of attachment for her baggage, the result of a suit brought by one of New York's most exclusive and expensive apparel shops. It was alleged that between March 6 and April 10 Miss Stoner had bought wearing apparel worth $1140, and had boasted that she would show the authorities how easy it was to leave the country without paying the bill.

She made good the boast, for the deputy sheriff found her stateroom empty, and even with the aid of the ship's officers, was unable to locate her effects.

WHAT will be the next step for Winifred Stoner, who is only 27 years old? When she is freed from her "Count," will she search for a young caveman, as per her specifications, to be her third mate? Will she continue with her mother the work of finding promising children to be brought up as she herself was? Judged by her own life, that would seem a rash policy, but perhaps circumstances will alter cases. Dr. Stoner, when asked to what she attributed her daughter's failures in married life, pointed out that Winifred's education made companionship of her own age impossible, because she was a single example of the system. "In the age to come," she said, "there will be hundreds of young men whose minds and bodies are advanced to the peak of perfection which Winifred has reached. If Winifred were growing up today she would find companions of her own caliber of her own age. While she was the only 'wonder child' 20 years ago, there are scores of them today who will grow into healthy, intelligent young people of supreme mentality."

Winifred Sackville Stoner Jr. has proved the practicability of an educational theory, but it seems as if the experiment had been a little hard on her.

The Man Who Made Clock-Winding a Profession and Now Keeps 2200 Clocks on Schedule

A NEW FEATURE OF THE POST-DISPATCH SUNDAY MAGAZINE

CLEMENT KISSEL was out of a job. He had been out of a job for three months, and the situation was rendered more acute by the fact that he had been married less than a year before. He had started in the jewelry business at Kennett, Missouri, but after six months had decided that the Ozark region was no place for a jewelry business and had closed out and had come back to St. Louis, the home town of himself and his wife, to look for a suitable business opening. He hadn't found any. It was now January and time something was being done. The money realized from the sale of the Kennett store was rapidly disappearing.

One Saturday night, after a busy but ineffective day of job hunting, Clement Kissel and his wife determined to put troubles aside for a few hours and take in a show. They hadn't been to many lately. They went to the New Grand Central, which was then really new, and while they were waiting for the picture to begin Mrs. Kissel picked up a copy of the Post-Dispatch which somebody had dropped on the floor near their seats. She turned at once to the classified advertising section. That had become a habit. She looked over the page for a moment.

"This looks interesting," she remarked.

"What looks interesting?" asked Kissel.

"This advertisement of a jewelry store for sale."

Kissel looked at the ad. John Montandon, it read, would dispose of his jewelry and clock-repair shop at 4252 Olive street on liberal terms, and he would guarantee the purchaser an income of $200 a month.

TWO HUNDRED DOLLARS a month sounded like a lot of money to the Kissels just then. They talked the matter over in whispers and the more they talked the more interesting became the ad and the less interesting became the picture. Before it was half over they got up and walked out. They caught a street car going west on Olive street and found John Montandon's shop still open. They went in. When they came out, Clement J. Kissel was the new owner of the establishment. He was about to launch upon an unusual business career—one of the most unusual St. Louis has ever witnessed. It was to be a career of clock winding. Two days later, as proprietor of the Olive street shop, he did launch upon it and, as he managed it, he made of clock winding a lucrative pursuit.

Fancy earning an income equivalent to that of the average well-paid business executive by winding and regulating clocks eight hours a day and six days a week. Aside from his own clients and a few clock dealers, who even suspected there was such a business at all?

It was 16 years ago that Clement Kissel bought out John Montandon's clock-repair shop. Since that day, he conservatively estimates, he has wound something like a million clocks, to say nothing of those he has repaired and regulated. His business has grown to such proportions that he now spends virtually all of his time making the rounds of customers' homes and keeping their timepieces in running order.

HE PROVIDES this service for 258 households, each of which he visits once a week. In the course of his weekly round he winds some 2200 clocks. This means making a round of about 35 miles a day and winding an average of about 360 clocks a day. Such repair work as can be done on the spot he performs on his round. The remainder of it is done in the shop by Edward Schneider, his assistant, who has been with him for 15 years, and who enjoys a status approximating that of partnership in the business.

At this quaint shop, which still occupies the original quarters of John Montandon, nothing is for sale except service. There is no stock in trade. The place is strictly a clock and watch hospital. Kissel is the visiting physician who makes the rounds of his patients, feeling their pulses, regulating their activities and diagnosing their disorders. Schneider is the operating surgeon who takes care of them at the hospital and pulls them through severe attacks of sleeping sickness, hysteria, cuckoo-itis, old age and all other ills which beset clocks.

So far as Kissel knows, New York is the only city in the United States besides St. Louis in which there flourishes a business similar to his. Chicago, with all its speed, its split-minute schedules and changing of clocks for daylight saving twice a year, has no clock winder. In St. Louis, Kissel has only one competitor. This is a large jewelry firm which maintains a clock-winding service for its customers. Kissel, however, is the only proprietor who performs such service himself. He explains that this is a factor which has had much to do with the growth of his business, as householders usually have more confidence in a proprietor than an employe. They regard the proprietor as a responsible person, who may be freely admitted to their homes and given the run of the house.

When Clement Kissel laid the foundations for his present business, even though it may be regarded as a queer business, he exercised no less sagacity than other business pioneers who foresaw possibilities where their fellows did not and took advantage of them. The mere fact that clock winding is an unusual occupation and at first thought seems a bit absurd is no reason for assuming that it isn't worth while. The personal factors making for success seem to be largely the same in all businesses. It probably required no less diplomacy, energy and ingenuity to build up a profitable trade as a clock winder than to build up a big dry goods or butter and egg business. John Montandon was providing a winding service for about five customers when Kissel took over the shop, and Kissel didn't even inherit these. They thought he was too youthful to know much about clocks. He started with no customers at all. But he had an idea. Each time he repaired a clock he "followed" it. He tried to induce the owner to engage him, for a moderate fee, to look after this and all the other clocks in the house at regular weekly intervals.

In support of his proposition he stressed the point that clocks can be expected to give good service only when wound regularly, preferably on the same day each week, at the same time of day and by the same person. In this argument he had virtually all clock manufacturers behind him, and he usually won his point. Also, he concentrated upon getting customers who had large homes and a great many clocks to wind. For a $2-a-month fee, he pointed out, he could save them a great deal of trouble and at the same time keep their clocks properly regulated.

A group of clocks in the Kissel workshop.

Kissel soon had a nucleus of 20 or 30 families whose homes he visited weekly. From then on expansion was rapid, although he never once advertised his services in any publication. He depended upon satisfied customers and personal recommendation. He worked in family groups. After getting one family on his visiting list, he soon got most of the relatives and intimate friends of that family. It wasn't long until he had all the customers he could handle. Ten years ago his business reached virtually a capacity status and since that time he has acquired few new customers except now and then when old customers would dispose of their homes or move out of the city.

A list of Kissel's customers reads like the St. Louis Social Register. Most of them are of old and wealthy families, who maintain large homes and whose house furnishings include 20 or 25 clocks. The homes he visits are well scattered over the city and county but they appear in greatest number in such residential sections as Portland place, Westmoreland place and the country club grounds. In all of his 16 years in business, Kissel relates, he has never sent out a bill for his clock-winding services and never has had a bad debt.

Clement J. Kissel.

A Dutch clock, 400 years old, which is still going. It belongs to Mr. and Mrs. Edward K. Love, and is the oldest on Kissel's list.

A circumstance which renders an expert clock winder's services more necessary than they might ordinarily appear is that the majority of the clocks he services are antiques and a large number are of foreign manufacture. Every year, he says, some of his customers are certain to bring back from Europe a number of foreign timepieces which he must overhaul and put into condition to run. To do this he has to know all there is to know about clocks, for often his new charges have long been on the retired list, gathering dust in attics, and have to be virtually rebuilt, as it is usually impossible to get new parts from the manufacturers—for in many cases the manufacturers have been dead for a hundred years. It is therefore up to Kissel to make in his own shop such parts as are needed or borrow them from junked timepieces. Junked clocks constitute his major source of supply.

In the rear of his shop is a large showcase reaching from floor to ceiling and filled with hundreds of clocks of every size, make and description. They range from the cheapest of modern alarm clocks to antiques of considerable value. These represent the accumulation of unclaimed clocks which have been brought to him in the last 16 years for repairs and then never called for. After a clock has remained in his shop unclaimed for a year, Kissel says, he feels free to borrow parts from it if he has need of them. However, he never feels free to dispose of the clock itself. Some of those he has have been in that showcase for 15 years. If a claimant ever calls for one he replaces the borrowed parts by borrowing again or by manufacturing the needed wheels or springs.

The life of a clock, Kissel explains, is as indeterminate as anything could possibly be. All depends on the care it gets. That is another argument, he says, in favor of an expert clock winder. With occasional replacement of parts, some last for hundreds of years. The oldest "patient" on his list is an old Dutch clock which hangs in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Edward K. Love at 44 Westmoreland place. It is 400 years old. The lacquer is peeling from the case and the figures on the dial are almost obscured, but it still ticks on, keeping time accurately. However, it was in Kissel's hospital recently for rejuvenation.

Another celebrated relic which is still doing service is a clock owned by Mr. and Mrs. William Maffitt, 4315 Westminster place. It is 150 years old and is especially distinguished for the fact that it once hung in the bedroom of Queen Victoria. Numerous others on Kissel's visiting list boast of ages ranging from 100 to 200 years.

THERE is something about a clock, Kissel explains, which makes it infinitely more beloved to its owner than a watch or some article of furniture. It has character and personality. It seems almost to be alive and conscious. A family comes to regard a clock as a member of the family group and will replace it with no other. The older it gets the more beloved it becomes. Also, the more venerable it becomes the farther it progresses toward the front of the house. In the front halls of many of St. Louis' finest homes, he points out, now hang battered antiques which were kitchen clocks when they were new and hung in the sculleries of the grandparents of their present owners. Particularly dear to aging persons are the clocks they first knew as children. The familiar ticking and the peculiarities of striking bring back the memories of childhood. For that reason it is hard to place a valuation on antique clocks. Its worth depends on what it means to the owner. Some of these antiques are virtually priceless. Some are decrepit and temperamental, too.

Quite often clocks get to be habitual liars, Kissel relates, and some of them are chronic invalids who must be nursed carefully and taken to the hospital frequently for treatment for the same recurring disorder. Frequently, in the case of prevaricators, the clock doctor explains, the trouble can be traced to a maid or a butler who sets a clock forward or back to fool the family into believing that dinner was served on time or for some other similar reason. Then they forget to correct it later or set it by guess.

The weather, as well as maids and butlers, is held accountable for many clock disorders. Indeed, sudden

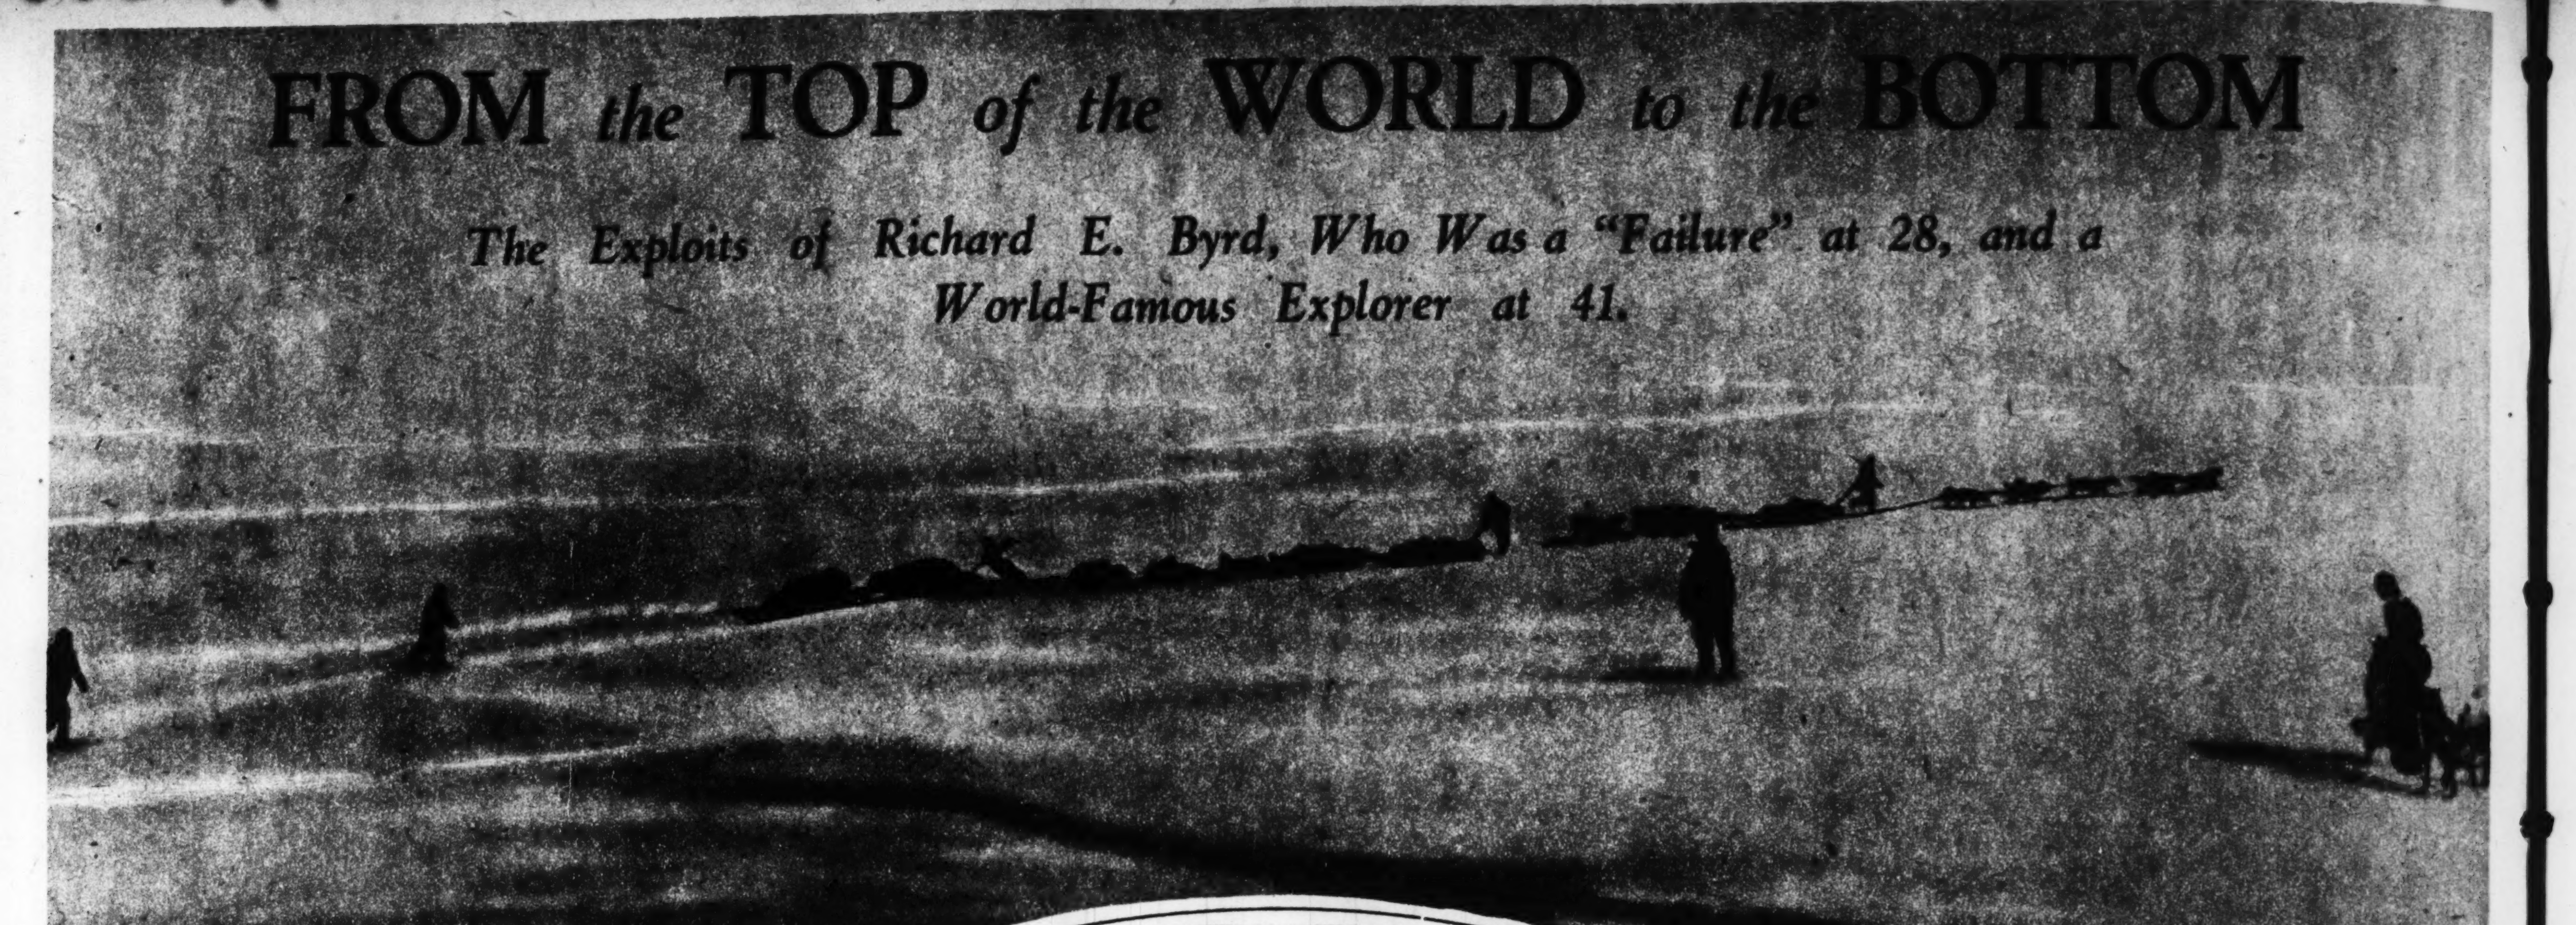
FROM the TOP of the WORLD to the BOTTOM

The Exploits of Richard E. Byrd, Who Was a "Failure" at 28, and a World-Famous Explorer at 41.



At the edge of the great ice barrier, as the dog teams left with supplies for the permanent base of the expedition at Little America.

Commander Richard E. Byrd.

Of the Post-Dispatch Staff

THE Commander looked up from his sextant and smiled. According to his reckoning, the plane was then over the South Pole. In the overheated cabin, the crew of four shook hands. Commander Byrd was now over the "bottom" of the world and he had once been over its "top." This was several weeks ago.

When Dick Byrd was born, the lithe goddess who beckons from the prows of spray-drenched destroyers and flicks her garments in the fog in front of tense airmen marked him for her own. As soon as he was old enough, Byrd took up the flirtation.

He was the type of boy, dear to aunts and cousins, that is forever breaking arms playing "conquer leader" around construction jobs and hanging from limbs of trees. Brother Tom was more sedate and became a Virginia gentleman. Harry raised fancy apples and later was elected Governor of Virginia.

But Dick wanted adventure, although feats involving flying did not occur to him at the time. While at school, at Virginia Military Institute and the University of Virginia, he chose the sea for a career and obtained an appointment to Annapolis.

After a few years at sea, he would go into exploration. There was fun, now, going places where no one else had been; places where the backs of men, who had their eyes too firmly fixed on the goddess ahead, were broken, where expeditions collapsed into piles of water bottles and sledges and men with high hopes became smudges in the snow or sand.

At Annapolis things began to happen that in a few years were to change an aspiring naval cadet into one of the world's foremost aviators and explorers, after almost breaking the youngster's spirit.

THE first break happened while Navy was playing Princeton at football. Midshipman Byrd failed to arise after a scrimmage and was carried off the field. He had fractured his foot. The injury mended in a few months and he was soon back at work in the gymnasium, trying, as captain of the Navy gym team, to devise a new and daring trick on the flying rings which would win the intercollegiate meet.

The trick was to swing in an exceptionally big arc and during the pause at the top do two complete body twists, the first gripping the rings, the second spinning free and grabbing hold before the descent. The first few times he tried it, it worked. The next time he missed one of the rings and fell, landing on his weak foot and shattering several bones. This was in December, 1911, and he was to graduate in June. For five months he lay in the hospital and his room, almost failing in his examinations but managing to graduate. However, the bony knot of a bone on the outer side of his right ankle refused to heal and clicked when he walked. By walking much and permitting the bone fragments to grate together, with terrific pain, Ensign Byrd managed to stimulate a flow of osseous fluid and the bone healed.

Favoring his game foot, Byrd put in four years as a deck officer until he suffered his third accident, a fall down a gangway, which re-shattered the bones of his foot. This time the surgeons fixed two of the bones together with a common nail but the repairs did not suit navy regulations, which required that Byrd be retired on three-quarters pay for life.

"A fizzle," Byrd has described himself at this stage of his life, "ordered home for good, career ended, not enough income to live on, no chance of coming back, trained for a seafaring profession, temperamentally disinclined for business."

And then he took up aviation, but by a devious route. The war came. Byrd was detailed to mobilize militia in Rhode Island and later transferred to a desk job in the Navy Department. As months passed he achieved bigger desks and deeper waste baskets, which were the last things in the world he wanted. He strained for action and the chase after the lady in flowing garments who always assured her followers that just around the next corner was the big show, and then laughed them on to a new chase. His foot throbbed around the galvanized nail. He worried and lost 25 pounds in weight. And then pleaded before a board of surgeons to be allowed a month's trial in aviation. "You're in terrible shape, Byrd," they told him, "but go ahead."

He spent his first day at Pensacola naval air station watching the graceful planes float about in the Florida sun until one suddenly "spun in" and crashed in the bay, killing the pilot. As he stood rooted to the spot a friend invited him for a "hop" and put him through the entire program of stunts. That was when Byrd decided to make aviation his life work. He visualized the next big feat in aviation to be a flight across the Atlantic and began preparing himself. Sent to Canada in charge of American air forces there, he studied maps and other data pertaining to an oceanic flight.

Here another big disappointment awaited him. When the crews were chosen for the three NC flying boats, shortly after the war, the Navy Department ruled that men who had seen "foreign" service during the war were ineligible. Byrd watched the NC boats hop off for the Azores with a heavy heart.

As he sat on a hill watching the planes fade out of sight, word came that the C-5, a non-rigid dirigible in which the Navy hoped to cross the Atlantic, had blown out to sea without its crew. This had been Byrd's other hope.

Back to Washington, where he wrote a bill providing for a Naval Bureau of Aeronautics and persuaded Congressmen to push it, against General William Mitchell's unified air-service plan. The bill passed. He was doing great things for the Navy, but still pestered his superiors for a berth in a trans-Atlantic flight.

He got it while the ZR-2 was under construction in England, being detailed as a member of the crew. He arrived in England just before the huge dirigible's maiden test flight. Places for the flight were scarce and Byrd argued at length with a mechanic named Steele to trade berths.

"Really, sir," replied Steele, "it would make a mess of things for me if I did not go up in her."

That night the ZR-2 exploded and crashed in the Humber River, killing almost the entire crew, including Steele. Thus ended Byrd's third vision of crossing the Atlantic by air.

He returned to America, to be assigned to the McMillan Arctic expedition, on which he flew over and charted thousands of miles of waste lands, using two of his own inventions, a bubble sextant and a drift indicator. And this inspired him with the desire to fly over the North Pole, a project to which he devoted his effort on returning.

As has been told, Byrd and his aid, the late Floyd Bennett, flew from Spitzbergen to the Pole, but not until after they had broken their landing gear several times in trying to take off and almost made a forced landing near their goal when one of the motors sprang an oil leak. Taking a chance, Byrd decided to proceed, and the oil stopped leaking when it reached a lower level.

A national hero on his return from the North Pole flight, Byrd now set about to accomplish his beloved flight over the ocean. In spite of the fact that the Lindbergh and Chamberlin-Levine successes had already taken place and the glow of novelty had by now faded from the idea, Byrd and his three companions took off from Roosevelt Field, June 30, 1927. They did not look for excitement. They found, in fact, new horrors and agonies when their earth-induction compass ceased working and sent them off their course.

For 19 hours of the 40 hours' flying the crew of the America saw neither land, sea or ship, so wretched was the weather which dogged their course. Then, after passing over Brest, within a few miles of Paris the compass went bad.

Darkness had fallen and rain beat against the windows of the plane. The clouds, so thick that the land was barely visible, made low flying dangerous. With no idea as to directions, Byrd steered a course toward what he thought was Le Bourget Field. An hour passed, two hours, and no Paris. Three hours and four hours over Western France, but where? Five hours and a glance at the gasoline gauge revealed the fact that there remained enough fuel for only one more hour of flying.

TOTALLY deaf from the interminable roaring of the motors, the four flyers looked at one another. A forced landing out of a prison of blackness into a forest, perhaps, or on top of the houses of a village, or a sickening bounce over rough terrain and the crew trapped and twisted in metal and fabric—these are their prospects.

Then a glint of the sea appears below a wing tip and the shore line is visible. Blindly, the adventurers perceive, they have doubled back over their tracks and are now headed on a return journey to America. Byrd hastily pencils a note to the pilot, who reads it and nods. A landing on the water has been ordered.

The plane dips down, bounds like a porpoise off several waves and takes a plunge 15 feet under water. The sea surges in doors and windows and Byrd, Bernt Balchen, Bert Acosta and George Noville fight their way out of the undersea trap that their cabin has become. They bob to the surface like corks and paddle their way 200 yards to the shore and the village of Ver-Sur-Mer, France, which for several days becomes the focus of the world's news.

Before leaving Paris, Byrd began laying plans for a flight to the South Pole from a base in the Antarctic, now famous as Little America. Here was a region which for centuries had defied the attempts of men to fathom more than a few of its mysteries, here an unequalled field for the gathering Crowds gathered around the Byrd plane, "America," when it was dragged ashore at Ver-Sur-Mer, France, after making a forced landing.

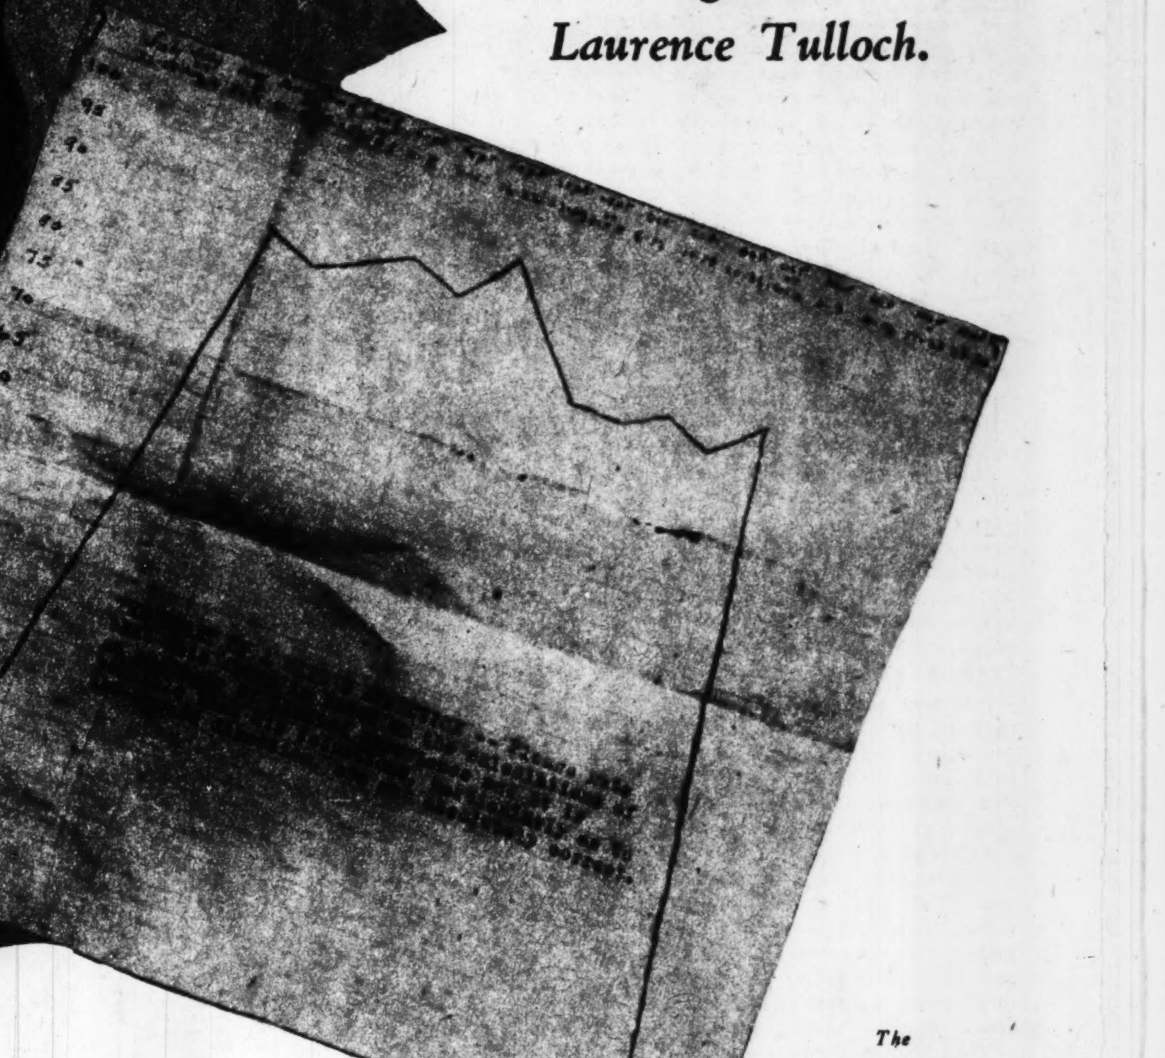
TRAGEDY of the LOVE CHART GIRL

The Strange Document Found in Mrs. Gertrude Lavine's Effects and How It Led to an Accusation Against Laurence Tulloch.

Mrs. Gertrude Hawkins Lavine.



The mysterious "Chart of a Maid's Affection."

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine

SAN FRANCISCO.

A GIRL, a man, a few drinks in an apartment in San Francisco's Bohemian quarter. A revolver shot, death, the police. Questioning, cross-questioning. Medical examination. The man's denial. A theory of suicide. And almost a verdict of suicide. Then, the finding, in the dead girl's effects, of a strange document, a "love chart," graphed in the manner of the steam chart of an engineer, or the manner of the statistical sheet of a financial report. A "love chart," showing the course of a woman's affections, a strange attempt to trace the course of infatuation. And then the man's weakening, his confession that the girl was killed by a shot accidentally discharged from a revolver he was showing her, his arrest, the charge of murder placed against him. And finally the preliminary hearing, at which a charge of manslaughter was substituted for the murder charge.

MRS. GERTRUDE HAWKINS LAVINE, a divorcee, was found dead in the flat of Laurence Tulloch on Telegraph Hill. A revolver lay at her feet. In another room, on a table, two bridge hands lay untouched.

There were two men in the house at the time: Tulloch, once an actor, now a radio program director, and another man who shared the flat with him. Both men told the same story. The woman, after having dined with Tulloch, had accompanied him home. Before long some other friends of theirs arrived. There had been some drinking; the party did not break up until the early hours of the morning.

The man who shared Tulloch's apartment retired, went to sleep. And Tulloch, stepping into his dressing room for a moment, was astounded by a shot. Running into the main room, he found Mrs. Lavine upon the floor, shot through the head, dead.

The police investigated. Some thought of murder, others believed it was suicide. A post-mortem was begun. But there seemed no good reason to disbelieve Tulloch's story.

Then, examining the dead woman's effects, the police came upon her strange document, her love chart.

Nina Susoff.

Drawn on a sheet of heavy paper, eight inches square, it had been prepared with care and precision. Its lines were ruled in draftsman's ink; its notations printed with exactness. Its record covered five months, beginning on July 22 and extending into November. The "affection line" began at zero in July, ranged upward until it reached a high place on August 18, fluctuated slightly, always retaining a high altitude until September 23, when it reached its peak, fell off a bit, rose, fluctuated, and then dropped precipitously from November 3 until by November 17 it was back at zero.

On the chart was written:

"THE CHART OF A MAID'S AFFECTIONS—Please note that this index is based on calculations of an engineer of limited experience and it is possible that his deductions, particularly as to the upward direction, are not absolutely correct."

AND, appended to the chart, was a note, saying, "I live a life of dreams. From the all too fleeting realities of the day come the dreams of the night.

"Perhaps you think a dream is nothing. Realities are only worth something to you when they are dreams. And when you have reality, what do you do? Make it into your dreams again. After all, what is life made of? Dreams."

"Suicide?" thought the police. Maybe not. Might not this girl have been slain by the suitor depicted in her graph of cooling affection. Or—perhaps she did kill herself after learning that the love she thought she had discovered had ended after all in nothingness.

But they'd see about it. They'd see Tulloch. They did, they took him to jail. His examination began.

In the meantime, one of the city's physicians continued his careful examination of the girl's body. He found that the revolver whose shot had brought her to her end was held less than an inch from her temple, for the bullet had fractured the skull in several places and that only could have happened if the muzzle of the weapon had been held against, or almost against, the girl's head. But—that still did not prove the case. That still could leave it murder—or suicide.

And the police questioning went on. On and on and on.

Then Tulloch, unable to stand it any longer, cried out, "Stop. I shot her. My lies are growing like a snowball rolling down hill. I can't go on. It was an accident. I showed her the revolver. She reached to take it. Somehow my finger pressed the trigger. She fell. But it was an accident." He was given a preliminary hearing the other day and the charge was reduced to manslaughter.

Tulloch came to San Francisco only three months ago. Once a student of the University of California, while there he was prominent in dramatic affairs.

After leaving college he went to New York, where he appeared with the Provincetown Players and in the modern-dress production of "Hamlet." Later he went to Germany. There he spent some time in motion pictures. Then came his return to San Francisco, where he secured a place with a radio broadcasting chain.

Tulloch is married, the husband of Nina Susoff, a dancer, now in New York. The night after his confession she called him from there by long distance telephone. She told him she believed in him, that she wanted him to return to her "as soon as this terrible thing is over."

Tulloch has been released on bond. But his trial remains before him.

DISAPPEARS for NINE YEARS—COMES HOME on a STRETCHER

Dr. Lorenzo Norton—Once an Outstanding Member of His Profession—Had Been Working as a Gardener.

PORTLAND, Me.

DR. LORENZO NORTON, onetime prominent figure in New England medical circles, and for years active in health-administration work of this locality, who mysteriously disappeared for nine years, came home to Maine a short time ago—on a stretcher.

Several weeks ago, while lying dangerously ill in a ward of the Winchester Hospital of Mt. Kisco, N. Y., he admitted his identity. His ability to diagnose correctly his condition, and suggest the necessary therapeutic measures for the relief of the symptoms presented by his case, led the physicians of the New York institution to ferret out his history. When they told him of the seriousness of his illness, a fact which the patient also realized, the stricken man confessed that he was none other than "the mysteriously missing Dr. Lorenzo Norton, of East Baldwin, Maine."

But he uttered no word to lift the veil of secrecy which still shrouds his disappearance from this city on June 1920—nine and a half years ago.

Mrs. Anna Norton, his faithful wife, who had rushed to his side in New York when notified by Mt. Kisco officials of her husband's desperate illness, accompanied the sick physician home. She has been with him constantly since November, when she arrived at his bedside, following the news that he had been found.

When Mrs. Norton reached the side of her stricken husband, all he would vouchsafe as a reason for his sudden dropping out of sight was "a bad business deal." He never fully explained that, and Mrs. Norton at the time acknowledged her complete mystification over such an explanation, as his business affairs were in order and he was well fixed with worldly goods when he vanished.

Even now, the wife of Dr. Norton is unable to account satisfactorily for his dropping from sight, as the physician is not inclined to discuss the affair in detail.

INQUIRIES conducted by his wife at Mt. Kisco reveal that he followed a number of occupations, from the time he abandoned his lucrative surgical and medical practice.

After his disappearance from Portland he became the caretaker of a Westchester, N. Y., estate.

Later he became a gardener, at which occupation, according to reports, he seemed extremely happy. He worked for a wealthy family on the outskirts of Mt. Kisco, and was held in high esteem by his fellow workers, because of his ability to treat them for physical ailments, some of which were not of the minor variety.

As a result of a maternity case, he came under the suspicion of a leading Westchester physician that he was something more than a caretaker and gardener. It seems that the Stork was about to pay a visit to the wife of one of his fellow workers, and a neighbor woman was called in. The gardener was also asked to give some advice, which he did, though declining to act as a doctor. And he dismissed the neighbor woman, telling the husband to call a duly qualified physician.

When the physician in question responded, he sought out the gardener and asked him the reasons for his action in the case. The then unknown Dr. Norton explained that the neighbor woman was in the habit of attending her little truck farm, and he was afraid that she might cause an infection with the germs of tetanus, which thrive in garden soil.

The gardener's knowledge of such matters and his recognition of the dangers of infection were such as to convince the Westchester medico that he was dealing with a trained physician. It was not until the ailing gardener's true identity was revealed a short time ago that the physician told the story concerning Dr. Norton.

After his job as gardener had ended, because of his employer going to Europe, the Portland physician became a chauffeur for another wealthy family of Westchester. He stayed with this family for several years, annually going to Florida with his employers. One of the strange features in connection with the disappearance of the Maine medical man was that he never dropped his name, Lorenzo Norton, but he never told anybody he was a duly qualified and licensed physician, and a graduate of one of the leading medical schools of the United States.

But the Dr. Norton, who recently returned home, was not the same rugged individual who left here on that Summer's day in 1920. Weak and white, and as enigmatical as ever, he was lifted from a New York train, and borne on a stretcher to a waiting ambulance, which sped with him to St. Barnabas Hospital here.

THE wasted man's view of this city, where he was a well-known figure up to the moment of his strange disappearance, was not a cheerful one after the long years of absence. It was still dark when he arrived and the big railroad station was all but deserted.

On the station platform, beside the ambulance attendants, was his daughter, Mrs. Marie Norton Small, who was a bride when Dr. Norton dropped from sight. And there was with her Dr. Eugene Libby, an old friend and medical associate, who came to greet his colleague of other days.

The streets of the city were deserted as the sick man viewed them from the ambulance cot, and not a face that he knew appeared on the swift ride from the railroad station to the hospital. There he was put to bed, and put under the care of Dr. Alfred Mitchell Jr., internist, and Dr. Henry H. Brock, surgeon, who will perform the operation which, it is hoped, will restore Dr. Norton to health.

The elderly man—he is 72 years of age—smiled faintly as he saw his daughter and Dr. Libby on the railroad station platform and lifted an emaciated arm to wave at them as he murmured a feeble "Hello."

The medical men who are in attendance upon him at St. Barnabas Hospital reported that he had stood the trip from New York well, but that he was a very sick man. They could not say when the necessary operation would be performed, pointing out that it could not be done immediately, because of the patient's weakened state.

Dr. Norton talked very little. But he said he was glad to be "back home again." He found comfort in his reunited family, smiling his relief of mind at his wife and daughter, who are now constantly at his bedside.

During his medical days in Maine, Dr. Norton served as County Physician and Health Officer of the section in which this city is located, as well as being one of the selectmen of East Baldwin, a residential suburb of Portland.

He was a member of the leading medical bodies of the State and the United States, before which he had read many scientific papers. He was also prominent in civic and fraternal circles.

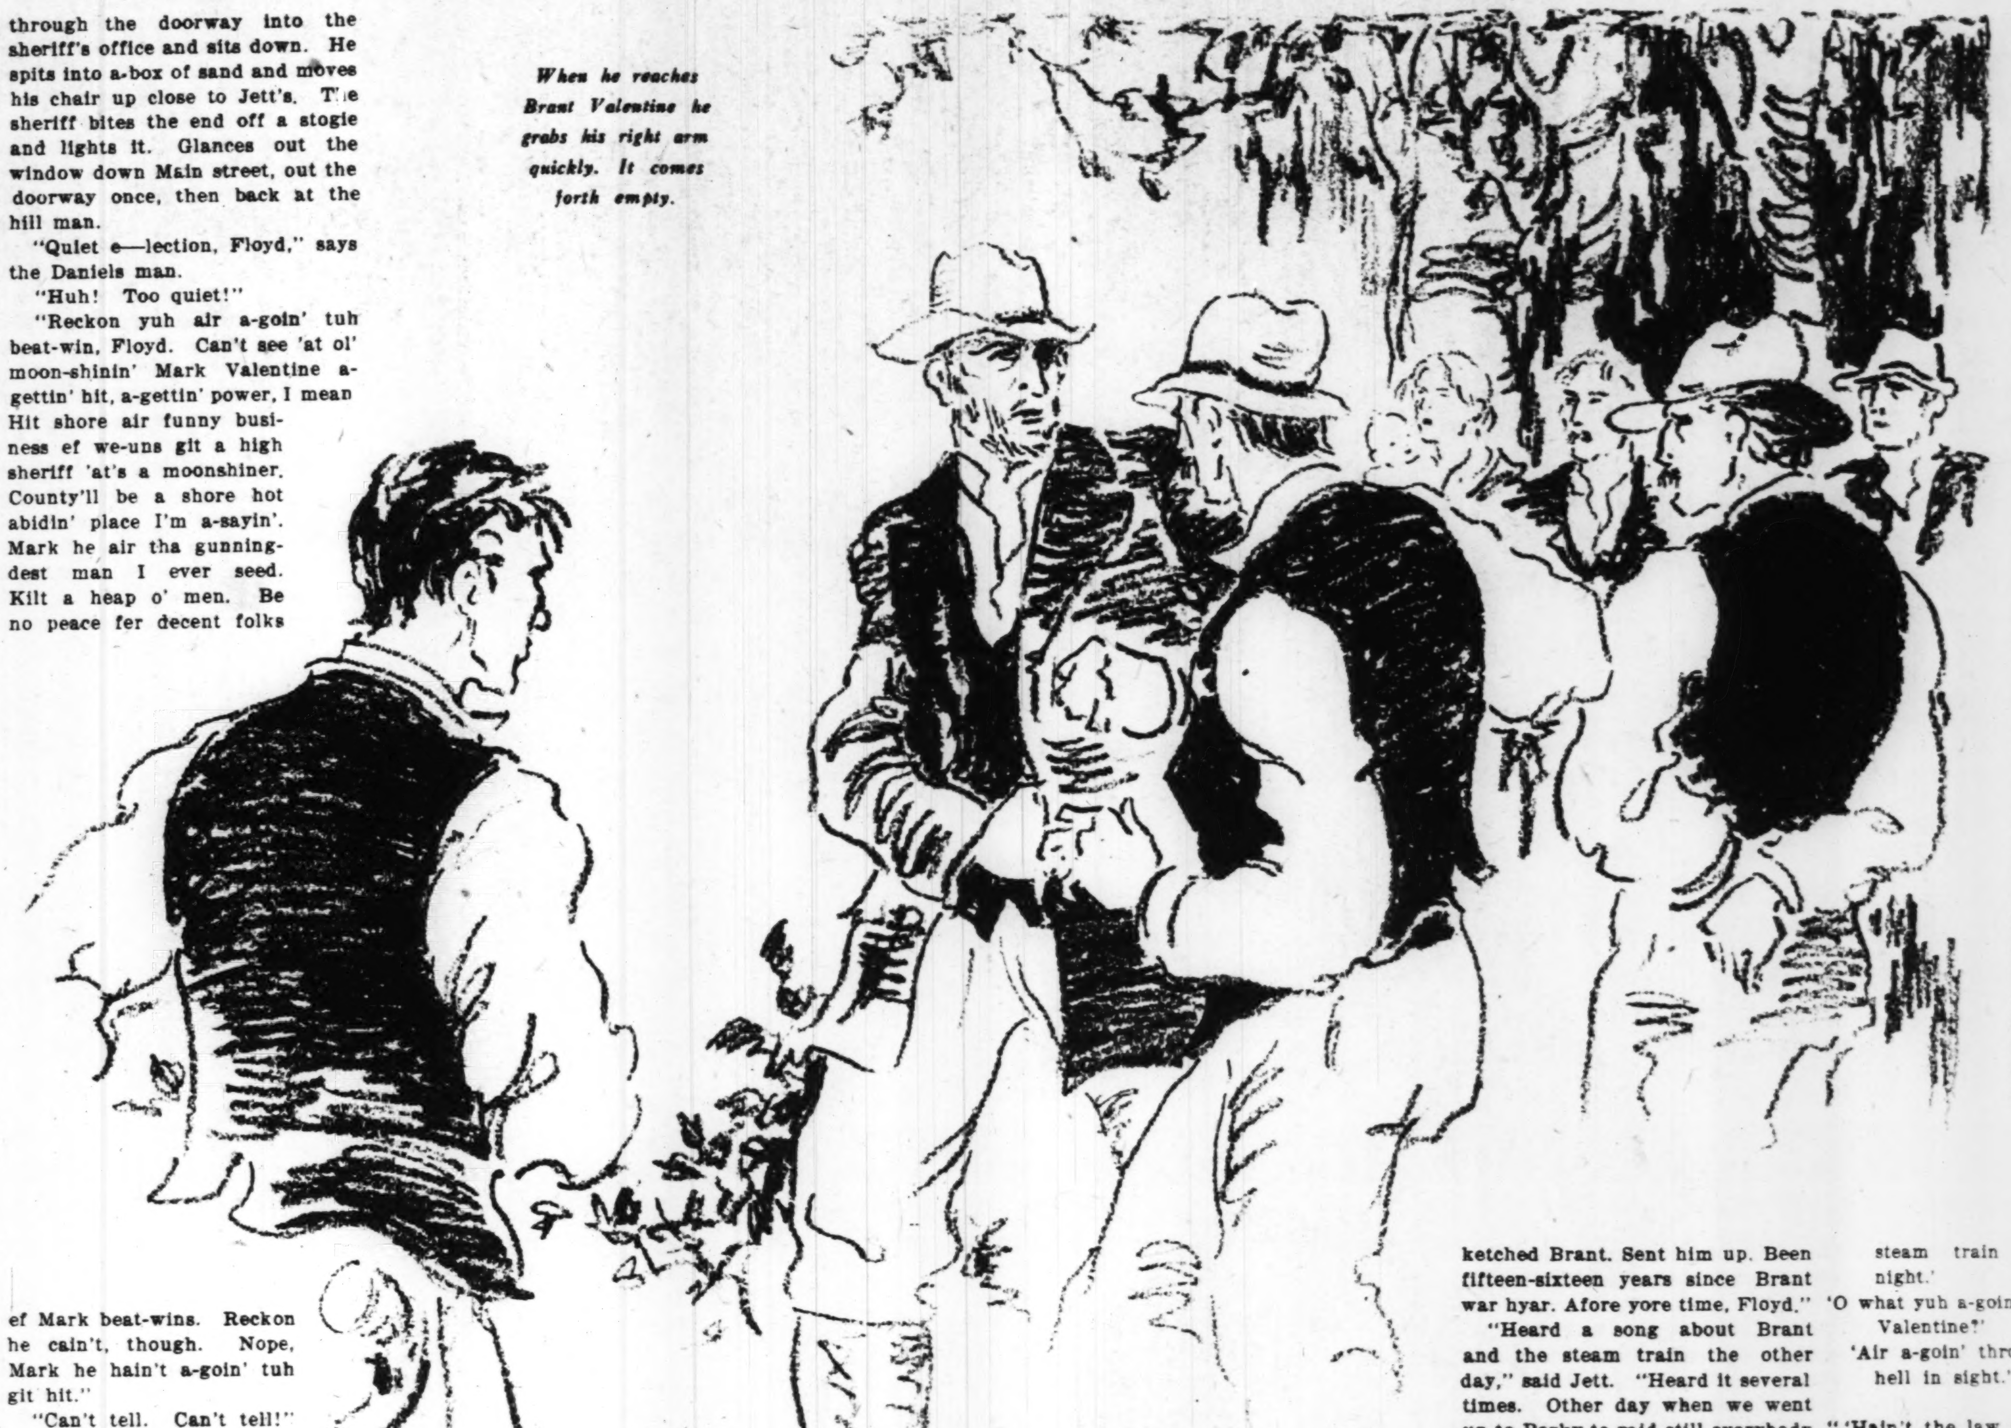
Fiswoode Tarleton



When he reaches Brant Valentine he grabs his right arm quickly. It comes forth empty.

ELECTION day in Leeston and folks trickling into town from the hills to vote and shop. Wagons, mules and gaunt mountain men and women dot the five roads. Wagons creak down Main street and dry-land sleds crunch the mud. Mules and oxen plod silently. Mules and lean horses carrying whole families dump them in front of the business stores. Both sides, the street is lined with beasts tied to hitch-racks. Hogs wallow in their holes and cows roam with their noses turning over rubbish heaps. Some bellow for their calves.

Under the porticos of the business stores men, women and children make groups. Some stare silently at newcomers who hitch their mules to the racks. Some whisper among themselves. Legs swing over portico floors and eyes stare from under bonnets and wide-brimmed hats. Some hill men and hill women sit under the big elms in the courthouse yard. Men lie flat and women lean their backs against tree trunks. Men whittle or whisper.

Hill men gather on the board walk in front of the restaurant and move from mule to mule, from horse to horse. Ox to ox. Hill traders with more cunning than a gypsy feel over the livestock, look into beasts' mouths. Unhurried men with expressionless faces make terms in low voices, trade or buy without animation. Traders mount horses and mules, race them, whip them to a gallop up and down Main street. Mud flies and hoofs pound.

Trade in the business stores is brisk. In the general store old man Steele hustles from counter to counter. Hill men sit on counters, eat canned peaches and crackers, or drink pink soda water from bottles.

Steve Dodie, the town marshal, leans against the casement of the general store. The star on his shirt glitters, and the butt of his .45-gun taps the wall as he shifts his body.

Down in the picnic grove under the canopy of spreading elms, hill folks are heating fotched-in victuals over wood fires. Beyond the picnic grove, where Meddlesome Creek bends into town, hill men are shooting rats. Hog rifles roar and Mausers crack. Men and boys sit on the banks of Meddlesome, hit rats square, and watch them pass with the waters, kicking.

MEN linger in the dark hallway of the courthouse after voting. Throw suspicious eyes around. New voters enter slowly and scrutinize those who loaf in the hallway as they pass into the County Clerk's office to cast their ballots. In the voting place the judges and clerks sit at long pine tables, fix their eyes on those who enter. Alert eyes fly to the door. Hard eyes scrutinize. Sometimes hands creep nearer the butts of pistol-guns on the table. A deputy sheriff sits in the corner holding a carbine. He rises leisurely, steps over to a voter and searches him. Finds a gun, marches his prisoner to a cell at the end of the long hallway.

Tension everywhere. Because everybody's concerned in some way. Everybody's related in some way to somebody up for election. Men and women shut their mouths tight and watch—watch for moves, watch for firearms, tucked away in jean pants, calico shirts, or wagons.

Women sit on the stairway that leads to the courtroom upstairs. Some chew snuff. Some smoke pipes; spit into boxes of sand. New arrivals look in the big double doorway and enter timidly. Some carry saddlebags stuffed with groceries. Some look in the tax collector's office a long time before they enter. When they stand before the table of the tax collector they push their tax bills across to him. The business is done without talk. Mostly pantomime.

In the sheriff's office next to the tax collector's, Floyd Jett, the county officer, High Sheriff Jett, sits in a hickory-bark chair and cocks his feet on his table-desk. He looks out his office door at those who pass. Hill men look in at him. Some speak. Some nod. Some scowl.

Tab Daniels, the six-foot-and-a-half mountain woodsman from Pennyroyal settlement, swings through the doorway into the sheriff's office and sits down. He spits into a box of sand and moves his chair up close to Jett's. The sheriff bites the end off a stogie and lights it. Glances out the window down Main street, out the doorway once, then back at the hill man.

"Quiet e—lection, Floyd," says the Daniels man.

"Huh! Too quiet!"

"Reckon yuh air a-goin' tuh beat-win, Floyd. Can't see 'at ol' moon-shinin' Mark Valentine a-gettin' hit, a-gettin' power, I mean Hit shore air funny business ef we-uns git a high sheriff 'at's a moonshiner. County'll be a shore hot abidin' place I'm a-sayin'. Mark he air tha gunningdest man I ever seed. Kilt a heap o' men. Be no peace fer decent folks ef Mark beat-wins. Reckon he cain't, though. Nope, Mark he hain't a-goin' tuh git hit."

"Can't tell. Can't tell!" says the sheriff. "Strange things happen sometimes." Floyd Jett rises, looks out the window. He takes Tab Daniels by the elbow. They go out together. Pass down the hallway. Pause on the steps leading to the courthouse yard. Both men look up and down Main street.

"Mark Valentine air a-doin' some right smart struttin'," says Tab Daniels. "Mus' reckon he air high sheriff a'ready. Seed him while ago with Steve Dodie tha Marshal. They shore war confabbin'. Mark a-paradin' roun', talkin' big talk. Huh!"

Sheriff Jett moves down the steps alone, crosses the courthouse yard. When he reaches the edge of the board walk he pauses to look up and down Main street. The talk of two women leaning against an elm reaches his ears. Two of the Shakspeare women from Milk Sick Cove. Old Ruth Shakspeare herself who in her youth used to ride wild horses without a bridle or saddle, who used to snatch off the bridle to whip her horse with. "Hell-jumping" Ruth, who used to leap an eight-rail fence with a bucket of water in each hand, is talking.

"Seven year 'at O'Gowd boy war at hit, larnin' tuh shoot. Jined Jess James tuh larn rifle-gun. An' seven year tuh clock-minute O'Gowd boy come back and killed his uncle who whip-beated him all time."

The county officer pulls away from the talk. Pulls away from the droning of old Ruth Shakspeare, who's telling the other woman about a rock fight in Meddlesome when her grandson and one of the Meadowes boys settled a dispute with rocks.

He leans against an elm by the road, absently watches two hill boys slide off a gray mule and talk heatedly while one of them ties the mule to a hitching rack.

"HIT war a sight, I'm a-tellin' yuh. Blood spattered mail-order book in my hand. Blood war a-flyin' ever'-whar. Two Sidson men jes' slashed Tate Torkey tuh bits. Right in Pennyrile store. Blood all over letter I war a-fotchin' to my pap."

"Hain't ketched Sidson men yit," said the other boy. "Two years gone an' hain't ketched Sidsons. Reckon we-uns won' see Sidsons any more."

"Maybe gone tuh Arizony."

"Nebrasky, maybe."

The sheriff turns around sharp, faces the hill boys. Their talk is chopped off. They move away quickly, looking back over their shoulders at the county officer.

"Killings. Nothing but killings!" says Jett to himself. "Can't talk about anything else. Men, women and children steeped in blood and gore." His eyes sweep the town and come to rest finally on the picnic grove. He sees a mountain boy playing at feud. Sees him hold a hickory stick like a gun. The boy's pointing at some man under the portico of the general store. Killing in his mind. Killing some old enemy of his people.

A hill man steps out from under the general-store portico and crosses the street. The boy's hickory stick is trained on him until he disappears into the drug store. The boy is of the Valentine family, and the hill man is a Daniels. Old feud still smoldering. Ten-year-old boy trying to fan blood hate to flame.

JETT sees suddenly that five men of the Valentine family squat on the ground near the boy with the hickory stick. The Valentines, the trouble clan, the most vindictive and powerful family in the county, are holding an assembly. War powwow it looks like to Jett. Trouble anyway. "Election and trouble," thinks the sheriff. "Isn't worth it. Being sheriff isn't worth the trouble. Didn't want to run for office. Why am I doing it?" Echoes of voices come to him, echoes of words said by the better people of the hills and town. Jeff agreed to run when folks pointed out that, left to some moonshiner or some easily influenced man, the county would be the bloody ground always. His, the most isolated of mountain counties, has to be preserved. Leeston, the most isolated of county seats, with no railroad, no telegraph office, no roads but creek beds leading to it, has to be saved.

The sheriff shifts his legs. Relights his stogie. His movement draws eyes. Eyes glance at him, then settle on newcomers or a dog fight in the mud. A sudden realization comes to Jett. A sudden releasing of memories. Memories of other election days. They stand out sharp. Ever since he was a boy, election days have brought about a killing—one killing at least, usually more. Shootings on election day have been as regular as speeches on the Fourth of July. As men and women come to Leeston on the Fourth and assemble in the picnic grove to hear the Commonwealth's attorney, the Judge, or old Lawyer Carr deliver orations about George Washington, so they come on election day to see who's going to be killed. A killing is part of getting men into office.

"BLOOD's in their minds," thinks Jett. "Men are thinking death, thinking war. Hate, the father of war, father of all trouble in the hills, is resting now, is seated in the souls of somebody, seated and waiting. 'What a man thinketh.' "

The county officer tries to clean his mind of the thought. Forces into his mind the thought that maybe today will be an exception. Maybe today will pass without trouble. If it does tradition may break down, crumble a little year by year. His thinking so may not bring about heaven and peace in Leeston but he mustn't throw his thoughts on the other side of the scale. "Maybe we won't have trouble," he thinks. "Maybe things will be all right."

He looks up Main street, sees stragglers still walking into town. Sees a lone mule bearing a man, woman and two children. Mule's loaded from neck to rump. He sees the mule suddenly pulled to a halt. Sees the hill men afoot suddenly stop and look back. And he hears hoofbeats. The flash of a sorrel horse as he turns in at Five Corners makes the folks under the porticos and in the grove stiffen. Some sit up, some lying on the grass in the courthouse yard rub their eyes and turn their faces around to look.

The beard of the coming man on the sorrel that canters easily now past the courthouse and the rim of his hat pulled way down over his eyes quicken the sheriff's interest. Men trying to hide under felt hats and beards, if they are strangers, always arouse Jett's suspicions. "A beard that's not silky, a tough beard that's allowed to grow for the first time," is the substance of Jett's first thought.

Keeping his face straight ahead, looking neither to right nor left, the rider passes the business stores and stops his horse at the picnic grove. The sheriff can tell by the expressions on the faces of the men and women under the porticos that they don't know the horseman—at least, they haven't recognized him yet.

Down by the picnic grove the horseman stops his sorrel, dismounts, ties him to an elm tree. Then enters the grove and sits down with the Valentine family. None of the Valentines move, make any sign, say a word. None even look at him. The leisurely and indifferent attitude of the Valentines doesn't fool Jett, though. And since suspicion is aroused in his mind he's ransacking his memory. He feels that he should know the newcomer. To the sheriff the newcomer is a bad omen. A shadow. A sign of trouble. And rising within the county officer is the strange thought that the newcomer is the crystallization of the blood and gore talk that's been going on in the courthouse yard, the grove, and under the porticos. Men, women and children have been talking about killings; they've been expecting killings. And as if it were made to order, as if the wishing brought it, as if the obsession of the election-day crowd crystallized, Jett sees the bearded stranger, the addition to the Valentine circle, as the sign of trouble.

Suddenly he finds Tab Daniels at his side again.

The tall woodcutter from Pennyroyal leans against the other side of the elm tree and looks indifferently toward Five Corners, looks away from the picnic grove. "Know tha hoss-rider, Floyd?"

"Trying to place him," says the sheriff. "Seems like I ought to know him."

"Brant Valentine," whispers Tab Daniels.

"HUH! Brant Valentine. So that's Brant. Don't believe I ever saw him before. Before my time, must be. Been away a long time, hasn't he?"

"Brant air a killer."

"Murder on his head?"

"Three-four, I reckon. Brant he kilt ol' man Pelton an' his boy. Kilt pro'bition man, too. While Federal man war a-goin' down mountain Brant he kilt him. Never ketched Brant kase he went West. Heerd he held up steem train in Arizony. Arizony sheriffs ketched Brant. Sent him up. Been fifteen-sixteen years since Brant war hyar. Afore yore time, Floyd."

"Heard a song about Brant and the steam train the other day," said Jett. "Heard it several times. Other day when we went up to Porky to raid still everybody we met was singing that song. All the Valentines were singing it. The song should have tipped me off to something. Funny I didn't think of something then."

"Meanin' what, Floyd?"

"Well, if I'd have thought, I'd expected Brant. No difference though. I expected somebody. Funny I never thought of Brant!" Jett looks abstractedly across the road.

Tab Daniels' eyes turn toward the picnic grove. He sees the Valentine boy training his stock on the sheriff and himself. The youngest son of the Porky Ridge feudists is reacting to the conspiracy talk of his people gathered near his feet, carrying out their talk, making pantomime of killing.

"Look yander, Floyd. Picnic grove!"

When Jett turns his head to look he sees the boy suddenly tripped by one of his uncles, sent sprawling, and smacked in the face by another of his kin as he rises. The boy betraying their plot receives cuffs all around.

The sheriff sees that some of the folks in the grove, under the porticos and in the courthouse yard have seen the signs, have read them. Some of the men and women begin to fidget. Some rise, stretch, and walk leisurely up toward Five Corners, sit down on the edge of a field.

JETT looks at his watch. It's 3 o'clock. Four hours yet until the voting closes. Probably not half the votes in. Hill men come to town on election day not only to vote but to shop, see things, talk. They're never in a hurry to vote. Some wait for a chance to slip into the voting place in the courthouse after the field is cleared of enemies. Some want to argue politics first. Some wait for other members of their families, wait for cousins and uncles, wait for third and fourth cousins, prefer going in to vote with their full strength.

"Air a-goin' tuh be trouble, Floyd," says Tab Daniels.

"Brant's the cat's paw," says Jett. "Maybe he's been hidden in the hills for months. Brought out today to help force his brother Mark into office."

"Thar's Mark now," says Tab Daniels. "Jes' come out harness shop."

Jett looks down Main street again and sees his opponent for election stop on the board walk and talk to a group of horse traders who gather around a team of sleek, fat mules. He sees that he's talking about mules, feeling mules over. The sheriff's eyes once more fly to the grove. The Valentines are not whispering any more. All look up Main street. When Jett's eyes look up and down the street he sees that everybody under the porticos has eyes on him. Everybody knows he's got to act. The long spell of whispering in the grove has become a defiance.

Suddenly from across the street, from under the shadowed bank portico, singing comes. A Valentine boy, fourth in line from Mark Valentine, the moonshiner, and his killer brother, Brant, lets out his voice:

" 'What air yuh a-waitin' fer, Brant Valentine?'
'I air a-waitin' fer steam train a-tearin' tha night.'
'O what yuh a-goin' ter do, Brant Valentine?'
'Air a-goin' through train like hell in sight.'

" 'Hain't the law a-goin' git yuh, Brant Valentine?'
'Hain't afeard o' varmints er men, little er big.'
'What steam train a-goin' tuh give yuh, Brant Valentine?'
'Give me bags o' gold fer my Arizony gal's rig.' "

Sheriff Jett bites off the end of his stogie. "Riding high," he says to himself. "Heroics. Hero worship. Wanted for murder. Yellow hide at liberty. Yellow as hell. Know he's yellow. All bad men, all killers are yellow. Got to arrest him, of course. Right away. He's got to be jugged and tried, but he ought to be wiped out. More to this business than putting him behind bars. Problem's to get him there and keep him there without adding any glory to his mean hide. Huh. A ballard song to a skunk!"

JETT'S mind dwells for a minute on the old habit of song making in his hills, in this, the "singingdest" county, where the flight of Lindbergh is kept alive with song. Where the horrors of the Titanic are preserved in ballads made when the first news trickled into the hills. Where dark as well as uplifting deeds find records in song. Genius for ballads unweakened by time. King Alfred to the present, minstrelsy kept alive. History recorded in song! A man doesn't have to read to know the drama local and world-wide, from Chaucer's time on down. A page from Chaucer in every stark hill. Full understanding is in Jett's mind. Full appreciation of his ticklish job. When he goes after Brant his kin will rise to a man. And Jett's kin will rise to a man. Then only the militia can settle things. Settle Jett, too. State troops always give a black eye to a peace officer in the hills. Show weakness.

If he, Jett, calls for the militia to ride into town and take charge, station itself on the street, in the grove, in the courthouse; if he, Jett, surrenders to the militia and lets the troopers, "fotched-in men," preserve order at the voting place and tell hill men what to do and what not to do, the neutrals are going to resent it.

"Somebody's going to be killed," says Jett to himself. "Sure as the Romans were 'way back that a victim would spill his blood in the arena, somebody's going to be killed in this town."

squealing Men laugh and watch him. Some leave the porticos and stand by the heads of their mules or horses. Two hill women mount their mules and sit. Down by the restaurant two young hill men approach a bony horse, a sway-back old plug. They pour something on his rump that seems to lift him up in the air. Old plug horse rears, jerks backward, kicks and breaks the paling off the hitch rack. His stiff legs stumble when he tries to gallop. The paling lashes the ground, whips the mud as his head swings it on the end of the hitch rein. "High life," that liquid fire that sears and maddens, that hell-burning that gives a few minutes of renewed youth to the oldest of beasts, is starting horses and mules up and down the line. Men dash from under porticos after their beasts. A hill man grabs one of the "high life" throwers and tosses him into the mud, then starts after his disappearing mule.

THE county officer walks down the board walk to the restaurant. He grabs two young hill men by the shoulders who are leaning against the hitching rack. Searches them. Finds two bottles and dumps the contents on the road. Then he marches them to the courthouse. They are sullen and purse their lips as he puts them into a cage at the end of the courthouse hall. Voters and loungers in the hallway lean against the walls in the hallway and whisper. Voting stops in the county clerk's office. Election officials and voters appear in the doorway of the office and peer down the dark hallway.

The squeal of a horse and the pounding of hoofs come from outside. Jett on the run reaches the front door in time to see his white horse tear across the courthouse yard and down the road toward Five Corners, swinging a broken halter strap. Somebody's been in the stable and touched his horse with "fire." Somebody's turned a pure-bred Blue Grass horse into a maddened beast that will run until it drops. Jett's lips close tight and his face grows livid as his eyes survey the folks in the courthouse yard. Everybody's sitting still. Everybody's quiet. Men continue to whittle. Women nurse their young or knit "kivers," with their backs against the tree trunks. All eyes are on Jett.

A young hill man walks leisurely across the yard, whistling and whittling. He looks back over his shoulder two or three times. Jett has a hunch. It's weak at first, but as he watches the faces of folks it grows stronger. Everybody's looking from the young hill man to Jett now. Looking back and forth. Two women whisper and look first at the young hill man, then at Jett. Jett sees the signs and reads. He cuts across the yard after the whistling hill man, who increases his pace. Keeps ahead of Jett, not by swinging his legs faster but by taking up more ground with each step. When they reach the business stores both men are almost running. The hill man suddenly slips in between a team of mules, disappears for an instant; then the sheriff sees him running for the grove.

Jett sees the Valentines rise in the grove. Sees Brant whispering to them all. Brant's arms are folded. His right hand is inside his coat. "Gun in his shoulder holster," says Jett to himself. The sheriff keeps on going toward the grove, his thumbs hooked in his belt.

The tension's tight under the porticos. Everybody but the Valentines leaves the grove. Mountain men and women and their young leave their victuals to burn over the wood fires and move back to the deep timber. The crowd under the porticos thins out fast. Folks hustle into business stores. Some go into the bank and look out the long window with the cashier. Some climb the stairway to the Argus printing office. Hill men untie their mules and lead them up to Five Corners. Windows up and down the street frame faces, and doorways are filled with mountain and town men who stick out only heads.

AND Jett keeps going, keeps straight for the grove, his thumbs hooked in his belt. He's only fifteen seconds in crossing the road, but a lot of things are observed by him during this time. The forbidding grove, twelve dark-expressioned men eyeing him. The lips of Brant Valentine, Bad Brant, move in whispers. Ned Shakspeare, first cousin of Brant, first cousin to Mark Valentine who's running against Jett for election, Ned who's been in prison twice for moonshining, is whispering and nodding to Brant. The sheriff sees the faces 'way back on the hillside beyond the grove looking over the tops of the tight laurel. The sorrel horse of Brant Valentine champs his bit, the sheriff's boots make a sucking sound as he lifts them from the mud. Nothing else is audible as Jett crosses the road.

"SOMEBODY'S going to be killed in this town," says the sheriff to himself as he reaches the grove. "Going to be bodies laid down here. It's in the air, in souls."

When he reaches Brant Valentine he grabs his right arm quickly. It comes forth empty. A few seconds tick off while the county officer and the bad man eye each other. He sees Brant's eyes rise, close, then open again. Double wink. Signal. Jett reaches inside Brant's coat with his right hand, reaches for the gun carried Western fashion.

A yell comes, loud yell from somewhere under the porticos, warning yell, yell from a friend, peculiar note in it that makes Jett turn his head.

A curtain seems to drop in front of Jett's eyes, black curtain but hot black curtain that burns, that sags into his eyes and sears, makes him throw his hands to his eyes to push the curtain away. He hears a report, and his left leg loses its feeling. Only one leg to support him — and the strange curtain that's hot and doesn't glow, that shuts out everything. He can't stand on one leg, got to go down. He feels the ground but he seems to keep going down. 'Way down into a pit, going slow but going down. He hears gunfire, shouts, yells. An uproar above him where it's light. Where the world is, above the sod, there is war. Pretty soon others will lay their bodies down. Pretty soon he'll have company going down.

"NOTHING to see. Nothing! Maybe something to feel," thinks Jett. His hands feel around slowly. Glide over something soft—covers. His fingers step up his chest, to his face, to the place where his eyes should be. Still a curtain. This time a curtain he can feel.

"Don't Floyd! Lie still. Can't take it off yet." Woman's voice says it—his woman. "Be all right by an' by."

"What happened?" he asks feebly. "Who-all was killed in this town?"

"Mustn't talk, must lie still, Floyd."

The slow stepping of a mule comes from the street.

"Must be night," says the sheriff.

"Yes, it's night," says the voice of his woman. "See if you can't sleep."

A voice suddenly rises in song; hill man going home. Hill man singing and mule stepping through the mud.

"High Sheriff Jett braved twelve bad men,
Jett afeared o' nothin' we-uns could see.
Stood alone like Daniel in ol' lions' den,
Faced Killer Brant purty as yuh please.

"'High life' flung in Sheriff's eyes,
Sheriff as blind as bats kin be.
Oh, what did Brant do when Sheriff can't see?
I air a-tellin' yuh all, lissen tuh me.

"Brant war yaller, big yaller streak
Made him shoot Sheriff blind as a bat.
Oh, what did men do a-hidin in street
When they seed High Sheriff shot by a rat?

"Guns an' knives come out o' wagons an' sleds
Sod began a-runnin' with blood an' gore.
Men fotched Sheriff tuh home an' bed,
An' men fotched rope from gen'al store.

"Mob kilt Brant's kin 'at didn't flee,
Ketched Bad Brant, hung him to a limb;
Pulled him up quick on a big elm tree,
Then went tuh co'tehouse an' voted Jett in.

"Bad Brant's body air a-swingin' from tree,
Body up high an' soul gone down.
Hit's a blacky night but Lord kin see; changes in temperature are likely to be followed by an epidemic of clock ailments. This is due to the simple fact that heat expands metal and cold causes it to contract, thus throwing the clock off its stride. Much regulating is necessary both in spring and fall, Kissel says, these being the seasons when clocks suffer most. Excessive dampness also is hard on a clock's constitution and causes the stroke to have a hoarse, unfamiliar sound at times.
Lord fotched kiver fer bloody groun'."

A view of Kissel's clock hospital is a sight well worth the seeing. The small shop usually is filled to overflowing with timepieces that represent hundreds of makes and styles and a great variety of periods. There are Dutch clocks, Swiss clocks, French clocks and American clocks of all shapes, sizes and designs; weight clocks and spring clocks, some so old that their wooden wheels are falling apart and some so new that they should have been taken to the dealer instead of the repair man. The confusion of ticking sounds like a nest of crickets, and when they all get to striking at once the bedlam is terrific. Also rather amusing, for each clock has its own statement to make about the correct time, and makes it right lustily. The fight for recognition is keen, like that in a barnyard full of roosters, each bent upon getting the credit for announcing daylight.

Exploits of Commander Byrd

of facts and figures awaited by scientists the world over.

Some of the questions Byrd's expedition hopes to solve are: How deep is the ice cap which covers a territory as large as the United States? Are there two continents, divided by an ice stream, or one? Are the mountain ranges part of the Andean chain? What is the origin of the strange storms which rise in the South and die suddenly away?

Perhaps, too, it may be possible to determine at the South Pole just how the earth's negative electrical charge is replenished and what causes the Aurora, which is better studied here than in the North.

To solve these problems Byrd included in the personnel of his expedition scientific men capable of handling each problem.

Already, in the face of the most up-to-date preparations, the expedition has produced its adventurous moments. Byrd and three companions have sailed in an airplane over the South Pole and gambled on their gasoline supply being sufficient to carry them back to their base, after it had been depleted past their expectations. In this trip it was necessary to throw sacks of food overboard in order to lighten the ship's load and enable it to fly over a mountain range. On another trip of exploration, Byrd and several companions were forced to land on the ice, where they spent several days battling a polar hurricane. Foresight, quick and accurate judgment in emergencies, cleverness and ever-present good fortune pulled Byrd through in both instances, as before, and preserved him for further exploits.

A "failure" at 28, at 41 Byrd has flown over both the Poles, mapped miles of Arctic land, flown the Atlantic, received the Congressional Medal of Honor, heard himself praised by the President, been acclaimed a hero, decorated for saving a drowning man in Haiti, appointed Commander by special act of Congress and honored by various American and foreign societies. He has sought adventure and scientific knowledge and known the thrill of whipping the unknown without, as yet, suffering the fate meted out to others of his type.

How long his luck will keep pace with his skill and daring is hard to predict. What he will do when his present stay in Antarctica is over is something which only he knows. It is certain, however, that the foot held together by a galvanized nail will not be cocked up on a desk in Washington for the rest of its owner's career—not while it can kick a rudder bar in pursuit of the lady whom most men are able to follow only in books.

WHEN jobs seem scarce and the turndowns many . . . that's a good time to check up on one's self.

More and more, employers are looking for extra qualifications in the people they hire.

What are these requirements that make the difference between getting a job and not getting it? . . . between being "unwanted" or belonging somewhere?

Self-confidence . . . and how to get it

Commanding the respect of others, begins of course with improving one's own opinion of one's self.

But what many of us forget is that there's a way of building up our self respect that's as simple as it's certain: starting each day clean . . . 100% clean.

Where personality comes from

Everyone has personality . . . if it isn't smothered by "complexes." All one needs to do is be one's natural self. Here again, no better cure for self-consciousness has ever been invented than keeping clean, from the skin out, every day.

Character . . . what shows you have it

Suppose you were the employer. Fifty applicants to choose from, and not one you've ever seen before! How would you decide between the last half-dozen?

Necks, collars, shirts, stockings, hands, handkerchiefs, faces, complexions, hair . . . these are the things you'd notice, probably, to get a line on character.

Alertness, "pep," good looks

For waking people up, and putting them on their toes, nothing naturally is quite so good as the every-morning tub or shower.

For well-groomed hands, there's nothing like the regular use of a good hand brush.

For a healthy clear complexion, (and regardless of what other rituals may be followed) nothing is more necessary than a daily, pore-freeing wash with soap and warm water.

Since dust and dirt kill hair luster, and keep nice hair from looking nice, nothing takes the place of the frequent shampoo.

And, finally, nothing adds the sheer attractiveness to our clothes that fresh cleanliness does.

How wives and mothers can help

Attention wives and mothers! It concerns you, too, that cleanliness today has so much to do with the size of pay-checks.

For you are the ones who decide which is to be considered the most important in your household: clean clothes for everyone, or "keeping down the size of the wash".

You also can help by providing: individual towels; plenty of soap; an orderly, inviting bath room; a home that sparkles generally; and last but not least, the benefit of your own good example with respect to clean hands, face, hair, body, clothes.

RAPS SNOW

Flakes Under Fire as Peril to Helpless Adam's Apple.

MADAME PRESIDENT and ladies of the James Branch Cabell Tuesday Morning Club:

It gives me more pleasure than I can express to be here with you in your wonderful little city on this auspicious Thursday afternoon.

When your chairman—your charming chairman, if I may say so, hmm—said to me just a few minutes ago: "Be careful what you say; those cocktails I gave you have a kick you don't notice until after you've committed the crime and it's too late"; when your charming chairman said that to me, I was reminded of the story about President Lincoln, when certain detractors of General Grant came to him and told him that Grant drank to excess.

"So he drinks, eh?" was Lincoln's comment. "Well, I think it's a Grant idea."

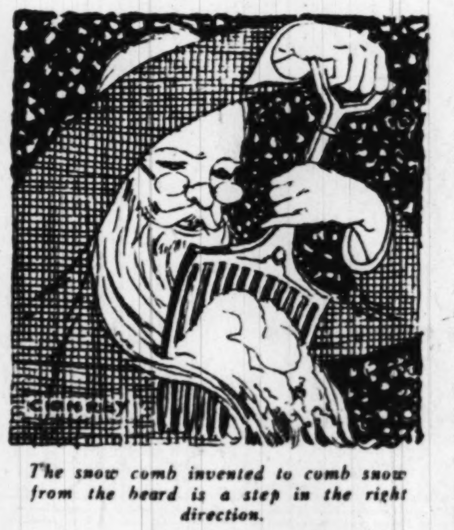
Well, aren't we all? Aren't we all subject to what the Great Emancipator, with his native insight, called Grant ideas?

Ladies, I am going to speak to you today for a few minutes on the subject of snow. Dr. Theobald was to have spoken to you on mud, but, as your chairman has doubtless explained, Dr. Theobald is in Mercy Hospital at the present time, incapacitated by mud poisoning. I'm sure that those of you who heard Dr. Theobald's lectures in this series on silt, loam, sleet and kelp will wish him the speediest of recoveries, and I can assure you that he is as anxious to be back with you as you are to have him. I may say here that I called on him only this morning and when I left him he was about to put the finishing touches on his next lecture before your honored society, the one on meringue.

HE DID me the honor, in fact, of allowing me to see a few pages of the new lecture, and I assure you, ladies, that you are in for a treat. Dr. Theobald has uncovered some data on meringue which I am sure will materially alter current views of science on that subject. My advice to you is, don't miss Dr. Theobald on meringue. And, by the way, a little note sent to his hospital would, I am sure, cheer the doctor greatly. Or some little delicacy, a mud pie, or some such tidbit. We all know how the doctor feels about mud; how he has risked his life time and again, braving the dreaded perils of mud poisoning, in order to wrest from that mysterious union of mud and water the secret of its power. If you have any old mud at home, send what you can spare of it to Dr. Theobald. Remember the address: Mercy Hospital.

Ladies, I propose to approach the question of snow from a new angle. I propose to speak frankly about it. I shall not mince words about snow.

Now, some of you may differ with me about snow. In any gathering of cultured women, such as this, there are bound to be honest differences of opinion. There are bound to be what I might call snow people and there are bound to be anti-snow people. Consequently, in order to be perfectly fair I am going to state my position frankly in advance. I am anti-snow, ladies. I say that now, so that any pro-snow ladies may seize this opportunity to leave the room, unless they choose to remain and give ear to my side of the case. I shall be glad to answer any questions after my talk is concluded.



The snow comb invented to comb snow from the beard is a step in the right direction.

I have looked at the problem from all angles and I fail to find any excuse for snow. I have tried to be fair; I have tried to be scientific, and I think I have, for such is my reputation. When I proved that sand has no place in spinach, even the most ardent sand fans had to admit that my conclusions were reached fairly and honestly. It was in the same spirit that I attempted to deal with the snow question.

WHAT good is it? If it falls straight, it gets down your neck. If a wind is blowing the snowflakes get in your ear and begin tickling you, or they become enmeshed in your beard. A man with a beard full of snow is not a pretty sight, nor a dignified one. You ladies will admit that; you who never have to struggle with that particular problem of snow in the beard. Oh, pardon, I see one lady over there who does. Congratulations, madam.

The snow comb invented by Hockaday to comb snow from the beard is a step in the right direction, but it is cumbersome and expensive. The poor man with a beard cannot always afford a snow comb; he has to wring the snow out of his whiskers.

Why not, then, be frank with ourselves and tackle the problem at its base? Yes, I mean abolish snow entirely. We can do it if we will all put our shoulders to the wheel.

I do not, however, wish anything I have said to you ladies today to be construed as a diatribe against slush. I know a great many people confuse snow with slush, but in my mind at least, and in the minds of all right-thinking people, the two issues—snow and slush—are not to be confused. I realize that slush is a concomitant, or, shall we say, a by-product of snow, but I do not admit its essential dependance on snow per se. I do think slush is essential to the development of this country, but I also think we can find a way of making slush without snow. Some youth, now hard at his studies in one or the other of our academic citadels, will solve the riddle eventually.

It is for us, the plodders, to hope—to hope not only for better slush but to hope that when our great Edison finds how to extract rubber from goldenrod he will at the same time discover a means of extracting hay fever from goldenrod. A-choo!

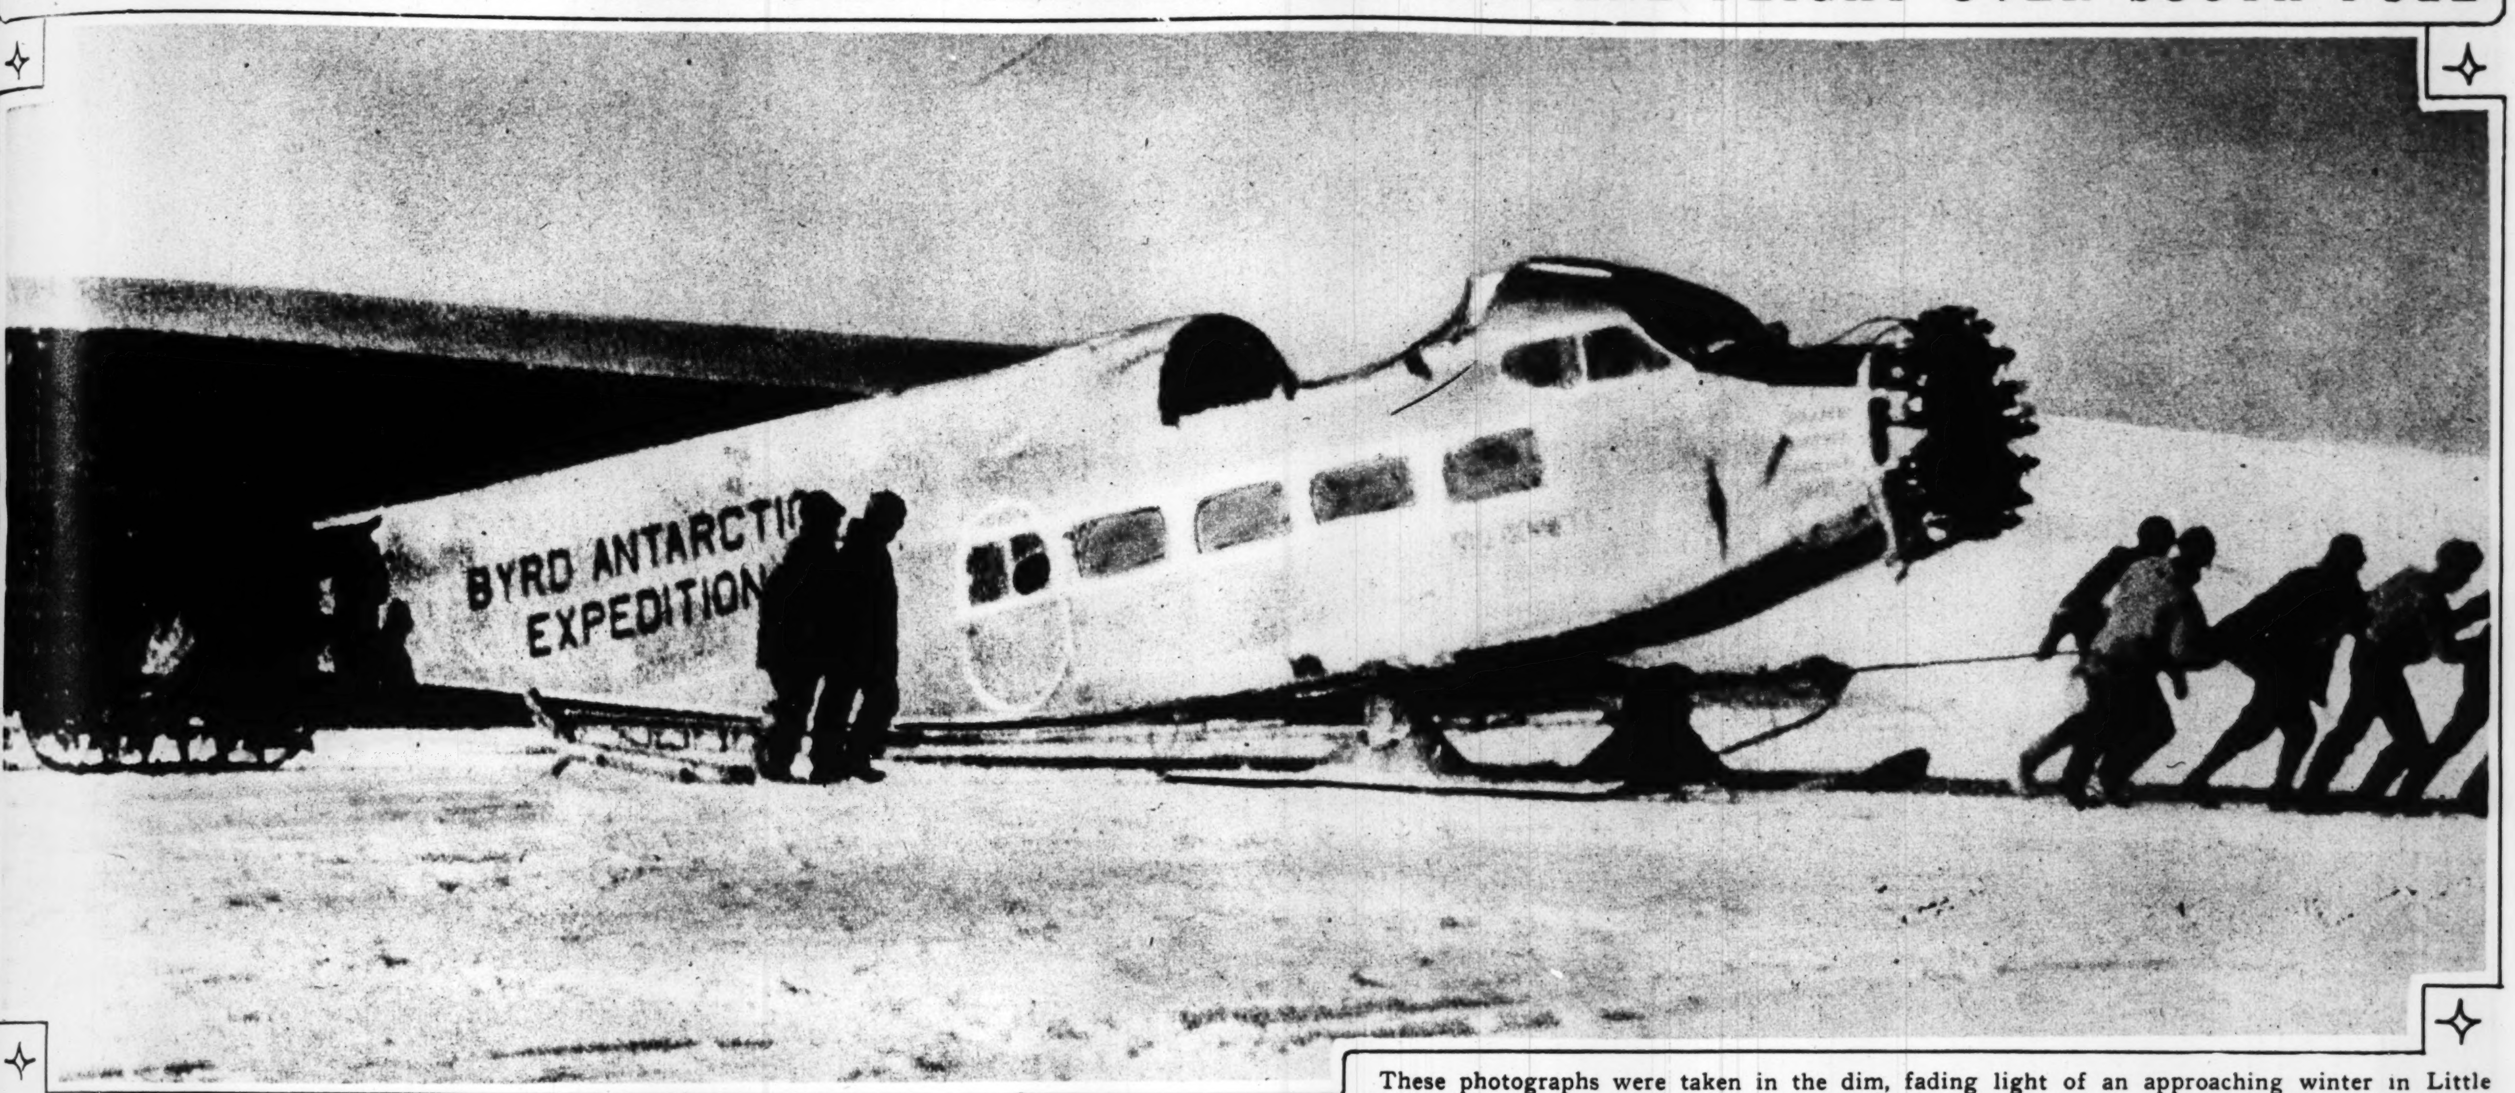
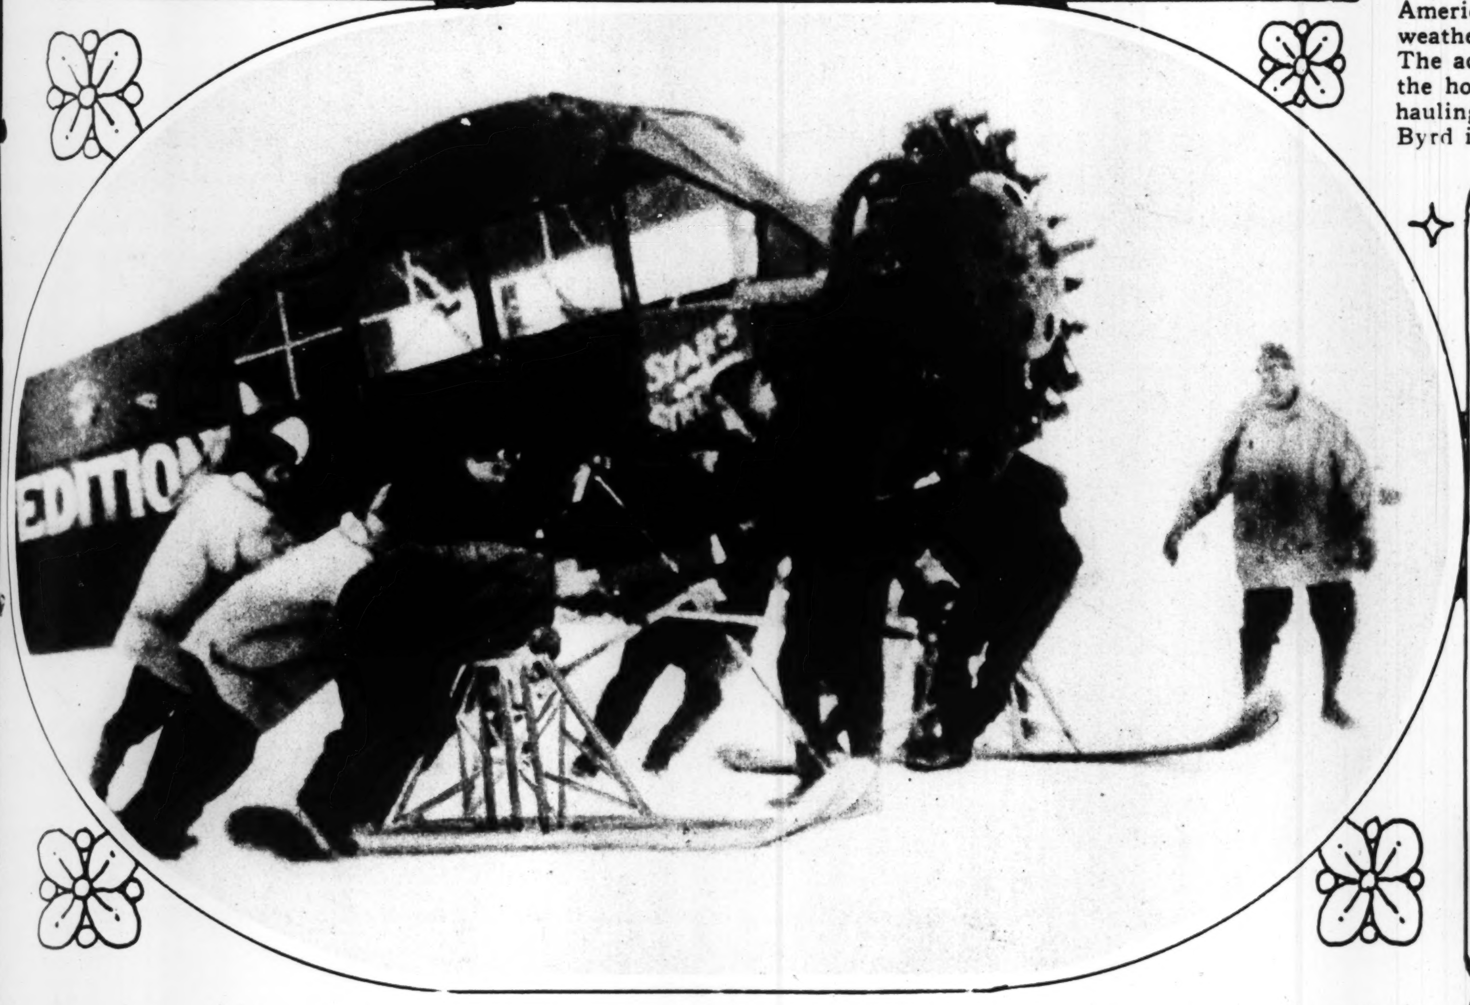
WITH COMMANDER BYRD AS HE PREPARED FOR AIRPLANE FLIGHT OVER SOUTH POLE



These photographs were taken in the dim, fading light of an approaching winter in Little America where Commander Byrd established his headquarters, and just before the sun and weather made the members of his expedition quit activities to await the coming of spring. The actual flight over the South Pole was made November 29, when the sun had been above the horizon but a short time after the long winter night. In the above photograph men are hauling on snow runners the fuselage of the Ford plane which was the craft actually used by Byrd in his now historic journey over and around the South Pole. —Copyright, 1929.



A heavy weight to push, even though the plane was mounted on ski-like shoes. The plane was on its way from the ice barrier to headquarters when this picture was taken. —Copyright, 1929.

DON'T BE DOWNHEARTED! THIS IS THE BEGINNING OF A BRAND NEW YEAR! WHILE THERE'S LIFE THERE'S HOPE, AND WHILE THERE'S HOPE THERE'S HAPPINESS!
I'VE BEEN POOR AND HUNGRY, TOO, BUT MY MAIN RESOLUTION HAS ALWAYS BEEN TO TRY HARDER AND DO BETTER EVERY YEAR!
I KNOW HOW YOU FEEL, BUT PLEASE ACCEPT THIS MONEY AS A LOAN UNTIL YOU GET BACK ON YOUR FEET! AND IF YOU NEVER PAY IT BACK WE'LL CALL IT SQUARE JUST THE SAME!
THE YEAR NINETEEN HUNDRED AND THIRTY STARTS TONIGHT! YOU CAN START WITH IT AND BRING IT TO A HAPPY ENDING!
I'M ON MY WAY TO THE FAIRMAY CLUB COSTUME DANCE AND THERE'S A TAXI! CAN I DROP YOU OFF ANYWHERE?
YES! I'LL TELL THE TAXI DRIVER WHERE TO LET ME OUT!
HE ACTS STRANGELY! I WONDER IF IT'S SAFE TO BE KIND TO STRANGERS!
Orange Cab
FAIRMAY
MAY I ASSIST YOU?
BUT THIS IS THE FAIRMAY CLUB WHERE I'M GOING!
Orange Cab Co
I KNOW IT! AND YOU'RE GOING WITH ME AS THE FEMININE GUEST OF HONOR! I WAS ONLY IN THE PARK FOR A LITTLE AIR!
WHY, IT'S CARLO PARMENTIER, THE FAMOUS ACTOR!
WHAT AN ORIGINAL IDEA FOR THE GUEST OF HONOR TO COME IN A TRAMP COSTUME!
MY NEW YEAR'S RESOLUTION IS: NEVER JUDGE IN HASTE—EXCEPT KINDLY! I'VE DONE MYSELF A FAVOR BY TRYING TO DO ONE FOR SOMEONE ELSE!

I GOT THE GAS, AND LOOK WHAT I FOUND A LUCKY HORSE SHOE!
THROW THAT SILLY THING AWAY! LET'S GET STARTED
I WON'T ARGUE, BUT A HORSE SHOE IS A RARE THING NOWADAYS, AND I CLAIM THEY BRING GOOD LUCK!
IT'S ALMOST ELEVEN, DO WE START TODAY OR NEXT MONTH?
BONG!
OH! BABY! THERE GOES A TIRE!
LOOK HOW DARK THE SKY IS!
LOOK WHAT CAUSED THE PUNCTURE!
IT'S STARTED TO RAIN! INTO THE HOUSE! HURRY!
